GOING OUT OF BUSINESS

Forepaugh & Sells Circus Which was Here this Summer.

The Forepaugh-Sells circus, which visited Peterborough this summer is going out of business, according to the following from the Brooklyn Eagle: 'After 30 years of campaigning, some of it stormy work and hard pulling, the Forepaugh-Sells Bros. circus will end its days within a few short weeks. A well authenticated report comes from Columbus, O., where the show has its home and winter quarters, that the continued serious illness of Peter Sells has completely discouraged his brother, Lewis Sells, and that the big shows will be brought to this city, bag and baggage, and sold here at auction on Nov. 19.

The shows, since their consolidation eight years ago, have been owned by four equal partners, Lewis Sells, Peter Sells, W. W. Cole and James A. Bailey, the last two men being heavy stockholders of the Barnum & Bailey shows. When the Barnum & Bailey shows started across the ocean, seven or eight years ago, Mr. Bailey was confronted with the necessity of leaving a circus in this country to help protect his rich pasture. The Forepaugh show was then knocking about the country in somewhat unseaworthy shape, and Mr. Cole and Mr. Bailey were able to get hold of it at a bargain. They found that the Sells Bros show, which had been steadily gaining ground since its organization, in 1872, would probably be a dangerous competitor to their Forepaugh property. They went to Columbus, saw Sells brothers and the outcome was the combination of their domestic show and the Columbus aggregation, making the Forepaugh-Sells Bros. circus a proposition of some magnitude. The show held the ground here successfully until the return of the B. & B. show, as the profession likes to call it. It divided territory with the Buffalo Bill Wild West, until Barnum's circus came back to its own and the Indians went over to London to charm the patrons of Earl's Court, Olympia. It has divided territory with the B. & B. people, taking the middle west last year, while the B. & B. kept pretty well to the east of the Appalachians. This year the two circuses reversed their positions, the Barnum show now being in Iowa and hurrying back to Chicago to close its season in the Coliseum, while Forepaugh's is in the middle west for the first time this year.

—The first sod of Oshawa's new [illegible] waterworks and sewerage system was turned Wednesday. Engineer Chipman will superintend the work. The water will be taken from Lake Ontario.

—On Saturday last Mr. Harry Robinson, of Bridgenorth, met with a severe accident while working at a threshing machine at Mr. Heard's farm, in Smith. While the threshing machine was being moved, the end of the machine jammed him against the door of the grainary, with the result that his collar bone was broken and his side was badly bruised.

DISEASES

Of course, in all communities there are some who decline to accept the truths of science, no matter how conclusively they are presented. They continue a miserable existence—rendered by pain and distressed in body and mind, rather than surrender their preconceived notions as to what ought to be and what is.

Such cases are hopeless, and I am quite willing to leave them to their own devices. People, however, who are sick and in pain, but who want to be made well and will accept cure when it is offered them, are the ones in whom I am interested, and to whom I say with all the sincerity and earnestness of which I am capable, I CAN CURE YOU.

My Rheumatism Cure has rid more people of this distressing disease than all other remedies combined. I will return the money to any sufferer whom it will not help.

Kidney disease in time causes out of ten deaths promptly to my Kidney Cure, and Bright's Disease is frequently prevented by its use.

If you are constipated or bilious or are troubled with headaches arising from a disordered stomach, take a few doses of my Pay-Fear Laxative Pills and see how quickly you will feel better.

Over the Border

By ... ROBERT BARR,

Copyright, 1903, by Frederick A. Stokes Co.

Author of "Jennie Baxter, Journalist," Etc.

A low wailing cry went sobbing across the silence, a cry that tugged at Strafford's heart when he heard it. What memory did it stir in his troubled mind? A reminiscence of something that had escaped him, crowded out by matters of more pressing moment.

"What is that?" he asked anxiously.

"It is nothing, my lord," answered Vollins, stepping between his master and the commotion among the women. "A lady has fainted, that is all. They are taking her out."

CHAPTER VII.

ONCE out in the open air, Frances Wentworth came again into control of herself, ashamed that for the moment her emotions had overwhelmed her. She had no desire to re-enter Westminster hall even if the doorkeepers would have permitted her, so she wandered slowly back to the inn which was her temporary home. In the evening John Vollins came to see her and offered money, which, she told him, she did not need. He gave some account of Pym's speech and said that the commons had not asked the lords for judgment, which was taken by Strafford and his friends as an indication that they knew the weakness of the evidence and feared the effect of his lordship's speech in his own defense.

The refusal to ask for judgment was regarded as a good omen, and for some days Frances felt the revival of hope, when she could forget the grim figure of John Pym, but the commons speedily disillusioned the Straffordian party. A bill of attainder was brought in, and they showed their determination to have the head of the unfortunate earl by act of parliament if not by legal procedure. At last the bill, passing its third reading, was sent up to the house of lords. There were many who said the lords would never assent to it; that the commons should have asked for judgment at the close of the trial; that if they could not hope to have the verdict as they wanted it then it was not likely the lords would allow themselves to be cosened by a side wind now. These predictions were quickly falsified. The lords gave their consent to the bill of attainder, and nothing stood between Strafford and the block but a scrawl from the king's pen.

The lords, it was said by those who defended them, had been coerced by the populace. The mob had gathered again and had clamored around the house of peers, crying for justice on Strafford. Now they transferred their loud threated exclamations to Whitehall, for success with the nobles foreshadowed success with the king.

It was late on Saturday night when John Vollins made his way to the inn at some jeopardy to himself, for the streets were wild with joy at the action of the lords. He told Frances that her father's life depended solely on the firmness of the king. If Charles signed on Monday, Strafford was to be led to the block on Wednesday. Vollins was in deep gloom over the prospect. The earl, he said, had some time previously written to the king, absolving him from all his promises, offering his life freely if the taking of it would advantage his majesty in dealing with his obstreperous subjects.

"But the king is trebly perjured if he signs. He cannot sign," cried Frances. Vollins shook his head.

"If all the lords in England are held in terror by the people's clamor, and so let the greatest of their number slip through their fingers to the ax, how can one weak man be expected to withstand the concentration of the popular will brought against him? 'Tis blinded folly to look for it."

"But the people dare not coerce a king."

"Dare they not? Go down to Whitehall and you will find them doing it. This very day they have all but stormed the palace."

"I will see the king, throw myself at his feet and implore him to keep his word. I was present when he bade my father take this fateful journey to London and when he promised full protection. A king's word should stand against the world, for he is the source of truth and honor in a nation."

"You cannot get to see him. Every entrance to the palace is strongly guarded. Highly placed friends of my lord, friends when all others had fallen away from him, have sought admission to the royal presence in vain. He has refused to see the Earl of Bristol, whose son, Lord Digby, spoke out against the conclusiveness of the evidence, and his majesty has let it be spread abroad that he gives no approval of Lord Digby's plain words, and so the people cry 'God save the king!' and revile Lord Digby.

The girl stood aghast at this intelligence, remembering the scene at the trial, when royalty in the person of Charles Stuart, and the people in the person of John Pym, opposed their wills to each other. Then royalty had faded from the sight of men, and the strong champion of the people held his ground alone and triumphant. "Trust in God and the king," wrote the prisoner. What a conjunction! Almighty power, and a bending reed! "Nevertheless, I will see the king," she said.

On Sunday the immensity of the swaying crowd, shouting and moving like a slow resistless flood through the streets, daunted her. There was no employment that day to keep any one within doors, and it seemed as if that labyrinth of human warrens called London had emptied itself into the narrow thoroughfares. She hesitated like a timid swimmer on the brink of a raging torrent, yet if she was to win access to the king she must trust herself to the current, which had this advantage—it set toward the direction in which she wished to go.

If the streets could be compared to sluggish streams, the broad avenue or square of Whitehall might be likened to the lake into which they emptied. It was a packed mass of humanity, surging to and fro, as if influenced by mysterious tides, but making no progress. Way through it in any given direction might well seem an impossibility, but an alert atom, by constantly watching opportunity, could edge here and there, through chance openings, and, by a constant devotion to a given direction, ultimately attain any chosen point.

Thus the girl, buffeted about, often well nigh exhausted and breathless, came by the entrance to the palace that stood next the banqueting house. The gates, however, were tightly closed and guarded on the outside by a double row of soldiery who stood the hustling of the mob with great good humor, being evidently cautioned not to exasperate the populace by any hostile act. The crowd itself seemed good natured enough, although constant fighting took place here and there along its choking surface, but the great bulk of those present appeared to be out on a larking holiday, although they all riotously lost breath to the unceasing roar, calling for justice on Strafford. Occasionally there were shouts for the king and demands that he should speak to them, but the windows of Whitehall palace were blank and gave no sign of human occupancy.

"To the gates!" went up a shout. "We will make the king hear." And a great human wave, overwhelming the soldiers, struck against the shuddering portal. The mere pressure of the multitude was deadly and irresistible. There were shrieks and appeals for forbearance, but the unreasoning mass behind pressed on, unheeding, cheering and shoving. A crash of rending timbers and the gates flew inward. Then the mob, as if frightened at what it had done, paused, giving the soldiers time to collect themselves and help the wounded. There was as yet no malice in the crush; it was more like a conglomeration of irresponsible children bent on mischief of any kind, but temporarily scared at the breaking of something.

This fact seemed to be recognised by a man in authority who came through the gate and with some difficulty secured a precarious footing on one of the stone pillars which stood in a row between the pathway and the road, thus giving him a position which towered over the heads of the assemblage. He held up a hand for a hearing, and the crowd cheered him, not in the least knowing who he was or why he was there. Comparative silence followed the cheer, and the nobleman spoke.

"My good people," he said, "there is little use in the breaking of gates that the king may hear you, for the king has heard and is taking the requests of his faithful subjects into his august consideration."

"Where is the king?" demanded an auditor.

"His majesty is in the banqueting house, where, as you know, he is in touch with his people. 'Tis a prayerful subject he has to meditate on, and I beg of you not to disturb his devotion by further"—

"Is the queen at her devotions too? In that hall she began masked revels on a Sunday, and six good men were done to death for protesting against the desecration, each life more valuable than the wicked earl's. Let the king say that he will sign, and we will disperse!"

These and other cries more or less to the purpose baffled the orator, and the air quivered with denunciations of Strafford. The man on the stone post had cast his eyes behind him several times, as if to see what progress was being made with the readjustment of the gate, and from this his hearers quickly divined that he was but deluding them to gain time, which was more than likely his purpose, so the shout went up to move through the breach and surround the hall. Meanwhile reenforcements had been summoned from within, and a hand to hand fight ensued with the encroachers.

Frances, panting and nigh worn out in the struggle, nevertheless saw her opportunity. There were few women in the throng and such as came near them the soldiers sought to protect. She attempted appeal to the officer, but that harassed dignitary could harken to none and thrust her rudely but effectually through the opening, saying:

"You will find egress at one of the other gates. Take care of yourself. I cannot help you."

Breathing a sigh of thankfulness, she cowered and ran along the end of the banqueting hall, turned at the corner, then down the side, entering an archway that let her into a passage. She knew that she must turn to her right, but where after that she had not the slightest notion. The tumult at the gate was so frightful that she expected every moment to hear the victorious assaulters at her heels. Her joy at finding herself thus unexpectedly within the precincts of the palace, unimpeded, caused her to overlook the fact that this was scarcely a propitious moment in which to implore the king to disregard the lusty giant rudely beating at his doors. A frightened waiting maid came hurrying along the corridor, and to her she directed inquiry regarding the entrance to the banqueting hall.

"Turn to the right and up the stair."

"Take me there, I beg of you."

"I cannot. I bear a message."

"But I bear a message to the king, so yours must wait."

At this the maid turned and conducted her to the door of the hall, saying to the man at arms:

"This lady has a message for his majesty."

The first thing that struck her on entering the great painted chamber was that the nobleman on the stone outside had not spoken the truth when he said the king heard the demands of his people. A growl as of an angry lion penetrated the closed windows, but the words spoken were not to be distinguished.

The king was sitting at a massive table, his head in his hands. Behind him were grouped a number of bishops in their robes, and it certainly seemed that his majesty was engaged in devotional exercises, as had been stated by the orator. But if this were the case they were of a strangely mixed order, for behind the lady who was talking volubly to the king stood two Capuchin monks with folded arms. Excepting the bishops none of the English nobility were present, but several Frenchmen, among whom she recognized De Courcy, held aloof from the cluster at the table, so the girl quite correctly surmised that the lady bearing the whole burden of the conversation was no other than the queen herself, and that these foreigners were members of her train.

Her majesty spoke sometimes in French, sometimes in English, the latter with broken accent, and her eloquence was rather puzzling to follow, for the flow of her conversation was of extreme rapidity. Palpably she supposed herself talking in English, but whenever she came to a difficulty in the choice of a word she made no attempt to surmount it by any effort of thought, but swam swiftly round it on the easy current of her native tongue. Translated, her discourse ran thus:

"These good men have made it perfectly plain; for, as they say—and who shall question the dictum of the church in such matters—you have two consciences, the conscience of the prince and the conscience of the man; and where the consciences come into conflict that of the prince must of necessity rule, as is the axiom in all civilized courts. Is it right that you, a king, should jeopardize yourself in a useless effort to save one condemned by his peers, because your private conscience as a man urges you to keep a promise which he himself has relieved you from, holding you guiltless before God and the nations, and further advised by these good men, lords of their church, that such action would not make toward peace of the realm. It is not a subject to be hesitated upon for a moment, the good of the ruler being paramount always"—

"Oh, my lord, the king, listen not to such sophistry, be it from the lips of priest or woman! The given word is the man, and he stands or falls by it. If the foresworn peasant be a cringing craven, ten thousand times worse is the perjured prince. You pledged your faith to Lord Strafford, and now in his just heaven God demands the fulfillment of your word."

The disheveled girl had flung herself at the feet of the frightened monarch, who started back, gazing wildly about him, shaking as one struck with palsy, so startling and unexpected had been the interruption. Red anger flushed the face of the no less amazed queen, speechless with indignation at the words and the tone of them addressed to her exalted husband. The sage bishops were astounded at the lack of diplomacy on the part of the petitioner who had thus rudely thrown herself counter to the expressed wishes of the highest lady in the land, but Frances, with an instant intuition more subtle than theirs, saw that the queen was an enemy not to be cajoled by deference or flattery, so she determined that the war between them should be open and aboveboard.

The king had reason for agitation greater than the surprise that had made breathing statues of those about him. The accents that disturbed him were the accents of Strafford himself, softened as they were by the lips that uttered them. The boldness of the address was Strafford's, and until he saw that a woman knelt before him it almost seemed that the dominant spirit of the prisoner had burst the bonds of the Tower and sped hither to reproach him for meditated treachery.

"Why is Lord Strafford in a dungeon today? Because, trusting your word, he obeyed your command at Hampton. Why was he put on trial? Because faithfully he carried out his king's behests. Why was he condemned to death? Because he stood true to the king. If he deserve death, then so do you, for you are the master and he the servant. Has God stricken you and your counselors with blindness that you cannot see in the destruction of Strafford the throwing away of the shield which guards your breast, leaving you naked to your enemies? Surrender bastion, and the castle falls."

"Heavens!" cried the quivering queen. "What country of the mad is this, where the meanest of subjects may so address a monarch! Strip the insolent from her knave and scourge her rebellious flesh to the kennel whence she comes."

"No, no!" gasped Charles, staggering to his feet and sweeping with a gesture of his hand the documents which lay before him on the table, so that they fluttered to the floor. "She speaks the truth; happy is the prince who hears it and heeds it. I have passed my word to Strafford, and it shall be kept. I will not sign—no, though the heavens fall. Rise, my girl! You have my promise—the promise of a Stuart—and it shall be fulfilled."

Charles graciously assisted the girl to her feet with the same courtesy he would have shown to the first lady of the court.

The rage of the queen now passed all bounds of restraint.

"And this before me, your wife! You weigh the word of this bedraggled creature of the streets above that of the royal house of France and queen of this turbulent realm. You deserve to be hooted by your loathsome mob. Who is this woman?"

De Courcy whispered a word into her ear.

"What! The daughter of that profligate Strafford! To what a pass this Christian court has come!"

"'Tis true, 'tis true," murmured Charles, visibly quailing before the increasing wrath of his wife, adding in piteous appeal, "Have I not enough to bear without the quarreling of women?"

"The quarreling of women! Dare you couple me in the same breath with such as she? Is there none in my train to whip forth this impudent wench into the wretched rabble that has cast her into our presence. The quarreling of women! A slattern that wishes to divert, from her reputed father's head to yours, the anger of the gutter. Listen to it, my lord. Listen to it."

"NO, NO!" GASPED CHARLES.

AN ELECTION TRICK.

Canon J. George Tétley tells the following story of the late Justice Denman, who in 1865 ran for election at Tiverton, in England. He was advertised to address the electors on a certain morning. In order to fulfill his engagement it was necessary for him to leave by the 9:15 express. He had taken the precaution of ordering a cab overnight and was quietly eating an early breakfast when attention was called to two or three men who seemed to be hanging about in the neighborhood of his house. He thought little, however, of the matter, but presently sent his servant to put his luggage on the cab, which was due to arrive. The cab approached the door, but before the portmanteau could be located one of the mysterious strangers jumped in and was driven rapidly away.

And when this happened a second time it became evident that something very definite was intended. So Mr. Denman consulted his watch, and, directing his luggage to be sent after him, he buttoned his coat and, calling to his aid all his old Cambridge training, took a bee line for the station. He met not one empty cab till too near the terminus to be of any service to him. He dashed through the "booking office" on to the platform, seized the handle of a carriage door as the train was actually starting and flung himself into a compartment.

On arriving at Tiverton he found his committee in a state of extreme anxiety which gave place to astonishment and relief on his appearance, for the walls of the town were covered with placards warning the Liberal electors that their candidate would not keep his engagement to address them.

Virtues of the Swine.

I did not meet a tramp, encounter a beggar or a person the least intoxicated during my stay in Switzerland. Of how few countries in Europe or America can this be truthfully said. There may be a small percentage of drunkenness, but if it exists it is kept out of sight. A thriftier, cleaner, more wholesome body of people, who carefully observe sanitary laws in their homes, I have never met in my various travels. They are as tidy and neat as the housewives of Holland or the Pennsylvania Quakers. No wonder Switzerland is a prosperous country. It owes much of its good fortune to the practical intelligence of its law abiding citizens.—London Caterer.

Hand Outs.

Dealer—Here is a cigar that is all right for the money. We sell it seven for a quarter.

Customer—Well, that is a good many.

"Yes, but you don't have to smoke them, you know."

"Oh, I didn't think of that! You may give me a quarter's worth. They'll be handy to treat my friends with."

Too Sensible To Give Up.

"Will you promise," she anxiously asked, "not to do anything desperate if I say it can never be?"

"Yes," he replied. "I think a man's a fool who goes to the bad because a girl refuses to love him."

"Then I will be yours."

Profitable.

"Did you feel cheap when you found out that the count your daughter wanted to marry was an impostor?"

"Cheap? I should say not! It was a half million clear profit to me."—Exchange.

He Gave It Up.

Mrs. Henpeck—I've often wondered what first attracted you to me. What was it about me that made you want to marry me? Henpeck—I give it up. I never was good at riddles.

Howard D. Egville, Honorary Secretary of the Imperial Federation Defence Committee, writes to The Times saying the first momentous step towards an organized and permanently united Empire will be realised when Canadians grasp the fact that the maintenance of a powerful fleet is their greatest obligation in common with every British citizen.

SCIENTISTS AT NIAGARA FALLS.

Deplore Destruction of Scenic Beauty For Utilitarian Purposes.

Niagara Falls, N. Y., Sept. 17.—The International Geographic Congress met here yesterday. Commander Robert Peary of the United States navy called the delegates to order and introduced the principal speaker, Prof. Grove Karl Gilbert, of Brooklyn. Prof. Gilbert spoke on the formation of Niagara Falls and gorge. He deprecated the use of the water power of Niagara for utilitarian purposes, and expressed the hope that the natural beauty of the great cataract would ever be saved. Prof. Gilbert's address was technical, but many things he said were of general interest. The American falls, he said, have receded much more slowly because there is no great depth of water at the base of the falls. A picture taken of the Horseshoe Fall in 1882 was shown. There has been a remarkable recession in 25 years. At the end of the glacial period, he said, the land was tilted as a result of the retreat of the ice. If this tilting continues Lake Erie will in the course of time find another outlet and Niagara River will be dry. This change will be probably in 3,500 years. The Congress meets every five years. The scientists left for Chicago last night, where another meeting will be held.

THIBETANS AND ENGLISH.

Tales of the Meetings With the Secluative Mountaineers.

London, Sept. 17.—A despatch from Lhassa says that the British on Sept. 8 released their seventy-eight Thibetan prisoners and presented to each five rupees. This caused the Thibetans the utmost gratification and they indulged in the oddest gesticulations of joy, including the putting out of their tongues. The Thibetans released the prisoners, whom they had thrown into jail for assisting the British. Some had been incarcerated since 1883. One old, tottering man was chained in a dungeon for twenty years. He had gone blind and he refused to believe that he was free. He thought that he was to undergo torture again. The British discovered that a secret tribunal resembling the Spanish Inquisition, exists in Lhassa, and that political offenders are tortured in the same manner as prevailed in mediaeval times in Europe.

PROVIDING FOR INSANE

INVESTIGATION TO BE MADE BY GOVERNMENT OFFICERS.

The presentments of Grand Juries, which for years past have contained recommendations that some provision be made by the Government, whereby persons of unsound mind should not be placed in the common goals, along with criminals, will be deprived of further recital of sad circumstances, if the following report from Toronto is significant of anything:

"Dr. Russell, Medical Superintendent of the Asylum for the Insane, Hamilton, and Dr. Beemer, medical superintendent of the Mimico Asylum, have been appointed by the Provincial Secretary to visit the jails of the Province, wherein it is stated persons of unsound mind who should be committed to an asylum for the insane, or the Asylum for Idiots, Orillia, are confined, and to report to the department their conclusions and recommendations. It is alleged that there are improperly confined in the jails of the Province about sixty lunatics or idiots, but there is a doubt as to the eligibility of these unfortunates to be confined in an asylum. Some of them are reported to be merely senile, and more fitted to be cared for in a house of refuge. The department will, however, have removed immediately from each jail those who are eligible for admission to some public institution. Since the Penetanguishene Asylum has been opened there is now ample accommodation for the insane, and the arrangements recently completed at Orillia will enable the management to admit all those suitable for that institution. It is desired that the jails shall be immediately relieved of those who are fit subjects for treatment in one of the public institutions.

REVIEW OF THE MARKETS

The following review of to-day's market was received by Messrs. W. F. Daver & Co.: 'phone 416:—

New York, N.Y. Sept. 16.—Market during first hour was fairly active, after which it quieted down, traders apparently awaiting publication of Bank Statement. An opening activity centered in a small group, but tone was generally cheerful. Traders were at least conservative, expecting a poor bank statement, and attaching a great deal of importance to heavy realizing yesterday, in face of special strength. U.S. steel, especially common, was strong. London is pretty well cleared out of its holdings of both stocks, selling heavy line in past week. Traders think Morgan interest is still behind advance. Reading strong on very satisfactory showing made in annual report, probably the strongest feature technically. It is the theory that the reaction from 70 to 65 shook out some weak bulls who had been pyramiding. While it is understood that R. R. Managers are preparing to handle large tonnage the coming year there is no indication at present that there will be any large purchases of locomotives in the near future. This view, held by those who should know the drift of conditions in connection with locomotive industry, when business is being placed shows but a narrow margin of profits, and it is said small profits, is such that competition will become less keen as orders come nearer to the level of capacity of all locomotive plants. Movement in leather common excited a certain amount of languid interest, although some traders said that it is usually stock to advance after a boom. Movement was very much manipulated but leather trade authorities say business is really good, although they confine their interest to preferred stock. Southern By. was heavy, possibly on fact that there was no market in London. It seems fairly clear that there has been some distribution of stock and perhaps closing of London market made it necessary to sell some here. Bank statement was very unfavorable. Room element tried to rally market after its publication, but met too much stock and were compelled to reverse their position. Market declined from one-half to a full point on the active issues. Closing was easy.

Chicago, Ill., Sept. 16—Still considerable pressure on wheat; sentiment rather more bearish, but local crowd still acting on theory that wheat should be bought on breaks. We are inclined to think that the selling pressure will increase when the bears start to reach stops, as there is a great deal of wheat unliquidated. Fine weather may made week corn opening, but offerings appear to be well taken care of on this break. Ther map showed favorable conditions in the corn belt and good weather in N.W. It was clear everywhere except in Manitoba and N. D.; slightly lower temperature in Manitoba and general light rains. Higher temperature south of Canada line. In extreme north and N. W. generally cloudy and cooler. Believe any further breaks from present price; it is a buy.

THE SHORTAGE OF WHEAT

THE DISEASE IN AMERICAN CROPS CAUSES ADVANCED PRICES.

Wheat has made still futher advance in price, and, with it, flour. Partially, no doubt, this is due to the damage already caused by rust and frost to the growing crop, though probably these factors will be found eventually not to have been so detrimental as have been endeavored to show; that is, unless the end of the harvesting period in the West be attended with more favorable conditions than those which have made themselves felt so far. A more powerful cause, however, for the growing strength of the market is the shortage of wheat in the United States. We see that the United States Government's final estimate of the wheat crop in that country indicates a yield of about 540,000,000 bushels, the smallest crop since 1900, and 100,000,000 less than last year's. As the home consumption is figured at something like 480,000,000 bushels, the balance available for export is a mere bagatelle, and, indeed, the high price at which wheat is held, $1.10 in New York, practically precludes, at any rate for the moment, any chance for an export at all. One peculiar feature of the condition of the market across the border, and one which, if it be true, is of great significance, is the reported offer to land Russian wheat at Atlantic ports of the United States at a smaller price than that at which that grain is now held at the latter.

The milling interests are attracting to themselves just now a large share of public attention in three countries, Canada, Great Britain and the United States. In Britain, millers, find themselves confronted by the fact that importations of flour into the United Kingdom during the last year or two reached a point higher than ever known. From the United States it looks as if the flour exports will become less and less, while the proposal by Mr. Chamberlain to place a duty upon all flour entering the United Kingdom is exercising the minds not only of millers in the States, but in the Dominion as well.

The American flour milling industry, too, is in a peculiar, not to say, unenviable, position, from the way in which the tariff works out. For the making of certain grades of flour the miller finds it absolutely necessary that he should have easy access to Manitoba No. 1 hard wheat. Yet he has to pay a duty on this of 25 cents per bushel, and of 20 per cent. ad valorem on flour. The millers of Minneapolis and other flour centres are using their energies in an attempt to obtain amendments to the drawback clauses which indemnify them for a large proportion of the amount they may have paid out in duty on wheat which they afterwards export. But the provisions making this rebate apply to the only identical wheat which has been actually imported and actually exported in the form of flour and make the law very awkward in practice. And it is pointed out by good authorities that even in a high protectionist country like the United States a high tariff on such an article as agricultural produce, of which a large surplus is usually raised for export, whereupon it comes into competition with the surplus from a country against which such tariff is raised, is altogether beside the mark. It is likely to be at such points as these that the thin end of the wedge in the form of reciprocity will ultimately make its entrance.

One thing seems sure, and that is that wheat (with its products), which in the world's eye is Canada's most prominent staple, is to be a very high-priced and valuable commodity for some time to come, and this is a fact which is bound to mean much for the development of the Dominion at this juncture in her history.—Monetary Times.

700 Strike On the C.P.R.

Winnipeg, Sept. 17.—The Canadian Pacific boilermakers and those between Fort William and Laggan, in all some 700 men, quit work yesterday. This action was the result of their demands for an increase in wages, which were communicated on Wednesday to the C.P.R., the executive not having been answered. Negotiations are under way which may result in the men returning to work to-day. A committee of the men were in conference with the officials here yesterday afternoon.

Canadian Northern Ry. Gains.

Toronto, Sept. 17. — Canadian Northern Railway gross earnings for week ending Sept. 14 were $63,400, and from July 1 to date are $732,600; as compared for the corresponding period last year, with $57,100, and $620,900, respectively, showing increases of $6,300 and $111,700.

COST OF CONCRETE WALLS

Some Interesting Facts With Regard to this Material.

The Central Railroad, of New Jersey has built car shops at Elizabethport, N.J., and the most noticeable feature in the construction of these buildings was the liberal use of concrete, with but one exception all the walls being of that material. From an article in a recent issue of the Railroad Gazette on this plant we take the following items in regard to the proportion of the concrete and the cost per cubic yard.

The concrete used in this work was in some cases made with an aggregate of engines' cinders, in general with the proportion of one part of cement, three of Edison sand and six of cinders. Gravel aggregate was also used, composed of gravel as it came from the bank, mixed with sand and unscreened. About one per cent was in cobble-stones two inches diameter, and over the balance all sizes of gravel and sand to the smallest. When this was employed it was mixed with cement only, the amount of cement used being determined by experiment. In all cases the concrete was mixed very wet, so that no ramming was required. After being deposited it was pulled with a light wooden rammer to secure an even distribution. No attention was paid to the weather, concrete being mixed and deposited in any weather in which the men could work.

When the temperature dropped below 25 degrees, all water used was brought nearly to the boiling point and salted; using one pound of salt for eighteen gallons of water. When the work stopped at night it was covered with canvas between the forms and sprinkled with salt. The forms for the work below ground were of rough hemlock, above ground of yellow pine, painted with soft soap, which gave a smooth surface. No provision was made for expansion and contraction from temperature changes with cinder concrete. This is good practice, but in a gravel concrete a joint should be made about once in 150 feet. Some of the concrete was mixed by hand, some of it in mixing machines. Wherever the walls were less than eighteen inches thick it was found that hand mixing was more economical, the labor cost for mixing and depositing the concrete being frequently as low as 50 cents per cubic yard. Where the machines were used the cost of mixing was reduced; but the cost of handling and depositing was so much increased as to balance it. In general, it may be said for building work that no machine mixer is economical that can not be transported as easily as a wheelbarrow.—National Builder.

WHAT KILTIES ARE DOING

Now on a Trip to England, to Represent Canadian Musical Culture

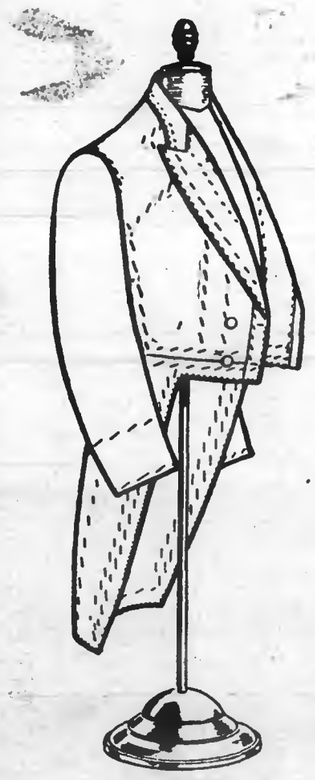
All Canadians, who have the welfare of their country at heart, may congratulate themselves that the musical culture of Canada is to be represented during the next six months in England, by that admirable military Band, the Kilties, of Belleville. The Kilties bade "au revoir" to their native land last Saturday, when they sailed from Montreal in the steamship "Southwark" for Liverpool, to fill a long series of engagements in the leading cities of England, Scotland, Ireland and Wales.

The Kilties have been doing much during the last four years to attract attention to Canada, for they have shown the people of the United States (and they have given concerts in every American city of any importance) that Canada can send forth into the world the very best of musicians. The Band has been growing stronger and finer with each new year, until now it stands in the front rank of the world's great musical organizations. There are fifty expert instrumentalists in the Band, under the skilful conductorship of William F. Robinson, and they present a strikingly picturesque appearance in their kilts and plaids. They play music that appeals to all classes, the musical students and the general public, and their concerts are always full of variety. Besides the regular musical programmes, special features are presented at the Kilties' concerts, such as the Clan Johnstone Troupe of Highland dancers, a Male Choir of 16 trained voices, and J. Coates Lockhart, the sweet voiced Canadian tenor soloist.

This Band, which has for so many years been the pride of Belleville, was given a send-off in that city last last Friday that warmed the hearts of the musicians and sent them on their voyage rejoicing. Two farewell concerts were given, and there was speech-making, presentations of medals as souvenirs, and other demonstrations to show the Kilties how well they are thought of. At Montreal, too, when the Band embarked on the steamer, there was a crowd of well-wishers at the pier to wave them affectionate adieus.

The tour of the Kilties throughout Great Britain seems bound to be very successful. The list of Patrons and Patronesses of the Band in England will include such celebrated names as H.R.H. Princess Louise and the Duke of Argyll, the Earl and Countess of Aberdeen, Lord Strathcona, Sir Gilbert Parker, (himself a native of Belleville), and the Rt. Rev. William Cyprian Pinkham (Bishop of Calgary). When the Band returns to these shores next spring it will make a complete tour of Canada, giving concerts in all of the principal cities and towns. And Canada will be glad to give "The Kilties" a royal welcome upon their home-coming.

WORKING OUT OUR IDEAL



To tailor suits better than the best custom tailor.

To make each suit fit better, to have more careful interior workmanship, to give each suit an individual expression—the certain snap that every well-tailored garment carries—to so tailor that each suit holds its shape permanently, that was our purpose in '98.

That is our purpose in '04, but it's easier now—ever so much easier! and yet our different forepersons have mostly been with us since '98!

From the start it has been a steady process of education for us all!

By rigid adherence to our ideals—by rejecting the "not-quite-so-good" and exacting the "best" have we attained our purpose.

Because the demand for our carefully hand-tailored suits has increased—because we have established new selling branches just as we have here—our business has warranted many things.

We have been able to assemble skilled, clever tailors—men and women who are cunning and skilful with their fingers, who delight in their work—who know how to mould cloth with the needle—how to sew so as to render the cloth shape retaining. These skilful tailors we have grouped in units—each expert on some one suit part—as a part is finished it is carefully scrutinized for flaws and then quickly passed to the next unit.

The one right we have to open a selling branch here is the fact that we can tailor suits better than the best custom tailor.

The growth from two selling branches in Canada in '98 to thirty in '04 is one indication that we possess that right—you will see the only other in the suits themselves.

We will be very proud to show you these suits. Please don't consider it obligatory to make a purchase.

If you do so and are at all dissatisfied we refund your money.

JAPANESE SHELLING MUKDEN

Vigorous Work Preparatory to General Attack.

THE RUSSIANS ARE RETIRING

London, Sept. 19.—It is asserted in a despatch from Tokio to The Express that the Japanese are vigorously shelling the Russian positions at Mukden, preparatory to a general advance, and endeavoring by a wide turning movement to cut off Gen. Kuropatkin's retreat. The Japanese armies, the despatch adds, are disposed in the same relative positions as in the fighting before Liaoyang.

Almost Continual Skirmishing.

Mukden, Sept. 19.—The Japanese are reported to be advancing on both flanks from the east, the southeast and the southwest. The Russian outposts are closely engaged twenty miles southeast of Mukden. Almost continual skirmishing is going on.

From Kuroki.

London, Sept. 19.—A despatch from General Kuroki's headquarters, via Fusan, states that the Japanese front north of Liaoyang is now almost half way to Mukden, and is confronting Kuropatkin's outposts.

Russians Are Retiring.

Tokio, Sept. 19.—The Russians are retiring upon Harbin. Only two divisions, with the complement of cavalry, are now south of the Hun River. A battle is expected at Shilliho.

Oyama Reports Loss.

Tokio, Sept. 19.—Marquis Oyama, commander-in-chief of the Japanese forces in the field, telegraphed yesterday morning that General Oku had reported having captured 13 prisoners at the battle of Liaoyang. He also gave a detailed list of the Russian stores which Gen. Oku captured as follows: Thirty horses, two thousand two hundred and eighty-eight rifles, one hundred and seventy-six ammunition wagons, five thousand eight hundred and ninety-two rounds of artillery, six hundred and fifty-nine thousand nine hundred and thirty small arm cartridge. Great quantities of timber, flour, rice, forage, engineering implements, clothing and accoutrements.

Russians Make Chinese Soldiers

Tokio, Sept. 19.—It is reported that the Russians compel the Chinese in Siberia to cut their queues and enlist in the army at the front. Disobedience is punished with instant confiscation of property and death.

Liaoyang Defeat Costly.

Paris, Sept. 19.—A despatch to The Journal from St. Petersburg states that the Russian losses at Liaoyang from Aug. 26 to Sept. 8 were two generals, 21,800 men and 133 guns. The value of the material lost, including the fortifications, is $30,000,000.

Russian Transport Ashore.

London, Sept. 19.—A news agency despatch from Tokio says that a Russian transport carrying arms and ammunition from Shanghai to Vladivostock has stranded on Ituru Island. The prospects for floating her are small. Fifteen of her crew of Americans and Germans have landed.

Gen. Stoessel Expects Defeat.

Che Foo, Sept. 19.—According to Lieut. Prince Radiziwil of the Russian army, who reached here Saturday night from Port Arthur, bearing despatches from Lieut.-Gen. Stoessel, the commander-in-chief of the forces of the Russian stronghold, to Gen. Kuropatkin, the temper of the belligerents at Port Arthur has reached an absolutely merciless stage. Prince Radiziwil declares that the men of both armies are absolutely venomous in their antagonism. Lieut.-Gen. Stoessel has addressed his garrison, saying that if the Japanese soldiers entered the fortress it undoubtedly will be impossible for their officers to control them and prevent a massacre. For this reason Lieut.-General Stoessel is making no objection to civilians leaving Port Arthur. In consequence of the fact that flags of truce are ignored, numbers of dead Japanese who have been lying on the slopes of the hills of the northeast defences for weeks past are still unburied and the stench in Port Arthur from decomposing bodies is almost unendurable.

In the course of the assaults which took place in the four last days of August two companies of Japanese soldiers, according to Prince Radiziwil found themselves at the mercy of the Russians and hoisted a white flag. To this, however, the Russians paid no attention, and continued to fire volleys rapidly into the helpless ranks of the Japanese. In the meantime Japanese troops in the rear of the company that had raised the white flag saw what their comrades had done and expressed their disapproval of the surrender by firing into their rear. As a result of this, 600 men were annihilated.

Accidents Near Kingston.

Kingston, Sept. 19.—Friday afternoon two lads were in a boat at Collins Lake on a duck-hunting expedition. One drew a gun towards him and it went off. The bullet pierced the body of William Marshe through the groin. He is in the hospital here in a dangerous state. His father was killed by the explosion of a big gun at Fort Henry some years ago.

A daughter of A. Rissenthal of Denbigh, in Addington, got her hand badly injured by a shot while walking on the public road. Dr. Aylesworth had to amputate part of two fingers, and recommended her being taken to Kingston General Hospital for treatment. Who fired the shot, and how the accident occurred is as yet a mystery.

Kept Poor by Doctor's Bills.

Many a family is kept poor by doctors' bills when just as good and oftentimes better results could be obtained by the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, which sell at 25 cents a box of twenty-five doses. As one pill a day is the most frequent dose under any circumstances there is no treatment obtainable which costs so little, and at the same time some which brings about such excellent results in derangements of the kidneys, liver and bowels.

Independence Assured

A strong argument for life insurance is found in the scanty record of those who have been able to save out of their earnings enough to make provision for their bereaved families. There are multitudes of men to whom this is impossible, as their income is all required for the decent maintenance of their household, or, the margin for saving is too narrow to allow of a fund being accumulated out of it. Then, there are all manner of misfortunes to which men are liable, which drain away any savings which have been laid aside. Yet the great bulk of such persons could pay the premium on a life policy by exercising special economies. In relation to this, the "Insurance Monitor" narrates that: "A gentleman who was lately visiting a statistician employed in the Census Bureau at Washington, was complaining that he had little or nothing to show for the money he had earned during the course of a lifetime. Through mismanagement of his affairs and unfortunate investments it had nearly all been lost.

"Do you know," said the statistician," how many of the men in this country succeed in saving any large part of the money that they have earned. In the EASTERN MIDDLE STATES ONLY ABOUT 2 p. c. in NEW ENGLAND 3 p. c. and in THE WEST ABOUT 4 p. c." Such is the slender record of ultimate business success in this country. MORE THAN 96 PER CENT. of those whose earning powers or money-making abilities promise to place their families above want, die poor in this land of exceptional opportunities.

"Could there be a stronger argument for the need of life insurance? It is almost the only investment which is not subject to the mistakes of the investor,"

The Sun Life of Canada is a household word in this country. Its marvellous increase in business is Proof of Public Confidence in its plans of Life Insurance. Profit by the experience of the men who knew how to invest wisely by insuring in the

POLITICAL CRIME

In another column we give a characteristic article by the Globe on "Ontario Liberals and Political Crime." As formerly the barnacles on the ship of state called for its condemnation, so now it cannot countenance the pirate Minnie M., its pirate owners and charterers, or its pirate crew. Unfortunately, having thus relieved it conscience, we are afraid that it may speedily return to the defence of these iniquities. In its very proper condemnation of the crimes of its friends, it endeavors to convey the impression that this was an isolated case. In reality it is not exceptional. It is no worse than what was done in West Elgin or South Oxford, or other constituencies where the sawoffs or timely resignation prevented a thorough investigation. A similar amount of crime in a town or township, such as has often been perpetrated by the Ross machine, could not have been exposed in such a startling manner as the iniquities confined to the small stage of a little vessel's deck. Nor does the Globe bring its censure to bear upon the real offenders, the Ross Administration. The actual perpetrators were the agents of the Ministers quite as much as they were of Mr. Smith. One of their number, Attorney-General Gibson, was in the constituency taking charge of the corrupt election. He was publicly warned of the intended cruise of the Minnie M., with full particulars of the frauds that were planned, and he made himself a party to them by his flat refusal to interfere. Since then Mr. Ross, his colleagues and supporters have rewarded these crimes, at the cost of the public, especially by their grants to the Sault Companies so deeply involved.

Some Liberal organs are endeavoring to defend Mr. Ross and to confine the blume to the wicked Stratton wing of the Ministry. We must protest against this pretence. If Mr. Stratton, Mr. Gibson and other Ministers have made themselves more prominent in the work of corruption, they did it for the benefit of the whole Administration and with the approval of their colleagues. The Minnie M. case is but the culmination of the exposure of Ministerial corruption. The Ross Administration is dead and it should be speedily buried.

A FLIM-FLAM PREFERENCE

In an article on the British preference the Globe has one good line, its heading, "A flim-flam preference," which aptly describes the Laurier policy. Unable to refute Mr. Borden's arguments, the barnacle organ falsifies the statements of the leader of the Opposition in order to demolish the man of straw thus set up. For instance, it says:—"Mr. Borden is going to give adequate protection to the Canadian manufacturer, that means that the duties against the British manufacturer will be higher than they are now—high enough indeed to exclude him from the market." Again it says:—"This great Imperial party, is to put up the bars against British goods and offer the British manufacturer the exquisite consolation that the foreigner is excluded also, and by higher duties than are imposed on him." Of course, as the Globe very well knows, Mr. Borden means nothing of the sort. He means that he would not exclude, but would increase British imports, decreasing those of foreigners. His policy is clear cut and easy of comprehension. It is a preference for Canadian goods and Canadian wage-earners over all comers, and a preference for British goods over those of foreigners. He does not wish to see even British imports closing Canadian factories as in the case of the woollen industry, but there is ample scope for a preference for British goods without this. We are not in a position, we are not likely to be a position, soon, if ever, to produce all that we require, and our imports are likely to continue large. Mr. Borden and those who follow his lead desire that these imports should be supplied as much as possible by the United Kingdom and other parts of the Empire, and as little as possible by foreigners. It would not be difficult to frame a tariff which would bring about this result. It is useless to quibble about percentages or to endeavor to apply any hard and fast rule. A study of the official returns showing the amount of imports and the localities whence they come, will enable any man using his common sense to ascertain whether the duty is too low to afford due protection to our own people from crushing competition. A little further research would enable an idea to be formed why our imports from the United States are increasing far more rapidly than those from the United Kingdom. The tariff is so framed as to bear lightly on articles with which our neighbors are able to supply us, thus giving them a very substantial preference, while they in return seem to arrange their customs duties with a view to shutting out Canadian goods, excepting certain raw materials which they wish to enjoy the profit of manufacturing while our own people are to do the mere hewing and delving.

Keeping in view our true policy—a preference for Canadians over all others, and a preference for British over foreign goods in Canada, the necessary changes in our tariff can easily be ascertained from our trade returns.

ONTARIO LIBERALS AND POLITICAL CRIME

In Another Lucid Interval the Toronto Globe Tells Some Truths.

(The Toronto Globe)

The Liberals of Ontario have good reason to be both ashamed and indignant because of the revelations of political crime made in the election court at Sault Ste. Marie. It is not fitting that comment be passed upon ex parte statements made in evidence while election trials are in process. When the evidence given by unreliable witnesses, like those brought from Buffalo in the North Grey case, is flatly contradicted by the testimony of Canadians of character and standing, we can afford to wait the finding of the court. But the finding of the court at Sault Ste. Marie on the evidence submitted in connection with the "Minnie M." charges, and the very definite and unmistakable language of both the Chancellor and Mr. Justice Teetzel, release this instance, and make public judgment upon it both right and timely.

And that judgment cannot be other than one of stern and unequivocal condemnation. The whole story of the trip of that chartered steamboat and of the conduct of the gang fittingly described by the court as "rascals," is utterly disgraceful to every man directly or indirectly involved in it. That this nefarious traffic in votes, this disgusting collusion with pluggers and moral debauchees, was conducted in the interest of the Liberal candidate, and ostensibly for the sake of the Liberal party make it all the more intolerable to intelligent and self-respecting Liberals, not only in the constituency, but throughout the Province. No decent Liberal will defend it, or make apology for it, or minimize its crime. The unanswered evidence is direct, the finding of the court is plain, and at no essential point can reason or decency offer either extenuation or denial. The criminality of the offence is matched only by its utter and unrelieved stupidity. All who are responsible for it deserve not only the utmost punishment provided by law, but also the unreserved and indignant repudiation of all who have voice or responsibility in the Liberal party.

It is to no purpose to say that on the Conservative side the corruption was as bad or worse. That saying is probably true. But with the Liberal party it has been different. There probably never was an absolutely clean general election in this or any other Province. There have always been parasites and grafters, and camp followers. But their presence has been resented and their services resisted by the Liberals. And the temper, and genius, and ideals of the Liberal party have not changed. The number of those who approve of corrupt election methods or who would profit by them is insignificant, and of anything we give honest voice to the sentiments and convictions of the Liberals of Ontario it is in deliberately and determinedly condemning the conduct of those who organized and carried out the Sault Ste. Marie election offences, and in demanding that in every other constituency workers of the unsavory Sullivan species be separated from the activities of the Liberal party by a gulf as wide as that which divides decency and honor from the ugliest and foulest crime.

SAULT STE MARIE

Precarious Existance of the Ministry Prolonged by Fraud and Crime

When the election took place the Ministry was trying to prolong a precarious existence. The charge was freely made that the band of workers who are being utilized to keep the present politicians in office would stop at nothing. The depressed condition of the industries at Sault Ste Marie afforded a chance to appeal not only to the necessities but to the cupidity of the people in the locality. Authority was taken to relieve distressed workmen thrown out of employment by paying their wages with public money, and the disbursement of the cash was made coincident with the holding of the election. A member of the Ministry addressed a public meeting on the eve of the contest and appealed to the people as the spokesman of a Government able to serve the commercial interests of the district. No comment with such methods, the agents of the party proceeded to make assurance doubly sure by the usual coarse forms of corruption involved in bribing voters with money and whiskey. The evidence shows this, and reveals also the details of a successful plan to carry a boat load of said ruffians to a remote polling place in order that bogus votes might swell the expected majority. The constituency returned the Government candidate and the obligations created by such a situation had to be fulfilled.

Emerging from the bye-elections with a majority of three the Ministry carried through the Legislature a measure to revive the Sault industries by pledging the money, the credit, and, it is painful to reflect, the good name of Ontario in an effort to set on their feet the private enterprises of a few capitalists whose money had been foolishly invested and badly handled. This was the price paid for what can only be called a political crime. The whole story is now known in all its details. The election has been set aside, and the Ministry, which has sacrificed so much of honor, of fair dealing and of sound principle to maintain itself in power is now face to face with a fresh emergency. What is to be the next step? How long can the Province tolerate a condition that menaces all that is worth preserving in our political system? It is surely a time when earnest-minded men can counsel together, regardless of their views on party issues, and make a stand for common morality in public affairs. The intense partisanship which reigns supreme in the Legislature furnishes no hope that it can be trusted to end an intolerable condition but there is throughout the Province a healthy, though disorganized body of opinion to which appeal must be made, and it cannot too soon exert its authority.—Toronto News. THE 161ST EARTHQUAKE

CAUSED BY MOON'S CONJUNCTION WITH THE SUN.

Prof. Wiggins of Ottawa has given his opinion with reference to the earthquake which shook up Ottawa a few days ago and caused the indicator in Toronto to register a few seismic thrills. Prof. Wiggins, who is an authority, states that the force which produced the earthquakes was the moon's conjunction with the sun, and that it was felt strongly in Ottawa owing to the low barometric pressure resulting in high winds. "No earthquake can occur where the barometer is high," he said, "A low barometer shows that the air is light and of course the land surface suddenly rises. Suppose the Pacific ocean were snatched away from our planet its bed would immediately rise to the present level of that ocean's surface.

"If the air over Ottawa were suddenly removed," continued the professor, "the city would rise to a great height in a moment of time. The earth's elasticity has a great tendency to accumulate at some point generally an island or mountain. The air at that point suddenly becomes light and if a mountain, it may spring up and light many miles away as it happened with Turtle Mountain last year, or it may become a landslide as at Buckingham. These elevations may be protected by stretching wires from them ove rsurrounding country, thus distributing the force. This protects the parliament buildings, otherwise they might some some day slide into the Ottawa river. I may say," concluded Prof. Wiggins, "that this is the earthquake reported from Mexico two weeks ago and is travelling eastward. It will appear in Europe and Asia in a brief period. Generally a great earthquake is accompanied by a similar shock on the opposite side of the earth."

161st EARTHQUAKE.

"According to my record of earthquakes happening in Canada the one last night makes the one hundred and sixty-first," said Dr. George Johnson. "The most frequently shaken point in Canada, according to these records, is Pointe des Monts in the mouth of the St. Lawrence. This point has a record of twenty-four earthquakes, the first occurring December 30th, 1880, and the last January 11th, 1894. Ottawa and the Ottawa valley have had six previous seismic disturbances. The first noted occurred on May 1st, 1856. The second, which is marked violent, on July 12th, 1861. The third or fourth, which were 'slight,' happened on February 8th and April 14th, 1880. The fifth—several smart shocks—occurred on January 11th, 1888. The sixth was on February 5th, 1888, 'slight.' The seventh was slight and occurred on the 14th of September at a few minutes before 9 p.m. It lasted a few seconds; was accompanied (in Chelsea) by a rumbling noise, suggesting the passing of a heavy train of cars. The wrinkling of old Mother Earth's surface was distinct and unmistakable, an undulation seemingly proceeding from the southeast to northwest."

BOON OF CIVILIZATION

Medical Journal Talks Strongly on Vaccination.

"One of the greatest boons of modern science is the discovery and practice of vaccination. It has been in use now for about one century. During this time it is safe to say that it has saved more lives than all the wars put together have destroyed.

"In Sweden from 1774-1801 the death rate from smallpox was 2,008 per million of population, from 1801-1815, a period when vaccination was practiced but optional, the death rate was 631; from 1815-1865, when vaccination became compulsory, the death rate was only 173. In London per million of population, the following death rates pertained from smallpox: 1771-1789, 5,020, 1801-1810 2,040; 1831-1835, 830; 1838-1853, 513; 1854-1871, vaccination now compulsory, 268; and 1872-1890, vaccination compulsory and more efficiently enforced, 178.

"But for children under 10 years of age, the attack rate is 5 per 1,000 among the vaccinated, and 101 per 1,000 among the unvaccinated. The death rate among the vaccinated was 0.09, and among the unvaccinated, 44.

"In persons over ten years of age, the attack rate was, per 1,000, among those twice vaccinated, 3; among those once vaccinated 19; among those not vaccinated, 94. The death rate among those twice vaccinated was 0.08; among persons once vaccinated, 1; among those not vaccinated, 51.

"It is absolutely useless for people to argue against vaccination. The law should be compulsory for re-vaccination as well as vaccination. Smallpox is so extremely contagious that nothing but vaccination will control its spread. In pre-vaccination days there was an epidemic every few years. This is what the Anti-Vaccination League would bring us back to."

BUFFALO CHARGES FAIL

Election Trial of North Grey Petition Has Been Postponed.

Judges Hold That the Evidence Was Too Contradictory—Minister Davis Only Witness on Saturday—Said He Had No Knowledge of a Central Organization in Connection With the Liberal Party—Significant Neglect.

Owen Sound, Sept. 19.—Only one witness gave evidence in the North Grey election trial Saturday morning, Hon. E. J. Davis, Commissioner of Crown Lands, said that he had arrived in the riding on the day of Mr. Mackay's nomination, had addressed the convention and departed the following day. A week previous to the election he had returned and had not been in the riding since that occasion. He arrived in Owen Sound on Christmas eve and returned to Toronto in the early morning following. During his brief stay he had merely made arrangements for speakers at public meetings. He had seen Mr. Marshall, the organizer, but had not seen Mr. Mackay. The witness had no knowledge of a central Liberal organization, and did not know who had employed Mr. Marshall. Messrs. Smith and Vance had assisted in the work of organization. Mr. Smith's office was in Toronto, and he did not know who maintained the office.

"Did you really think it necessary to come away up here Mr. Davis with your three leading organizers here to make arrangements for public speakers?" asked Mr. Blackstock in a tone of incredulity.

"Under the circumstances I thought it was very important," replied the Minister of Crown Lands.

The witness said that he had not interested himself in the protest, and could not say who was supplying funds to respondent to carry on the trial. This concluded the evidence on the group of charges embodied in the testimony of the Buffalo operators, Nelson and Mulloy.

Significant Neglect.

Mr. Blackstock addressed the court in unusually vigorous style. The procuring of the men to go into a constituency was illegal, and the actions of Mulloy in the riding was corrupt. Four persons could contradict the evidence of Nelson, Sullivan, Vance, McCarty and Massey. They had not been called by the respondent. This was significant, and a circumstance that pointed to the truth of the story. The stories of Roy McCarthy and C. C. Pearce, the man of many Government jobs, were "extravagant and ridiculous," that a stranger should meekly submit to being bundled out of town by two men who he had never seen until that very day. The story was preposterous. Dr. Hough's denial was unimportant, as he was an incriminated party.

Mr. Aylesworth made capital out of that part of the Nelson story which told of his morning run to Owen Sound from Stratford, and his return the same day. Agent Beach had proved by the books of the railroad that this was impossible at that time by the regular passenger service. Nelson's second appearance in the box had served only to weaken his story and to demonstrate that it was a manufactured yarn from start to finish. He also dwelt upon the unreliability of men who would lend themselves to such a purpose.

Dismissed the Charge.

Their lordships said that in view of the evidence of men of undoubted standing and character who denied the story of these men absolutely, they had no other course open to them than to dismiss the charge.

This adjournment does not mean an end of the trial. It will resume undoubtedly if the statement of counsel for the petitioner may be accepted, and they promise developments of the most startling kind.

The postponment of the North Grey election trial Saturday till Oct. 31 was inevitable on account of the multiplicity of the judges' engagements.

JUDGES REPORT TEW.

G. R. Smith Called on By the Court to Pay All Costs.

Sault Ste. Marie, Sept. 19.—In the Soo election trial, the judges Saturday morning reported the following persons for corrupt and illegal practices:

William Coyne, assistant to the president of the Consolidated Lake Superior Company.

Pat. J. Galvin.

David Hopkins, a C.P.R. conductor.

J. D. Lamonte.

Napoleon Audette.

Charles Griswold.

William H. Godwin, mayor of Steelton.

W. C. Kilpatrick, mayor and postmaster of Copper Cliff.

John F. Bonathan, who admitted he had received a bribe.

They also report that, in their belief corrupt practices extensively prevailed throughout the entire constituency; they direct C. N. Smith to pay all the costs of the petition.

The court, referring to J. Kennedy, general superintendent of the A. C. R., who wrote to Hopkins, said he was a weak agent in Coyne' hands.

Passenger Train Wrecked.

Port Arthur, Ont., Sept. 19.—Passenger train No 2, eastbound, was ditched at Dexter yesterday morning. Some of the cars were wrecked. No person was injured. A wrecking train from Fort William cleared the track, and the train arrived here twelve hours late.

Fell to His Death.

Chatham, Sept. 19.—James Larkin was drowned Saturday, and his body recovered yesterday afternoon. He fell off the City of Chatham while asleep.

His Occasional Wish.

"Why don't you ever want to go to a wedding?" snapped Mrs. Enpeck. "I don't believe you've been to a wedding since you attended your own."

"No," mildly responded Mr. Enpeck, "I haven't. And," he added softly to himself, "I sometimes wish I hadn't attended that one."

PRINCE BISMARCK DEAD.

Son of Builder of the German Empire Passes Away Painlessly.

Friedrichsruhe, Sept. 19.—Prince Herbert Bismarck died yesterday morning at 10.15. The end was painless. Since he ceased to be Foreign Minister, on the retirement of his father in 1890, Prince Herbert Bismarck has taken part in public affairs only as a member of the Reichstag. His attitude had been that of a man not appreciated by his sovereign, and who was waiting in the background for an opportunity to resume his career.

His delivery as a Parliamentary speaker improved year by year. He always declined to join any political group, steadfastly calling himself an independent.

Prince Bismarck's father trained him for his successor as chancellor of the German Empire, and advanced him rapidly in the diplomatic service until, at the age of 40 years, he was Minister of Foreign Affairs, in which position he took part in nearly every important international transaction.

The title of Prince Bismarck and the large fortune of the deceased will go to his 7-year-old son, Otto. The estate is now estimated to be worth $4,000,000, exclusive of the lands.

O.J.C. FALL RACES.

First Race—6 furlongs, all ages—1 Elliott, 2 W. R. Condon, 3 Mirthless. Time, 1.15⅘.

Second Race—2-year-olds, 5 furlongs—1 Caper Sauce, 2 Incense, 3 Maggie Mackay. Time, 1.02⅘.

Third Race—3-year-olds and up, 1 1-16 miles—1 Judge, 2 Harbor, 3 Sailor's Delight. Time, 1.50.

Fourth Race—Handicap, 3-year-olds and up—1 Claude, 2 Early Roy, 3 Wire in. Time, 2.09⅘.

Fifth Race—Novice Steeplechase, 3-year-olds and up, 1½ miles—1 Nitor, 2, Captain Hayes, 3 Two X. Time, 3.43.

Sixth Race—3-year-olds and up, 6 furlongs—1 Virtuoso, 2 Loch Evil, 3 Adele Trebla. Time, 1.17.

Mr. Borden's Tour.

Kingsville, Sept. 19.—Saturday this town gave Mr. R. L. Borden the most enthusiastic of receptions, and the leader of the Conservatives made a ringing speech in reply to a eulogistic address. Mr. Lewis Wigle, the candidate, also made a strong speech.

Windsor, Sept. 19.—1,500 people heard Mr. R. L. Borden discuss public questions in the armories Saturday night.

Pulled Gun Toward Him.

Winnipeg, Sept. 19.—While Mr. Risum with his son and daughter were driving to his ranch, 16 miles from Claresholm, the boy in picking up a gun, which was in the bottom of the rig, to shoot some chickens, accidentally discharged the weapon as he held the muzzle towards him and the shot entered his side, killing him almost instantly.

Big Streak By Train.

Ottawa, Sept. 19.—H. Barnes, an Ottawa drover, was struck by the C.P.R. Pembroke special. The rig was demolished and Barnes seriously but it is not thought fatally injured. The accident happened at Marsh's Crossing, 13 miles from Ottawa.

The oven of an Imperial Oxford Range and the old-fashioned spit before an open fireplace do better roasting than any other cooking apparatus invented.

In the olden days the spit had to be kept turning to get all sides of a roast cooked. It is much the same with the ordinary cook-stove. The heat of the oven is greatest on the fire side — roasts, bread, pies, cakes, etc., have to be turned and twisted to get them cooked at all. The result is uneven, unsatisfactory cooking—good food ruined. The diffusive flue construction of the draws fresh air into the flue chamber, super-heats it and diffuses it evenly over the oven, thus heating it quickly, thoroughly and uniformly—back, front and sides are at the same equal temperature. The result is juicy, tender roasts, light, dainty pastry, evenly raised bread—successful cooking.

When you buy an Imperial Oxford Range you get the result of over sixty years' thought and experience in scientific construction of cooking apparatus.

THE CITY AND SUBURBS

Sunday at All Saints'

In All Saints' church Sunday, the attendance at both services was large and throughout very hearty. The anthem in the morning was exceedingly well rendered, the solo part being taken in splendid voice by W. W. Edwards. At the evening service a solo by Miss Mabel Rickey, "Abide with me," was given effectively. The rector preached two able sermons from the texts, St. Mark 14: 7, "He cometh and findeth them sleeping, and saith unto Peter: Simon, sleepest thou? Couldst thou not watch one hour?" In the evening, II Kings, 5: 11-12—where Naaman, the Syrian, came to Elisha to be healed of his leprosy.

On Friday evening, the 23rd, at 8 o'clock, a harvest thanksgiving service will be held. The choir is preparing special music, and judging from the splendid efforts of the choir during the past, it is fair to assume that a treat will be given that evening.

On Monday and following evenings this week, willing workers will gather to decorate the church.

Tomorrow at 3.30 p.m., the Chancel Guild will meet.

THE YOUNG MAN AT HOME

REV. DR. CROTHERS ON COUNTRY'S MOST IMPORTANT ASSET.

"Every true Canadian is proud of his country, and whatever our origin may have been, we are proud to be called Canadians. As the years go by, I believe we shall still be prouder." These were the words of Rev. Dr. Crothers, who last evening at the George-st. church, delivered an earnest sermon to young men. There was a large congregation, and the pastor's text was St. Luke, 2; 51: "And he went down with them and came to Nazareth, and was subject unto them." The subject of the discourse was "The Young Man at Home." The speaker pointed out that the young men of Canada were her most important asset. To adopt any policy that would drive the young men away would be to render the mines, forests, fisheries and wheat fields of little avail. The young men were the most valuable commodity of the country, and they should be surrounded by the very best safeguards, and helps in fostering their good desires and principles. The speaker did not know how many young men there were in Canada or the United States, but an authority had stated that there were ten millions in Mexico and South America. There were many more in Canada and the United States taken altogether, and in India alone there were thirty millions. Young men were an important factor in the history of the world, and his purpose was to use the text as a plea on which to hang certain remarks in this connection. It referred to the Christ's home life, and formed a very beautiful picture. There was very little besides imagination that threw any light on the 20 years of Christ's life from the time He first went up to Jerusalem until His appearing to Israel. There was nothing that turned the light upon those years, except that "Jesus increased in wisdom and stature, and in favor with God and man." Like any Jewish boy, it was supposed, He attended a Hebrew school, and it was not to be fancied that He learned His lessons in a manner different from other boys. Likewise, did He acquire a knowledge of the trade of a carpenter as an apprentice with His father.

AN INSPIRATION.

Jesus Christ was an inpiration to the world. No man thought anything of his scholarship or character had aught to say about the character of Jesus—all acknowledged that He was the Great Man. How He came into the world could not fail to be of interest. He might have came like Buddha, the prince who left his throne and went down among the common people. His coming might have been like that of a phisosopher—as Confucius, the founder of the Chinese system of philosophy, or as a priest, as did Zoroster, the founder of the Persian religion; as a soldier, as did Mohommad. But Christ came as an ordinary man, and His life as such was an inspiration.

THE WATCHWORDS.

A quiet, religious home, where duty and love were the watchwords, was the most important thing in life. The speaker said, "Rather give me a log cabin where the throne of grace has been erected, where Jesus dwells as He dwelt in the homes of Galilee, than a gorgeous mansion with magnificent pictures and everything costing a vast sum, but where duty and love are not the watchwords, where Mtemper is not controlled, and where Jesus Christ is not enthroned." The home of Christ was one of poverty, but, after all, poverty was not the worst thing; because people were poor it was no reason why they should stay so, and reference was made to Lincoln, Garfield, Wesley and Carnegie. It was a home of obscurity, but, after all, obscurity was by no means the worst thing. Christ did not have the fierce light of the public beating upon Him, He was not concerned in any sensation among His fellow men, he was not subject to the temptations of a more public place. It was, moreover, a home of toil, and, said the speaker, 'I will venture to say He put His conscience into every table, chair, or cart-wheel that He made. There are people who don't work, and the proper place for them is behind bars." Christ's home was, moreover, a place for preparation, and the speaker here dwelt upon an important point. He had no doubt that again and again Jesus went out upon the hills around Nazareth to meditate upon His life, and what He was going to do. No doubt large visions took hold of Him as He thought of His people and what He was going to do for them. "I do not think He felt that He was God's Son, the world's Messiah," said the speaker. "It came upon Him gradually until the time when He went and found John on the banks of the Jordan, the full consciousness of who He was came upon Him. The trouble with young men is that they do not understand Christ. They think of Him as a Great Being far removed from them. I am so thankful to think that Christ was one just as we are, and to know what trouble and anxiety He had to go through—His years of preparation in order to fit Himself for the great work to which His Father had called Him.

TIME FOR PREPARATION.

Rev Dr. Crothers applied this truth and pointed to the importance of young men at home, going to school or engaged in business taking the best advantage of their time for preparation. How could the largest sum of true life-power be secured? Sir William Jones, a great thinker, assumed that life was about 70 years, and divided into several parts. The first thirty was for the acquisition of knowledge and preparation for actual work; the second twenty was for the pursuance of that business; the next ten years for more easy employment, and the last ten for preparation for that great change that awaited all. This was not a fair arrangement, for the majority did not live to be 70 years old. Nature had apparently divided life into periods of seven years. At the end of the first period the child got his second set of teeth; at the end of the second period, his development was still more marked, and at the end of the third period it was apparent in a higher degree. "We ought to be thankful we are living, and that the possibilities of life are before us. Young men desire to live long, and be men among men. I like to see young men full of enthusiasm. Their desire should be to accomplish something that will endure—not a mere passing success." Their home-life was a splendid time for preparation, and the speaker in conclusion urged them to be careful about their reading as important to study. He was not classifying occupations, and emphasized the fact that a farmer to-day had to conduct his business along scientific lines, and that a preacher had to do something more than shout. In advising them to read the Bible, he said it was lamentable the ignorance that existed with regard to that book. Young men should have a capacity for work, and their hearts should be in everything they undertook. The choice of good companions was emphasized, and withal a life that reflected joy and sunshine.

Rev. Dr. Crothers will continue next Sabbath his series of sermons to young men.

SUPERINTENDENT OF CANAL

Mr. J. H. McClellan will be Head of this Waterway.

Ottawa Free Press.

J. H. McClellan, the new superintendent of the Trent Valley Canal, was the Liberal candidate for West Peterborough at the last election, and is one of the most prominent business men in the Trent Valley. He was at one time manager for the Dominion Bank, and entered commercial life as a grain merchant. He afterwards built Pickering Harbor, and conducted a large grain buying and shipping business there until he removed to the city of Peterborough. He was the managing director of the Peterborough Fuel & Cartage Co. In securing his services the Government has gotten a capable and energetic business man for the business head of the Trent Valley Canal.

Over 170 miles of navigation can be traversed without interruption on the canal, and Mr. E. J. Walsh, the well known Ottawa civil engineer, is conducting the surveys for the routes connecting the canal with Georgian Bay, at the north and Lake Ontario via Rice Lake to Port Hope.

THE MONEY BY-LAWS

Tomorrow the property owners of Peterborough will have an opportunity of voting on two money by-laws for borrowing funds for improvements which the growth of the town renders necessary. The larger amount is $25,000 for a new fire hall and equipments. No one who has looked into the matter can be ignorant that we have outgrown our appliances for fighting fire, which, if once adequate, are so no longer. If a conflagration of any magnitude occurs, a few hours might inflict a loss on the community far in excess of the sum now to be provided as a safeguard. It must also be remembered that improved means of checking destruction by the devastating flames will have a tendency to counteract the serious increase in fire insurance rates that are becoming so burdensome. We are behind the times in this respect and we are paying dearly for a neglect which it is now proposed to remedy.

The second by-law of $12,000 for streets and bridges, is another matter of urgency. Some of the wooden bridges in town are in such a state that extensive repairs must be speedily undertaken. It will be more really economical to make use of iron and cement for this purpose, than timber, which is now nearly as expensive in the first place, and far less lasting, with a constant bill for repairs. As for the extension of some of our streets, notable George street at both ends, these, if delayed, will be forced upon us, and will be very costly with the increasing value of property, and the probability of having to pay for improvements which may be made. If undertaken now the expenditure will not be very heavy, some of the larger land owners being prepired to give a free right of way, which they may not always be willing to do.

Peterborough is growing very rapidly and the consequent increased expenditure cannot be avoided. What is essential is that we should get good value for our money, and one means to this end is the timely provision for what is really required.

FOR TO-MORROWS VOTING

An Expression of Opinion Required on Two By-laws.

The opinion of the ratepayers of Peterborough is desired on two by-laws tomorrow. One is to provide for borrowing the sum of twelve thousand dollars for the purpose of reconstructing and repairing bridges in the Town of Peterborough and purchasing land for and opening new streets in the said town, and the other, if passed, will provide for borrowing the sum of twenty-five thousand dollars for the purchase of a site for, and to pay for the erection and equipment of a Fire Hall, the installation of a fire alarm system, and the purchase of chemical engine and other apparatus for fire protection in the Town of Peterborough.

ENTRIES PILING IN

The Secretary of the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition is a busy man these days, especially so on Saturday, when money entries were received. It is already apparent that the entries this year will far exceed previous records. Great interest is being manifested by exhibitors from distant points, and the fair will undoubtedly take its proper place among the leading exhibitions of the Provinces.

The fact that the Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario will be present is arousing a great deal of interest, and opening day will break all records.

Seats for the Black Watch Band concert are on sale at Madill's drug store, and tickets are going very fast.

POLICE MAKE A CAPTURE

GATHER IN A MAN WHO HAD COMMITTED A BURGLARY.

A Bottle of Whiskey that did the Community a Good Turn — The Capture may be an Important one — Loaded Revolver and Dynamite Found.

The police made a somewhat sensational arrest this morning at 394 Aylmer st. Mrs. L. A. Hawley, who lives at that number, went out to do a little shopping and when she returned she found a man asleep in the shed. She at once notified the police and the man was brought to the station and searched. He was drunk and objected strenuously to the proceeding. On searching him it was found that he had clothed himself in Mr. Hawley's best suit and even put on his suspenders. In the pockets of his own clothes were found an interesting collection. There were five or six handkerchiefs, Mr. Hawley's watch chain, some dynamite fuses and a loaded revolver. Whiskey was the cause of the man's arrest. It appears that he got hold of a bottle of whiskey in the house, drank it and then fell asleep. The chief thinks it very probable that the man arrested was one of the band of safe blowers who have been operating in the vicinity of Marmora. He will be taken up to the jail and remanded for a week until the police can find out something about him.

Three cotton and three silk handkerchiefs, two being used to tie up the articles in, a small blue tin box, containing a piece of soap, a pair of braces, belonging to Mr. Hawley, a brass watch, the number of which is 1587078, a small screw-driver, with the name, T. Fortye, on the end of the handle, an implement to be used in cleaning a pipe, a Yale key, No. 557, evidently made at the Lock Works here, a watch chain, belonging to Mr. Hawley, five dynamite fuses and several cartridges, a self-acting 32-calibre revolver, for five cartridges—a weapon loaded when the man was arrested—a card with the name, John S. Walton, Room 20, Bank st., Chambly, from 9 to 9.20 a.m.; three cartridges, besides those taken from the revolver, an apparently new razor—a "Blue Beard," made by J. Palmer & Sons, Montreal—some needles, a jackknife, a watch guard, 25 cents in silver, two American cents and an English 3-penny bit.

The outfit was undoubtedly that of a tramp, and the revolver and dynamite fuses have led the chief to have a suspicion that the capture is more important than might be supposed, if reports of robberies were not going about the country. The man would not give his name, in fact would not answer any question put to him by the Chief, and he was allowed to sleep off the effects of the whisky. When he realized his position he will probably see things differently. In the man's coat were found two bottles, one which the Chief thinks looks suspiciously like nitro-glycerine, and another is apparently a salve. A thorough investigation will be made with a view to discovering the exact identity of the man.

This afternoon the man gave his name as Joseph Murphy, stated that he was a plasterer by trade and came here from Montreal. The goods that he stole from the Hawley residence are two silk handkerchiefs, a pair of trousers and vest, a watch chain and charm, a pair of braces and a "nifter" of whiskey.

SOME BUILDING OPERATIONS

Mr. John Carlisle has Built 36 Houses in 2 1-2 Years.

Mr. John Carlisle, who has built thirty-six dwellings in Peterborough during the past two years and a half, years, is dealing in building lots at present, and has several for sale in the vicinity of Euclid avenue, East Ward. During the last ten years Mr. Carlisle has sold 164 lots, mostly to workingmen, who have almost to a man made their last payment. Houses are scarce and rents are high and these are the conditions that make for good demand for lots. During his building operations of the last three years Mr. Carlisle has seen $36,000 pass through his hands and he doesn't consider that it has by any means been invested to disadvantage. He hopes to build four more houses very soon. The workingman, he states, has been a big purchaser of property and what is more he is good pay.

Dr. Stewart at St. Paul's

Rev. Dr. Stewart, principal of the Bible Training School, Toronto, who was in town yesterday speaking at the Y.M.C.A. rally, preached in St. Paul's Presbyterian church at the morning service and was eagerly listened to by a large congregation. The reverend gentleman took for his text Phillipians 2-9: "God hath given him a name which is above every name," his subject being "The peerless Saviour," a companion subject to that on which he spoke at the Y.M.C.A., namely, "The peerless Book." The music was of a special character, Mr. J. Lawrence singing in good voice, "He feedeth me," and Misses Helen Davies and Lillian Moore and Mr. James Dawson taking the solo parts in the anthem, "Angels of Jesus."

A DISTINGUISHED LADY

MISS SUSAN GREELY, WHOSE MOTHER WAS A DAUGHTER OF MAJ. JAMES ROGERS

Lieut.-Col. Rogers of Town, Attended the Funeral, Which Was Held Recently in Grafton.

Lieut.-Col. H. C. Rogers, of town, attended, a few days ago, the funeral of a deceased relative, Miss Susan Greely a distinguished lady, whose history is indissolubly connected with the early educational work of the Province, and with matters of much historical interest. She had attained the great age of 98 years and six months. She was a daughter of Mr. Aaron Greely, who was among the very first to settle in Haldimand township. Her mother was a daughter of Major James Rogers, commander of the "Queen's Rangers." In 1796, Mr. Aaron Greely, who came from New Hampshire here, formed an agreement with Governor Simcoe to bring thirty settlers into Haldimand township, he to furnish them with provisions, tools, etc., and to receive a large tract of land. The supplies were largely purchased from Mr. Cartwright, of Kingston. Then, it is said, Governor Simcoe was called home, and Hon. Peter Hunter, who administered affairs in his absence, cancelled the bargain made with Mr. Greely. Mr. Greely immediately accepted an offer of the Surveyor-Generalship of Michigan. He was obliged to leave almost immediately to take up the duties of this new position, leaving to his wife the settlement of his affairs here.

Mr. Greely had previously built a sawmill at Presque Isle Point, and in Haldimand. After disposing of most of the property, Mrs. Greely had a boat built, which was operated by her brother-in-law, Mr. G. Greely, assisted by a comrade, Mr. Liberty White, who accompanied them from New Hampshire. The latter gentleman is a well known character in American history, and was shot by an Indian upon a spot now included in the corporation of the city of Chicago. Thus the brave woman, with her infant daughter, began her journey from a spot near Brighton to Michigan. They coasted the lake from Presque Isle to Niagara, camping on the shore at night, and were frequently delayed by head winds and storms. Arrived at Queenston, she disposed of the boat, and the baggage was conveyed by land past the falls to Chippawa, where they embarked on another vessel and were landed at Detroit.

Mr. Greely surveyed the country around Saginaw, on Lake Huron, where, it is said, a tract of land still bears his name, as the first surveyor, and on the river basin below the city. He went to Washington with the maps and surveys, and returning home after the declaration of the war of 1812, lost nearly all the property he had with him by being attacked by the Indians. The family remained in Detroit until that city was taken by General Brock, when they left the frontier for New Hampshire. They left Buffalo two days after the battle of Queenston, where General Brock was killed. Mr. Greely served during the war as a commissary to Harrison's army.

Returning to Detroit after peace had been arranged, Mr. Greely died suddenly. After his death Mrs. Greely and her daughter returned to Canada, and settled upon their property in Haldimand.

Here Miss Greely has resided continuously for 83 years. She received her education in her home, where her mother was her teacher, and it is said that at the age of twelve she had read some four hundred books. She taught school for a number of years, but it is in connection with her Sunday school work that she is the most widely known. The story of Miss Greely's Sunday school has been told throughout Ontario. Before the township was divided into school sections she taught in a Sunday school in a public school house near her own property. The division into sections necessitated changes in the location of school houses and she pleaded in vain with the trustees to have the building left to be used as a Sunday school and other meetings. Failing in this, she organized a Sunday school, which she continuously conducted up to last autumn, in her own house, thus having been in the work eighty years, a record which, in all probability, has never been surpassed in any country. During the past decade especially her work has aroused Provincial interest, for it is a very unusual thing to find a lady over ninety years, with faculties unimpaired, engaged in a Sabbath school work. Some of her old pupils are now considering the erection of a suitable monument to her memory.

She was laid to rest in a quiet "God's acre" at Grafton. Col. R. Z. Rogers, Grafton; Mrs. Caddy, of Cobourg, relatives of the deceased, attended the funeral.

All this was shrieked forth with gestures so rapid and amazing that the eye could scarce follow the motion of her hands. Now she flew to the window and fumbled with its fastening, too greatly excited to succeed with the opening. Several of the French gallants stumbled over each other in their haste to aid her, but the lady's impatience could not wait for them. She lifted her clinched hand and smote the diamond panes, which went shivering down beneath the fierce impact of the blow. Glass or lead or both cut the imperious hand and wrist, and the blood trickled down the fair rounded arm. The breach she made was like the letting in of waters, the roar outside became instantly articulate, and waves of meaning flooded the great apartment.

"To the block with Strafford. Death to the people's oppressor!" was the cry, and the tortured king shrank from it as from the lash of a whip.

"Hearken to the wolves!" shrieked the queen. "It is your blood or Strafford's! Which, which, which?"

Then, perhaps because of the hurt which she scarcely seemed to feel, her mood changed as quickly as her anger had risen, and she melted into tears, glided to her husband and threw her arms about his neck.

"Oh, Charles, Charles," she moaned, "it is my love for you that would coerce you. You have not been to blame, misled by an obstinate minister who would sacrifice an indulgent master to buy his own safety. A king is not to be bound as other men. The claim of your wife and children rises superior to that of any subject, for you have sworn to protect them."

Charles stood by the wall which was eight years later to be broken for his own final exit, his eyes filled with tears, caressing the woman who clung to his breast. He saw that the girl was about to address him again and said hastily:

"Go, go! You but pile distraction on distraction. Fear not; for the word of a king goes with you."

Two of the bishops now stepped forward and with gentle urgency used their persuasion on the girl to withdraw. "God keep your majesty firm," she cried, "and so deal with you as you deal with my father."

But the last sight she was to have of her ruler, as the good men pushed her to the door, was far from inspiring. His cheeks were womanishly wet, and wavering irresolution was stamped upon his brow. The twining wounded arm of his wife had reddened the white scarf at his throat with the royal, passionate blood of France.

CHAPTER VIII.

ON Monday there were ever increasing rumors through the town that Charles had signed the bill which would send his chief minister to the block, qualified by statements equally vague that he had done nothing of the sort. But as night drew on the rising jubilation of the crowds in the streets gave point to the more sinister report. In the evening, his usual time of calling, the somber Vollins came to the inn, chiefly, as he said, to urge the girl to quit the turbulent city, where she could accomplish nothing and where she might be in danger were it once guessed that she bore any relationship to the condemned man, but to this good counsel the girl would not listen.

What she demanded impatiently was news, news, news, and this, with exasperating deliberation, Vollins gave forth. It was quite true that the bill was signed, not by the king's hand, but by the hands of four commissioners whom he had appointed for that purpose. The house of lords and even the house of commons was amazed at this betrayal, said Vollins, and the effect of the announcement had been seen on the populace itself, for after certainty came home to the people they had dispersed quietly to their houses, and the streets were almost empty.

The girl was mute with dismay, but Vollins pointed out that the case was in reality no worse than it had been on Saturday or Sunday. By the exercise of his prerogative the king could at any moment free his minister or mitigate the sentence, notwithstanding the fact that the commission had signed the bill of attainder in his name.

Tuesday seemed to bear out these surmises. Frances determined to see the king once more and learn from his own lips the fate of her father, but when she reached Whitehall she found some commotion there, for Charles was taking his departure from the palace, and people said he was on his way to the house of lords and that it was likely he had determined to let Strafford go.

In the evening she learned authoritatively the object of the king's visit to the house of lords. He had pleaded earnestly for the life of his minister, promising if he were released never again to employ him even in the meanest capacity. He implored them at least to grant a reprieve until Saturday, and this was so small a favor for a king to ask that Vollins was sure it would be granted and that many things might happen in the intervening days. The confidence of a man so generally despairing as Vollins in the certainty of a short reprieve and in the ultimate safety of Lord Strafford did much to bring the girl to a like belief, but she resolved nevertheless to see the king next day if she could win her way into Whitehall palace.

Wednesday saw no excitement on the streets. People were going soberly about, each on his own affairs, and the reprieve had provoked no outburst, which in itself was a hopeful sign. Frances had grown to fear the hue and cry of the mob even more than she feared the indecision of the king. If he were left unterrified, all his tendency was toward mercy and the keeping of his oath.

There was no crowd to distract the attention of the guard at the palace gates opening on Whitehall, and they absolutely refused to grant her admission without an order. She turned to the captain of the guard and asked how such an order could be obtained, and that official, apparently struck by her youth and beauty as well as her evident distress, said that if she knew any one about the court who might be sent for and who proved willing to vouch for her he would allow her to pass. But the rule at the gate was strict because of past disturbances, and he had no option but refusal unless she went in under the convoy of some one in authority. Frances pondered a few moments and hesitated, but her need was great, and she could not choose when it came to finding security. At last she said, with reluctance:

"I am acquainted with M. De Courcy. Is he within?"

"I do not know, but 'twill be speedily ascertained."

With that he invited her to a seat in the guardhouse and sent a messenger for De Courcy, knowing there would be prompt response when the Frenchman learned that a beautiful lady awaited him, and in this he was not mistaken. De Courcy came as debonair and as well groomed as usual, twirling his light mustache and doffing his hat with a grand air when he saw who his petitioner was.

"I wish to see his majesty again," said Frances, rising, "but they detain me at the gate, and I have no one to vouch for me unless you will be so kind, though I am sorry to trouble you."

"To pleasure me, mademoiselle, you must mean. 'Tis an ungallant country, as I have always said, when they keep so fair a maid a-waiting. Such a boorish act is not conceivable in France. Most honored am I to be your sponsor, and it gratifies me to tell you that the king is at present disengaged. I beg you to accompany me."

The friend of the queen did not even trouble to make any explanation to the captain of the guard, and he was too powerful a courtier to have anything he did questioned by the underlings. It was palpable that the officer had small liking for him, but wholesome fear of his influence in high places.

As the two crossed the yard together the young man said with the greatest affability:

"Would you prefer to see the king alone or in company?"

"Oh, alone, if it be possible."

"Quite possible. I shall delight in arranging a private interview and am sure his majesty will not refuse my request. If you do not wish to meet any of the court I can take you to him by a private route where we are almost certain to encounter none."

"I shall be deeply indebted to you."

They threaded their way through devious and labyrinthian passages, turning now to the right, now to the left, sometimes ascending a few steps and sometimes a narrow stairway, until at last the guide came to a door, which he pushed open.

"If you will wait here for a moment, I will go and fetch the king." He bowed gracefully as she passed through the doorway, entering a square room, the walls of which were decorated by groups of swords and rapiers of various sorts; a veritable armory. A table occupied the center, and there were several chairs, with a lounge against the wall. A door opened upon an inner room. De Courcy, instead of taking his departure, stepped in quickly after the girl, closed the door, and turned the key in the lock. With the grating of the key came the first suspicion to the mind of Frances that her guide was treacherous. Much as she had always distrusted him, it seemed incredible that, knowing her to be the daughter of the Earl of Strafford, anything disastrous might befall her here in the very palace of the king, the sworn protector of his people. The leer on De Courcy's face and his words speedily disillusioned her.

"If you will be seated, my dear, we may have some converse, interesting and entertaining to us both. You can scarcely imagine my joy at seeing so lovely a visitor in my poor apartments."

"Sir, you said you would bring the king. A gentleman keeps his word."

"Oh, the king in good time, my pretty one. Charles is but a doleful companion just now, and we are well quit of him. As for a man's word, the fashion seems to be the breaking of it, example being set us by poor gentlemen in the highest places. For instance, our last discussion related to marriage, but times have changed since that day, and you will not be so cruel as to expect me to carry out the good domestic intentions I then expressed."

"Sir, I am very glad I shall hear no more of them."

"Truly? Then so much the better. I expected tears and reproaches, but am pleased you are not given to complaining. By my honor, I love you the more for it. So, then, I'll steal a kiss from those ripe lips to seal the new compact we are to make, and I warn you that a scream is not likely to be heard from this chamber."

"I need not your warning. You shall neither hear me scream nor see me weep."

"By St. Denis, I like your spirit. Some scream and some weep, but they all end by clinging."

"Sir, a warning for your warning. Approach not another step nearer me. Stand aside, rather, and allow me quittance of this place as freely as I ignorantly came hither."

"And if I cannot consent?"

"Then 'twill be the worse for you."

"You spur an inclination already highly mettled. Still would I treat you with all courtesy. You are a nameless woman, and many of the highest dames in England are proud to call me their friend."

"That I believe to be as untrue as your saying I am a nameless woman."

"Nevertheless one is as true as the other. Your father never acknowledged you."

"He has been burdened with more important affairs, but he will do so when he is free."

During this dialogue the participants had been constantly changing their positions, De Courcy advancing and Frances retreating, keeping the table between them. The girl's design was plain enough. She desired to hold him in conversation, gradually shifting her position, until she got between him and the door, when a sudden dash might give her freedom. But he easily fathomed this design and laughed as he checkmated it. At her last words, however, he drew himself upright, a look of genuine amazement overspreading his face.

"When he is free!" he echoed. "Powers of heaven! Then you have not come to reproach the king, but to plead with him!"

"Why should I reproach him?"

"It would surely be useless enough, but feminine. Why? Because Gregory Brandon, with one good stroke, severed the king's word and Strafford's neck on Tower hill this morning."

The girl's face went white as the kerchief about her throat, and, swaying half an instant, she leaned against the table for support. Something in the brutal method of the announcement convinced her of its truth more surely than if he had spoken with all the solemnity of which he might be capable. Yet she struggled not to believe.

STARTLED CARLYLE.

How Charles Godfrey Leland Brought the Cynic to His Senses.

Charles Godfrey Leland said that on his first meeting with Carlyle the wise man showed himself in a somewhat cynical frame of mind, from which he was aroused only by a bit of wholesome opposition.

"And what kind of an American may you be—German or Irish or what?" Carlyle asked.

"Since it interests you, Mr. Carlyle," replied Leland, "to know the origin of my family I may say that I am descended from Henry Leland, a noted Puritan, who went to America in 1638."

"I doubt whether any of your family have since been equal to your old Puritan great-grandfather," growled Carlyle, and this, combined with some slurring remarks which he had previously thrown out in regard to America and her history, roused Leland's spirit.

"Mr. Carlyle," he said deliberately, "I think that my brother, Henry Leland, who got the wound from which he died standing by my side in the war of the rebellion, was worth ten of my old Puritan ancestors. At least he died in a ten times better cause. And allow me to say, Mr. Carlyle, that I think in all matters of historical criticism you are principally influenced by the merely melodramatic and theatrical."

Carlyle looked utterly amazed and startled, though not at all angry.

"Whot's thot ye say?" he cried in broad Scotch.

Mr. Leland repeated the remark. A grim smile as of admiration came over the stern old face. It was with a deeply reflective and not displeased air that he replied, still in Scotch.

"Na, na, I'm nae thot," he said. And he dropped into a milder strain and made the interview an occasion to be treasured long in memory.

IMPORTANT RAILWAY NEWS

GENERAL BUSINESS CONDITIONS ARE REPORTED TO BE GOOD.

What Some of the Canadian Lines Lines are Doing — Grand Trunk & C P.R. Both Expending Large Sums

General business conditions of Canadian and United States railways, during the past eight or nine months, show striking contrasts. Some of the largest railway systems in Uncle Sam's territory have been making sweeping retrenchments. Upwards of 100,000 men have been deprived of employment so that the expense accounts would not loom up too large beside the reduced earnings. Construction of new lines has been so limited as to cause considerable comment, while purchases of rolling stock have only been in small figures. On this side of the border the situation has an entirely different phase. The C. P. R. has been making extensive improvements over its entire system and several hundreds of miles of road is under construction, including a new line from North Bay to Toronto. The lease of the Burketon to Bobcaygeon road is proving a paying investment. The promoters of the Canadian Northern have been busy extending their steel network and have now under contemplation a line from Winnipeg to Edmonton.

While exceptional activity has been observed on nearly all the roads referred to, the Grand Trunk has expended large sums in improving the system of laying double tracks, reducing grades, straightening out curves, lessening mileage, building stations, freight sheds and yards, engine houses and bettering terminal facilities. This work has been going on quietly for the past two or three years. A new freight house, offices and freight yard have been constructed at Toronto. Hamilton has also a new freight house. The terminal improvements at Montreal were completed some time ago. At Port Erie a new engine house has been erected, with a capacity of twenty-five engines. Allandale has been given a round house similar in construction to that at Port Erie. At Windmill Point an elevator of 1,000,000 bushels capacity is being constructed. In addition to the big outlays of money on these things, it is generally expected that the Canada Atlantic will soon be acquired by the Grand Trunk at a cost of $16,000,000.

In reply to a question as to whether the C.P.R. was making or would likely make a contract with the Consolidated Lake Superior Company for a big purchase of steel rails the management of the C. P. R. has stated that no contract had been made nor was there immediate probability of any rails being purchased from the company at the Sox. It was reported Thursday that the C.P.R. had asked the Consolidated Company if it could supply 40,000 tons of rails, delivery to begin in February next.

An announcement is made that the Canada Car Company has purchased forty acres of land for a new plant. The site is between the Grand Trunk railway tracks and the Lachine canal, about a half a mile west of Cote St. Paul road. The company will turn out cars and railway appliances.

Letters from station agents of the Canadian Pacific to headquarters complain of the rowdyism of the Nova Scotians and New Brunswickers who went out to the harvest fields. They made disturbances, damaged property and made trouble at most places where the excursion trains stopped. At one station on the north shore of Lake Superior they tore up flower beds until driven off by the agent's wife, who threatened them with a shotgun.

Owing to increased demands on the work turned out at Stratford shops, the Grand Trunk have found it necessary to increase present plant considerably. The erecting shop now in use is to be extended into the present boiler shop, giving twelve additional pits for engine repairs. Another hoist and turn-table will also be included in this extension. A new boiler shop, 196 feet long and 120 feet wide, is to be erected. It will be equipped with two electric travelling cranes one of 30 tons and the other 10 tons capacity. Electricity will be used in operating the machinery. A new tender shop, 326 feet long and 106 feet wide, will also be built. Besides these a new brass foundry, 70 feet long and 41 feet wide, will be added to the plant, and an addition of 50 feet is to be made on the east end of the present blacksmith shop. An extension of 70 feet in to be given the old tender shop on the east end, and an extension of 60 feet on the west end. The buildings to be erected and the additions made to the old ones give a total of 74,864 square feet additional floor space. A large amount of new and up-to-date machinery is to be installed in the different shops for the purpose of economically repairing with despatch the heavy power used on the middle division. An imposing Y. M. C. A. building has recently been erected on the company's property at Stratford, the cost of which will be about $25,000, the Grand Trunk contributing liberally towards its construction.

A MAGNIFICENT EXHIBIT

Were Those of the Canadian General and Canada Foundry Co. at Toronto.

The Electrical News states that the largest space in the Machinery Hall at the Toronto Exhibition was occupied by the Canadian General Electric Company and the Canada Foundry Company, their exhibit consisting of four carloads of electrical machinery and foundry products covering a space of 120 feet by 14 feet. The exhibit was most admirably displayed and gave the visitor some idea of the vast range of products made by these companies.

Starting at the entrance of this building, first appeared a display of cast iron pipe and special castings; following this a large space was devoted to the electrical interests, and here the attention of the wireman was fixed as he looked with envious eyes on the display of electrical supplies in such a variety as had before been unknown to him. The ladies attention was arrested by a display of electric cooking and heating apparatus. A full line of transformers was displayed, together with the core and coils used in their manufacture, demonstrating the method of insulation used in the manufacture of the well-known type "H"; also a complete line of direct current motors from 2 h. p. to 35 h. p., and standing nearby were two K10 railway controllers with the cover off, disclosing the mysterious working parts. A handsome marble switchboard formed the background.

On the wall was arranged a neat display of armature and transformer punchings and armature coils insulated ready to be placed in the machines. Next came a display of waterworks supplies, consisting of hydrants, valves and valve boxes. The "Easy" injector and Beaver post hole diggers caused no little interest and were shown and explained many times. A large and imposing pyramid of set screws and nuts next caught the eye, of which the variety was a surprise to even those mechanics who are constantly using them.

In the office was displayed views of the different factories and descriptive matter. A very handsome mantle illustrated the use of fire dogs, fenders and smoke guards to good advantage.

Then followed a display of the well-known "Northey" pumps; A "Triplex" pump 5 in. by 8 in. driven by a 10 h.p. motor supplying 180 gallons per minute for a water face, which is attracting much attention, not only from the mechanical standpoint, but being tastefully decorated with ferns and moss it is very much admired from an artistic aspect.

It contains a preamble and 10 articles, the most important of which bind the Thibetans to establish three marts for mutual trading between British and Thibet merchants, to allow traffic along existing routes and others which may be opened in future between India and Thibet, Thibet to pay an indemnity of $2,500,000 in yearly instalments. It is stipulated as security for the performance of the conditions of the treaty that British troops shall occupy the Chumbi Valley for three years and until the indemnity is paid. Better Than Expected.

Montreal, Sept. 19.—G. W. Thompson, manager of the Ogilvie Milling Company, received the following Saturday from Winnipeg: "Threshing at Carberry turned out better by several bushels than expected. Oak Lake, Alexander, Brandon and Stirling will go 20 bushels."

Boy's Sad Death.

Grimsby, Sept. 19.—A distressing accident occurred here yesterday afternoon, by which Master Bert Mabey, second son of S. E. Mabey, lost his life. The boy was found dead in his father's slaughter-house about 1 o'clock. It is not known how the accident occurred, but it is supposed that he was climbing up the windlass rope when he lost his hold and fell, the hook at the lower end of the rope catching under his chin and dislocating his neck.

REVIEW OF THE MARKETS

The following review of to-day's market was received by Messrs. W. F. Dever & Co., 'phone 416:—

Chicago, Ill., May 19.—Weather was quite a big line of long wheat thrown somewhat unsettled this morning and mkt just after the opening which gave the market a weak appearance. However good supporting orders were in evidence and market quickly rallied to above opening figures after the early break of a cent and a half. Wrenn and Armour were credited with large part of buying. We see no reason to change our bullish views on the ultimate outcome but that sharp movements in both directions are to be expected from time to time is unquestionable. These reactions tend to place the market in a healthy position and on the good breaks both December and May should be bought.

Corn.—Strong at one cent advance, shorts covered on strength of weather forecast which will prove quite a factor in corn movements for some time. A lot of corn has been damaged so far and this will tell. Corn, especially May, should be purchased.

Oats are certainly cheap at the price for May as the crop is of splendid quality, and with a shortage of other cereals this cereal should be a buy.

Provs.—Some very good bull arguments are being brought forth on provisions by well posted people. We are reliably informed that the bulk of the big stock of large holders will be held for a higher level, or shipped abroad before long. W. F. D. & Co.

RALLY DAY FOR MEN

The Sixth Annual was Held Sunday at the Y. M. C. A.

Yesterday was the Sixth Annual Bible Study Rally Day for the Y.M.C.A. Association Hall was crowded with men, and a male choir occupied the platform, and led in a bright song service, which preceded the address for the day. Mr. Homer Herd, of Toronto, who leads the choir, sang "Saved by Grace," with very impressive effect.

Rev. Wm. Stewart, D.D., President of the Bible Training School, gave a very helpful and practical address on "The Importance of Bible Study, and how to Study."

He said the state of mind and heart of the student had much to do with what he got out of Bible study. Spiritual discernment was necessary, for the natural man was not ready to receive the things of God. He must be a B.A. of King's College,—meaning that he had experienced the new birth. He must study with earnest attention also, and childlike humility, ready to take the word just for what it says. Earnest prayer in the power of the Holy Spirit was another feature named. The author of the book held the key to its revelation.

How was the Bible to be studied?

1—By its books; discover the author of each, the great theme of it. Here be illustrated short book study of Genesis and Matthew.

2.—By its truths.

3.—By its biography—the lives of the good and bad characters; each had their lessons.

4—By its chapters.

5—By phrases and words.

6—By dates and dispensations. It was necessary to understand the plan of the ages.

In concluding the doctor said that we would miss all, if the study of the word did not bring two results:

1—Blessing to the individual.

2—Making him a blessing to others.

Mr. P. K. Holmes, Physical Director, made announcement of the Bible Study programme in the Y.M.C.A. for the season.

REV. J. W. MACINTOSH RESIGNS

Has Been Pastor at Centreville for 7 Years.

Yesterday at Centreville Rev. J. W. McIntosh, M.A., who has been the pastor of the Presbyterian church there for seven years, expressed his intention of resigning, and a letter to that effect has been directed to the Presbytery of Peterborough, which meets to-morrow at Campbellford. Rev. Mr. McIntosh has filled the pastorate most faithfully and with great success, and his people will receive his resignation with regret. His purpose is to take a post-graduate course in Germany this winter.

COBOURG WINS ANOTHER

DEFEATED LOCAL BALL TEAM IN AN UP-HILL FIGHT.

Score was 5-3 – Home Team Failed to Hold a Lead – A Good Exhibition of Ball.

For the third time in three days a Peterborough team has gone down to defeat. On Saturday afternoon, Cobourg again won from the locals by two runs, the score being 5 to 3. A fairly large crowd witnessed the game, which was a good exhibition. Both teams fielded well and the stick work on each side was light. McCorry pitched good ball for the locals. He had fine control and kept the hits well scattered. He also fielded his position well. The infield worked well together Lamont and Sheridan picking up some hard grounders and Whiteroft gathering in two sky scrapers. Callaghan and McDonald each made two pretty catches, the latter having to cover considerable ground for one of his. There was really no sensational fielding. The nearest approach was Long's double play unassisted with the bases full. Graham put up his usual good game behind the bat and made two pretty catches of difficult fouls. "Reddy" Lamont's three bagger was the batting feature. It was a beautiful drive to right field fence. Downes, Cobourg's southpaw pitcher, pitched a good game and was well supported. Duncan played a very clever game at third, mating up several hard grounders. The outfield made several running catches. The game by innings was as follows:

First innings.—Turpin, the stalwart first base, fell a victim to McCorry's deceptive shoots, Burge went out on a hit to Long. Floyd dumped one in front of the plate and reached second, Graham's throw glancing off the runner. Bentley made three successive duets in the atmosphere. For the locals Sheridan went out on a grounder to third, Graham duplicated the feat, and Lamont slashed the Spalding to right field fence reaching third. It was up to the manager to deliver the goods, but Whittie's best was a grounder to second, which cut him off at the initial bag. Score 0-0.

Second innings.—Butler's career was finished on a hit to McCorry, Duncan couldn't locate the ball, Bulger and Payne singled. It looked like something doing, but Downes ended agony with a high fly to Whiteroft. Weatherston walked, Long and McCorry's safe singles to left scored Weatherston. Bulger's fumble of McDonald's grounder placed the latter on first and scored Long. Callaghan's pretty single over third brought McCorry home. "Dooley" boomed a fly to centre which Burge gobbled up. Graham's sacrifice advanced the base runners, but Lamont flew out to Bulger and the fun was over. Score 3-0.

Third innings.—Turpin reached second on Whiteroft's error, Graham made a pretty catch of Burge's high foul. Floyd sacrificed Turpin to third Bently drove a high one to left which Callaghan connected with. Burge gathered in Whiteroft's drive, Weatherston couldn't make connections with the ball and struck out. Long reached second on Bentley's error and stole third. McCorry went out by the Duncan-Turpin route. Score 3-0.

Fourth innings.—Butler singled over Lamont's head, Duncan's fly to Long was fatal. Butler made the grade to second on a wild pitch and scored on Bulger's nice drive to right Downes went out on a fly to Whiteroft and Sheridan made a nice pick up and throw of Turpin's grounder. McDonald's fly to second was gobbled up. Callaghan was out on a grounder. Sheridan was hit by a batted ball. Score 3-1.

Fifth innings.—McCorry made a beautiful stop of Burge's hard grounder. Floyd singled to left. Bentley boomed one to Callaghan, who made the proper use of it. Butler fanned.. Graham's grounder to Duncan was as usual gathered in by that worthy. Bentley muffed Lamont's pop fly. Whiteroft sacrificed him to second, but Weatherston could not deliver the goods. Score 3-1.

Sixth innings—Duncan made a safe hit over first. Bulger went out on a grass cutter to Lamont. Payne hit to centre field, scoring Duncan. McDonald gathered in Downes' fly and a moment afterward did the same with a drive from My Man Turpin's bat. Long fanned, McCorry went out on a grounder to short and McDonald's fly to Duncan was in the web. Score 3-2.

Seventh innings.—Burge planted a beautiful two bagger in centre field, Floyd hit over first, scoring Burge. Bentley reached the initial bag on Long's error. Butler singled to left filling the bases. Duncan drove one at Long, who gathered it in and touched the sack, putting out Butler. Bulger's hit to Callaghan was gathered in by the T. A. S. player. Callaghan's hit to short was fatal. Sheridan failed to reach first on a grounder to pitcher and Graham was out on a hit to first. Score 3-3.

Eighth innings.—Reddy gathered in Payne's grounder. Downes singled to right. Turpin followed with a hit to left centre bringing Downes to third. Burge went out on a hit to Lamont, Downes scoring. Turpin scored on Whiteroft's fumble of Floyd's grounder. Weatherston gathered in Bentley's fly. Lamont's pop fly back of second was gathered in. Whiteroft fanned. Weatherston dumped one in front of the pan and reached first. Long's liner was captured by Bentley. Score 5-3.

Ninth innings.—Butler hit to Lamont and was safe. He advanced to second on a passed ball. Duncan was presented with a complimentary to first. Bulger failed to connect with the sphere. Payne was out on a foul to Graham. McCorry gathered in Downe's grounder. McCorry and McDonald went out on grounders to pitcher and second respectively. Callaghan was hit by pitcher. Sheridan's fly to right was captured and the game was over. Score 5-3.

Mr. R. McKeown umpired to the satisfaction of both teams. Following is the score:

THE C. G. E.'S FIELD DAY

Several Interesting Events Pulled Off Successfully – Burns won the 5-mile Race.

The second annual field day under the auspices of the Canadian General Company's employees was held on Saturday afternoon at the Driving Park and a large number of people manifested interest by their attendance. The events were keenly contested and run off in a thoroughly satisfactory manner both to the spectators and to those participating. The street cars gave a fairly good service to the grounds and demonstrated their great usefulness in running in connection with the grounds. Following are the results of the sports:

Shop race, 100 yards—F. McGrath, A. Lang, R. Evans.

Fat men's race, 150 yards — John Murphy, James Murphy, R. Shepherd. Shop handicap, 100 yards.—A. Lang 7 yards; F. McGrath, scratch; A. Adamson, 7 yards.

Boot race—G. Seymour, A. O'Brien, E. Moss, A. M. Andrews.

A tug-of-war between the C. G. E. shop and the Quaker teams was won by the latter in two straight pulls. The teams were: Shop—G. Rutherford, G. Gauthier, D. Foley, W. Logan, W. O'Rourke. Quakers—John Murphy, J. A. Carl, J. Grisdale, James Murphy and P. O'Donnell.

Girls' race, 100 yards—Miss Bessie Mowrey, Miss Millie Moss, Miss M. Throop.

Ladies' race —Mabel Throop, Lillie Callaghan, Millie Moss. It was so difficult to decide the winners of this race owing to close finishes that it had to be run in three stages.

Half mile open—Burns, Harrison, Gauthier.

The finish of the five mile race between Burns and Payne took place on the grounds, where the men ran the last half mile. Their arrival aroused no great interest. The men displayed no great speed until the last quarter when Burns showed a remarkable freshness and finished with a brilliant spurt. Payne was some yards in the rear. Burns also entered the half-mile race and maintained a good lead for the entire distance.

The last event in the programme was that in which men tried their strength at putting the 16-lb. shot. Those who entered were Jas. Murphy, J. Grisdale, J. Rose, J. Carl, D. Foley, W. O'Rourke. The winners were, 1st, J. Carl, 2nd Jas. Murphy, 3rd, J. Rose. As a man named Campbell was making some trial throws a number of young boys crowded in upon the grounds, as is their custom, and when the shot on one occasion slipped and went in an unusual course it lit upon the back of a boy named Jack Anderson, and although he stated that he was not hurt, he must have felt something drop. Of course it is next to impossible to keep these youngsters from the track when any programme is being pulled off and it appears that some object less small would be the only cure.

The C. G. E. employees are deserving of congratulation upon the success of their programme. The officials of the day were: Starter, T. F. Manley; judges, John O'Brien and R. E. Layfield; timer, E. R. Sloane. The chairman of the committee was Jas. Hickey and the secretary F. J. McGrath.

RUGBY.

The locals should lose no time in starting their practice, as the first league game will be played here in Oct. 3, two weeks from next Saturday. On that date the Argonauts will play here, and as they are one of the fastest teams in the senior series the locals should be in the pink of condition when the referee's whistle sounds.

There will be a meeting of the Executive of the local club tomorrow night at 8 o'clock in the Oriental.

The Harvard II.'s football team will play the Rough Rider Juniors on Thursday afternoon. The Harvard II.'s would also like to get on games with other juvenile teams.

A very good practice was held on Saturday afternoon at the Oval. The following players were out:—Crowley, Pope, Cameron, Rickey, J. O'Brien, Mulhern, Deannard, Vic. Hamilton, S. Canniff, Dillon, F. Burnham, Robinson, Shaw, Ford, Morgan, Gillespie R. Craig, Gilbert, Scriver, P. Fitzgerald.

Peterborough is seething with rugby excitement. There's a good sporting town.—Toronto Star. This compliment is enough to make Lindsay turn green with envy.

BASEBALL.

There is a probability of Lindsay's playing here on Thursday.

Fitzgerald, who caught for the Shamrocks last season, has returned from Toronto, and will likely be on the T.A.S. team in Saturday's game against Bobsaygeon.

Flaherty is still keeping up his good work for Galt. In the final game on Saturday, which Galt won from Waterloo for a score of 12-0, Flaherty struck out 12 men and only allowed three hits.

"Buttons" Briggs, last year with Toronto, now with the Chicago Nationals, won a 17 innings' game against Cincinnati on Sunday.

The T.A.S. will play with Bobcaygeon in a Kawartha League game on Thursday afternoon next.

LAWN BOWLING.

RUSSIAN GENERAL KILLED

Gen. Mistchenko Commander of Eastern Cossack Brigade.

KUROPATKIN NEEDS SUPPLIES

Japs and Russians Clash But Only in Skirmishes--Heavy Fighting With Many Casualties-- Futile Sortie of the Garrison at Port Arthur With Heavy Loss is Reported.

London, Sept. 20.—The Morning Post's Shanghai correspondent telegraphs that there is an unconfirmed rumor there that Gen. Mistchenko, commander of the Russian eastern Coosack brigade, has been killed.

Other special despatches from Shanghai report that the Japanese on Saturday last repulsed an attack to the eastward of Yumentzushan, northeast of Yentai, inflicting a heavy loss on the Russians.

According to The Daily Telegraph's Tientsin correspondent Gen. Kuropatkin is in need of supplies, but his orders cannot be filled.

The Daily Telegraph's Che Foo correspondent telegraphs a report which he claims emanated from officers at Port Arthur, that the naval guns on Liaoti Hill fort are worn out from incessant firing, and that consequently the land for about two and one-half miles to the westward has been mined. The correspondent adds that the wearing out of guns is causing great anxiety.

Heavy Fighting.

St. Petersburg, Sept. 20.—Late yesterday a despatch was received from Gen. Kuropatkin announcing that Generals Rennepkampff and Samsonoff are conducting important reconnaissances, which have resulted in rather heavy fighting with many casualties. A despatch to a news agency from St. Petersburg yesterday says the reconnaissance were towards the Japanese front and right flank, resulting in the Japanese being driven back. The Russian losses, according to this version, are said to be slight, and it is not clear whether the "many" casualties referred to by Gen. Kuropatkin were inflicted or received.

Active in the North.

London, Sept. 20.—A despatch to a news agency from Harbin yesterday says the Japanese are displaying considerable activity in North Corea. A skirmish is reported between Japanese troops and a regiment of Cossacks at Fukchang, about 27 miles northeast of Hanuang.

Russians Lost Heavily.

London, Sept. 20.—A despatch from Tokio to a news agency says: "A strong Russian force made a sortie from Port Arthur the afternoon of Sept. 18 and attacked the Itzeshan fort, which was recently captured by the Japanese. Fighting lasted some hours, and the Russian were eventually repulsed with heavy loss.

Quiet at Mukden.

Mukden, Sept. 20.—All is quiet here yesterday, but fighting is anticipated in the neighborhood of Simintin, thirty-five miles west of Mukden.

Japanese Advance.

Berlin, Sept. 20.—The Tageblatt's Mukden correspondent, under date of Sept. 19, telegraphs as follows: "The Japanese are advancing slowly with a broad front, the left resting on the Liao River and the right on the mountains, probably the Fushan coal mines, twenty-seven miles eastward. The Russian troops have recovered their spirits."

British Ship Stopped.

Madrid, Sept. 20.—The Correspondents of this city publishes a despatch from Bilbao yesterday to the effect that a Russian cruiser had been seen off Cape Maria, and that she fired two shots at and took possession of a merchant vessel, supposed to be a British steamer. There is no confirmation of the report.

Best Package For Apples.

Ottawa, Sept. 20.—In response to departmental instructions, agents in Great Britain are reporting to the Department of Trade and Commerce as to the style of package most favored in England for apples. The report of the commercial agent in Leeds and Hull was received at the department, and its contents quite upset the theory that the box is the apple package universally approved in England. Of a dozen centres of importation to which enquiries were addressed, half of them reported in favor of the barrel, while others were divided in opinion as between the barrel and the box, preferring the latter only for the choicest varieties of apples.

Where Is Shortis?

Ottawa, Sept. 20.—The grand jury visited St. Vincent de Paul Penitentiary and reported that Shortis, the Valleyfield murderer, was not there. The Inspector of Penitentiaries says that Shortis is still there. He is perfectly satisfied on the point.

Ottawa, Sept. 20.—Department of Justice officials ridicule the story published in a Montreal paper that Shortis, the Valleyfield murderer, is not in the St. Vincent de Paul Penitentiary. He is there.

Not Representative.

London, Sept. 20.—(C.A.P.)—Secretary Pue of the Chamber of Commerce, Freemantle, West Australia, writes the London press stating that the telegrams read by Mr. Chamberlain in his Welbeck speech, purporting to be the sending of encouragement from the president of the Chamber of Commerce of West Australia, and says the message was not representative of the several chambers.

Dowie's Latest.

Chicago, Sept. 20.—Wearing a rich robe and mitre, modeled after those of an ancient Jewish high priest, John Alexander Dowie has proclaimed himself "John Alexander," first apostle of the Christian Catholic Church.

Balfour and Lyttleton Heroes.

London, Sept. 20.—Premier Balfour and Lord Lyttleton rescued several small boys from a boat yesterday off the Scottish coast. They were playing golf at Earl Weymss' links when they were interrupted by the loud cries of the boys, whose boat was being rapidly carried seaward. The Premier, heading the rescue party, launched a heavy surf boat, and all waded up to their waists to shove it clear. The boys were saved.

St. Luke's Harvest Festival.

The choir will have its last rehearsal to-night of the harvest festival music. All members are requested to be present.

Contributions of fruit and flowers for decorating the church will be thankfully received.

The harvest festival will be to-morrow night at eight o'clock. Rev. Dr. Cody, of St. Paul's, Toronto, will be the special preacher. Miss Nellie Davies, A.T.C.M., will sing. Special music has been prepared by the choir. The thank-offering will be for the cause of missions.

NO RESPONSIBLE GOVERNMENT

What does Mr. Mortimer Clark think now of the arrangement he made with Mr. Ross at the beginning of last year to close the courts and prevent justice? His excuse at the time was that it was his duty to be guided without regard to the circumstances, by his responsible adviser. He now knows what he might have known then, if he had used his common sense, that Mr. Ross was not his constitutional adviser, was not a representative of the people of the Province, but was a mere usurper, holding that position by fraud and corruption. His very anxiety to have the courts closed was a confession that he knew they would oust him from his usurped office. The action of his bogus supporters in declining to allow the proceedings to go on during the session, a safeguard of which they were not obliged to avail themselves, was an equally plain confession on their part that they knew they could not face enquiry. What they wanted was to escape justice, to prolong their fraudulent position for a session, to swindle the people out of their indemnity, and to vote grafts to their friends. It is no wonder under such circumstances that the squandering of the public money and property was unprecedented.

Some years ago men rebelled in Canada to secure responsible, representative government, and their insurrection is defended by many on the score of our natural right to such self-government. At the present moment we do not possess government by Ministers responsible to the people any more than was the case then. If Mr. Ross represents any body it is not the people of Ontario, but the pluggers of sault Ste. Marie, Michigan, the imported gufflans of Buffalo, New York, and other criminals, whose services he obtains by means of money purloined from the people of the Province.

Perhaps the Lieutenant-Governor will consider whether Mr. Ross is really his responsible adviser before he takes his unconstitutional advice in future.

In one of his fits of passion, Mr. Ross denounced troublesome members of the Opposition as "pirates." This is a fresh instance of the well known tendency of the criminal mind to dwell upon and allude to its own crimes. Mr. Ross was thinking of the grate, Minnie M., chartered to f-i-g-h-t for him.

Ministerial journals are blaming Mr. Gordon for advocating adequate protection without explaining what he means. Adequate protection is protection which protects. Protection is not adequate which allows a number of woollen factories to be closed and prevents any of them from being sold when put up at auction.

A number of appointments to the 14th King's Canadian Hussars are gazetted. Among them is N. H. Parsons, Esq., to be Major, with a footnote, as in the case of Dr. Pickel, "As a special case, and will be required to pass the qualifying examination." This occurs in nearly every gazette, showing the falsehood and dishonesty of Mr. Fisher's pretence.

ELECTION TRIALS SO FAR

A Considerable Difference Between the Parties in Political Honesty.

Prior to and during the trial of the Soo election protest, some Liberal papers emphasized the fact that a counter protest had been entered against Mr. Miscampbell, the defeated Conservative candidate, and on the strength of the allegations made in the counter petition promised that whatever might be proven against the Liberal member, Mr. Smith, things as bad or worse would come out against the Conservatives. Mr. Smith has been unseated by the judges after revelations of the most shameless corruption on record in this country. And the counter-petition against Miscampbell is withdrawn. Those papers who dwelt upon the charges against Miscampbell might explain why the counter-protest is withdrawn. One of them was the Hamilton Times.

The net result of the election trials so far is that in the case in which a Conservative was protested (Muskoka) the judges declared the election to be fairly clean, and dismissed the protest; that in the two elections in which Liberals were protested and in which the trials are concluded (North Perth and Sault Ste. Marie) gross corruption has been proved in one case and practically admitted in the other, and both members unseated; that two counter-petitions against the Conservative candidates in these ridings have been abandoned by the makers; and finally than in a trial of another protest against a Liberal member (North Grey) corruption has been proved, although as yet not decided to be by responsible agents of the candidate, and judgment is not yet given.

There begins to seem considerable choice between the parties in this province in the matter of honesty and cleanliness.—Ottawa Journal, Indep.

THE TRENT OUTLET

A Sensible Plea for the Public Benefit Against Selfish Scheme.

The Port Hope Guide, commendably anxious to have its town the eastern terminus of the Trent Valley Canal, in a recent issue says:—

"We notice the Lindsay Watchman-"Warder is paying considerable at-"tention to canal matters, and in the "illustrated articles published, the "Port Hope outlet is advocated as be-"ing the best for the Midland dis-"trict."

"The Post early pointed out the "advantages of the Port Hope route "over that via Trenton in the inter-"ests of our district, and urged our "Council and citizens to take some action. * * * We found it impossible to work up any enthusiasm. "Now that our cotem. is with us "something may be accomplished."

That the Post alone was not able to work up any enthusiasm, is, of course, no surprise, nor that with our assistance something could be accomplished. Unfortunately, it has not as yet our assistance in the project mentioned. We cannot join our cotem. in running ahead of wisdom, nor in advocating what neither it nor we know anything about. The Government surveyors reported in favor of the Trenton route, and while that report stands unamended we assume that the Trenton route is the better one. The article of which the Guide speaks was simply a reproduction of one of Mr. J. A. Culverwell's, copied from the Canadian Manufacturer, and published by us without comment. That is the only way in which the Port Hope outlet has been advocated in this paper.

To advocate that route merely because it might be in the interests of this district, as the Post says it has done, will never be the policy of this paper. We regard the canal in its national rather than in its local aspect, and anxious as we are to see this locality benefitted, we should be sorry to see the general utility of this great national undertaking sacrificed to the interests of any one locality. For we are satisfied that the evil effects of any error in the course or outlet of the canal would be so far-reaching, that even the interests of the favored locality would not be able to escape them.

It is a source of gratification that only the other day the government ordered a fresh survey of the Port Hope route with a view of more carefully comparing it with the Trenton route. That the Port Hope route would be more to the advantage of this locality, we are inclined to believe, and on that account should be glad if it were found by experts to be the better one in the general interests of the country; for then we could advocate it with the knowledge that we were serving both the local and national interests at the same time. Until that survey has been made our advocacy of either route will not be forthcoming.—Lindsay-Watchman-Warder.

FOOLS MOCKING AT SIN

REV. E. A LANGFELDT DISCUSSES QUESTIONABLE MERRY-MAKING.

The rector of St. Luke's Church preached last night from Proverbs xiv 9 "Fools make a mock at sin." He desired to stir the congregation's indignation, and to rouse their better feelings against merry-making of a kind that is worthy only of devils, and that was practiced by many, making light of sin, to treat sin as a joke. Frequently it is heard, for the sake of making excuses, that "it does not do to be too straightlaced in these matters;" that a man must live," when an apology for dishonesty is wanted; or "that a young man must sow his wild oats," when it is sought to excuse vice. To make sin pleasant and to rob it of its hideousness, the devil disguises its true character. Unfortunately there are some men and women who hire themselves to the evil one to help him in this dreadful work. And most actively is this done, by the "fools who make a mock at sin," who so dress it up and disguise it, and speak of it, as to make it appear altogether a light thing, and, indeed, not far removed from a joke.

For example. Take the sin of drunkenness. Treat this sin lightly, speak of it by those softer, slangy terms which men love to use, and you practically mock at this terrible evil, and rob it of its sinfulness. There are people who see in the wretched sight of a dazed, stupefied creature, staggering along the street, only something to be amused at. But can any good man or woman ever laugh at the sodden creature, staggering home to his drunken sleep, who stops to reflect that there is no sign of merriment in the wretched home to which he goes; that there is no smile on the lips of the broken-hearted wife who awaits the drunken husband; that the starved and ragged children, whose clothes he pawns off their backs, see nothing to be amused at their father's degredation.

"Again," the speaker said, "is it honest, is it right, to speak of the awful sin of impurity as nothing more than 'a sowing of one's wild oats,' or 'a seeing life'? Oh, away with such miserable, soul-destroying cant!"

The shortest and the saddest word in the English language is "Sin." Think of the sorrows, the woes, the suffering that is in the world this very day. Think of the tears that flow at this moment; of the hearts that are breaking; of the homes that are desolate. And think how none of these things would be if there were no such thing as sin.

Look at our hospitals, and all the sufferings that are to be witnessed in them; look at our gaols, with their histories of misspent, wasted lives; at our lunatic asylums with the sad life stories you may read there; at our penetentiaries, and then think how there would be no gaols, no asylums, no penetentiaries, in the world, if sin had never entered into it. Think of the homes out of which the light has gone for ever—of the gaps that can never be filled, and then of those words: "Sin entered into the world, and death by sin." Think of the life of the Man of Sorrows, and whence all those sorrows came, and then reflect that it was sin that made that great Sin Offering necessary. Surely only "a fool can mock at sin."

In closing Mr. Langfeldt exhorted his people not to be led away by any sorry jesting at sin. Sin has made a glad world sad; sin has changed men and women into devils; it has ruined homes; it has blighted lives; it has broken hearts; it has peopled hell. And "fools make a mock of sin." God will answer the fool according to his folly; and Satan, the author of evil, will pay him to the very last farthing the wages of sin, which is death.

THE BLACK WATCH BANDMASTER

He has Served Twenty-one Years in the Army.

The enthusiasm at the concerts of the Black Watch Band during the first week of its tour in Western Ontario has been even greater than that inspired by the Coldstream Guards. Every number has been encored, and sometimes double encored, and the audiences have cheered the playing of the band, and have concluded each concert with rising and singing the patriotic choruses, and giving a rousing "Hurrah!" At the music of the pipers the audience have not contented themselves with mere cheers, but have shrieked with delight. The Black Watch were heard under very disadvantageous circumstances at the Toronto Exhibition, what with circus shows and midway sounds, and in the morning lacrosse matches going on beside them, but on tour where a proper hearing can be obtained, it has not only made good but has surpassed its reputation as being Scotland's greatest band, and one of the finest military bands in the world to-day. When the band appeared in Windsor, the Detroit critics spoke in the most glowing terms of their playing.

INSTRUCTIONS TO DEAF AND DUMB

The Institute at Belleville will Open on Sept. 21st.

The Ontario Institute for the Deaf and Dumb, Belleville, will open on September 21st, and the following information is for pupils from this vicinity:—

Pupils from Orillia and stations in the Muskoka district will arrange to take the 8.10 a.m. train from Orillia to Blackwater Junction, thence on arriving at Port Hope at 12.50 p.m., to make connection with the train from Toronto, arriving there at 4.25 p.m. Pupils from Peterborough, Lindsay, Kinmount, Irondale Junction, Haliburton, Fenelon Falls, Coboconk, Brechen, Gelert and other points in this district will be expected on this train when it arrives in Port Hope.

Parents will please see that trunks or boxes are properly addressed, with the name of child on each piece, and checked to Belleville. Trunks ought to be of good material and strong, to stand handling on cars. Pupils placed in care of conductors at any point are always well looked after and forwarded to the institution.

Parents coming to Belleville with children, at the re-opening, or for the purpose of visiting the institution at any time, will save money by purchasing a return ticket for themselves at the railway station nearest their home.

The clothing sent with pupils should be marked with the owner's name, with indelible ink, and packed in a strong trunk or box, with a list of articles enclosed.

Clothing for children should be of good, plain, durable, material—well made. Cheap, flimsy machine boots do not last very long, and in most cases cannot be repaired. We shall not be responsible for jewellery or fancy trinkets sent with small children who are unable to look after them—they are not necessities here anyway.

Parents of new pupils are requested to accompany their children to the institution, if they can spare time and means, so that they may see where their little ones are placed and form an idea how they are likely to be cared for.

Parents of all pupils, or any requiring information concerning deaf children, are desired to communicate with me as often as they may be so inclined. Every letter is promptly replied to, and it is a pleasure to inform parents of the progress of their children.

THE "MINNIE M'S" CONSORT

Further Methods by Which the Soo Bye-Election was Carried.

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., Sept. 19.—There were revelations in the recent trial which were unsavory enough, but only the fringe of the mass of corruption which prevailed in the riding at the bye-election last October was touched. Had there been time to press all the charges, general and personal, to a conclusion, it is asserted by the petitioners, their lawyers and the Conservatives who are acquainted with the facts that the public would have been given an insight into machine methods which surpass any yet brought to light, bad as the past has been.

THE "PHILADELPHIA" CHARGES.

The "Minnie M." had a wicked side partner, the "Philadelphia," of which little was heard in the trial, but nothing of its most interesting trip. It had several times previously been placed at the disposal of the Liberal candidate. A couple of days before election it left here with fifteen passengers on board. Every one of them was a good Conservative voter, and their absence from town meant the loss of so many votes to Mr. Miscampbell. Cruising along the shore fifteen lighthouse keepers, who were certain Liberal voters, were taken on, and a substitute left in their places. These were taken to Michipicoten, their poll, and voted there. Had it not been for this little expedition they could not have voted at all, as they could not have got away from their posts. The result was the addition of thirty to Mr. Smith's majority. Besides being well paid, the substitutes had plenty to drink and eat and smoke, just as had the "Minnie M's" crowd of personators.

Thus the comparatively large vote at Michipicoten is accounted for, 42 at a place which was deserted after the "Soo" enterprise closed down. There were 19 fraudulent votes, 15 of men who could not have reached it but for the illegal expenditure of money, say three poll officials, and five legitimately polled votes. And of these 42 all but two were cast for Mr. Smith.

WHY THE "BOOTH" DID NOT GO.

There has been some speculation in uninformed quarters as to why the Conservative managers did not take some steps beyond the sending of the letter of warning to prevent the "Minnie M" crime being carried out. The telegraph is the first thing thought of. It would have been used if it was possible, but there is no line to Michipicoten. What telegraph line there is in that country, is under the control of the Algoma Central Railway, and therefore not available for such a service on that occasion. The only thing to be done was to charter a vessel, and the tug "W. A. Booth," being all that could be had, was bespoken by the committee, the intention being to send two men north on it to warn the Conservative scrutineers at the polls what was to be attempted. One or two Liberal workers, one a lawyer, got after the captain, and pointed out to him that as the tug was not licensed to carry passengers, they would see that he was prosecuted if he went out on the trip. The captain had other interests which weighed with him along with the threats, and he capitulated.

CONSERVATIVES DISSATISFIED.

There is a good deal of dissatisfaction among the local Conservatives, because the personal charges against Mr. Smith were not proceeded with. It was impossible to go on with them in view of the necessity for the judges to leave on Saturday, as otherwise there would have been no judgment unseating Mr. Smith until some time late in the fall, when the case should have been taken up again. So sure were the Conservatives of disqualifying the then member that they are feeling sore because their desires have not been realized.

MR. SMITH'S EXPENSES.

One matter which would have been brought up in connection with these charges would have been that of Mr. Smith's accounts. In his examination for discovery he said all his election expenses were $1,692.80, and had been paid through Dr. Gibson, his financial agent. He admitted receiving $450 or $500 from a manager for them refused to disclose, and paying it to Fred Dennison through Dr. Gibson for fear outsiders' wages complaining. The Conservatives fought to be able to prove that it was not for wages. At that time Mr. Smith stated that Mr. Dennison did not subscribe to his election fund. In his examination last Monday, when he attended before Judge Johnston to reply to questions which the High Court had ordered him to answer, Mr. Smith said he got $500 from Mr. Commee in return for a mortgage on his house. Later he had $1,004.75 from the same source, which he drew in cash from the Bank of Commerce in twenty-fives and twenties. He adds in his examination that he found the latter most useful at that time. According to his statement he gave Dr. Gibson $450, carried the rest in his pocket and gave it to the Doctor in large amounts. Dr. Gibson's account shows that he received $450 from Mr. Smith in August and $200 later on, these being the only sums he got from the candidate. Had the case gone on Mr. Smith would have been asked to account for his disposition of the difference.

MANY PROMISES MADE.

As to promises made, they were many. The vacant jail surgeonship is said to have been offered to four practitioners for their support. Mr. Allan McNabb has made affidavit and was ready to swear that he was offered the crown timber agency. Mr. McNabb is an old-time Liberal, who believes the party "has grown grossly corrupt." Peter McEvoy is alleged to have been illegally relieved of pulp wood dues, amounting to $150. Mr. Montague, a talented metallurgist, who lives here, had for some long time tried to get some mining patents issued for locations at Whiskey Lake, near Massey. He prepared a pamphlet exposing the defects in the mining laws, and was about to publish it. Mr. Smith personally and through a mutual friend sought to dissuade him by promising to see the patents put through, and subsequently by the added promise of Mr. Stoddart's position in the chemical laboratory and $500.

There are several other counts in the long indictment which the petitioners claim they would have been able to prove.

ACTIVE GOVERNMENT OFFICIALS

Some of the government officials and employes who figured in the trial or in charges not taken up were Dr. James McLaurg, jail surgeon; Nelson Harmon, provincial constable; W. D. Nicholls, Indian agent; W. C. Kilpatrick, postmaster and Mayor of Copper Cliff; Wm. Godwin, mayor of Sheldrake and expendent of road monies; Thomas Wigg, Crown timber agent at Thessalon; Joseph Monaghan, Crown timber agent; H. N. Young, Crown lands agent; Alex. McIntyre, president of the Liberal Association in Sheldon, license inspector and commissioner for taking affidavits; H. A. Mines, postmaster at Sheldrake; John Boyle, expender of road monies; Capt. James Gauley, who has a large Government contract on the French river.

The disqualification of workers carries with it a danger to future candidates. Anyone who personally employs any of the men reported for eight years to come, will have his election voided for that reason. The men reported are disfranchised for that time and cannot hold any Government position or contract.—Toronto News, Indep.

Hicks sold out to Jonathan Ogden, who ran the said stage for several years, and we understand that Weller bought out Ogden. NO GREAT ENTHUSIASM

Belgrade, Lavishly Decorated, However, Filled With Visitors.

Only Four Governments Have Sent Special Messages of Congratulation to King Peter On His Coronation, the Others Being Represented in a Merely Formal Manner—Memory of the Regicides Still Casts a Shadow.

Belgrade, Sept. 20.—The city, which is lavishly decorated, is filled with visitors, but there is no great enthusiasm over the approaching coronation of King Peter, which will occur to-morrow. The weather is cold and rainy and threatens to spoil the festivities, while the meagre harvest tends to give the people the inclination to complain of the waste of money spent in the coronation, although the amount is not large.

Only the Governments of Germany, Austria, Italy and Roumania have sent special messages of congratulations. The other powers will be represented at the coronation in a merely formal manner, and some of them, like Great Britain and Holland, who withdrew their Ministers after the assassination of King Alexander and Queen Draga, are taking practically no part in the affair. In fact, the memory of the regicides still casts a shadow over the court. It is rumored that King Peter receives threatening letters, and is in constant communication with the secret police.

Caused a Sensation.

Belgrade, Servia, Sept. 20.—All the powers have instructed their Ministers here to attend the coronation of King Peter on Wednesday next, except Russia, whose action has caused a sensation.

ROME STRIKE ABANDONED.

Rome, Sept. 20.—The workmen have decided to abandon the strike, and the city has resumed its normal aspect.

At Palermo, Sicily, however, the strikers and police were in collision during yesterday, and the former displayed a red flag.

Disturbances also occurred at Genoa yesterday in which anarchists violently participated. They burned a number of street cars and destroyed a flag hoisted in honor of the birth of the Crown Prince. Lack of bread led to the outbreak at Genoa. Two thousand troops have been sent to that city.

Premier Giolitti left yesterday for Racconigie, Piedmont, to perform his official duty as Crown notary, of registering the birth of the Crown Prince.

Lugano, Switzerland, Sept. 20.—A meeting held here yesterday to protest against the labor policy of the Italian ministry developed riotous proceedings. The rioters proceeded to the Italian Consulates, from which they tore the Italian coat of arms and threw it into the lake.

C.P.R. Boilermakers Work.

Winnipeg, Sept. 20.—The strike of C. P. R. boilermakers is over. By an agreement reached between the men and the company on Saturday night, the former consented to return to work yesterday morning. The wage difficulty was settled by a compromise, the men securing an addition of one cent per hour to their scale, bringing their scale up to 32 cents to 34 cents per hour. Besides this, a clause of the agreement provides for further consideration of their schedule by the company.

Would Like Peaceful Solution.

Toronto, Sept. 20.—The eighth annual convention of the International Structural Iron Workers' Union opened in the Labor Temple on Church street yesterday. About 200 delegates were present from the United States and Canada. The delegates were welcomed by Mayor Urquhart and Ald. Ramsden. The president Frank Buchanan of New York, in replying, said that trade unionism desired a peaceful solution of industrial problems, but was prepared to fight for the rights of labor.

Labor Congress.

Montreal, Sept. 20.—A large number of delegates from all parts of the country attended the opening session yesterday of the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada. John A. Flett, president, was in the chair. Mayor Laporte extended a welcome to the delegates. The sessions will continue all the week.

G.T.P. Party Returns.

Toronto, Sept. 20.—Senator Cox has returned from the five weeks' tour of investigation and inspection to the Pacific coast. The other members of the Grand Trunk Pacific party continued east to Montreal. No information has yet been given out as to the western terminus.

To Extradite Hamel.

Ottawa, Sept. 20.—The Imperial Government have intimated their willingness to try and arrange with the Cuban authorities for the extradition of the Montreal absconder, Hamel, who is wanted for forging cheques on the Bank of Montreal to the amount of $30,000.

NORTH YORK PROTEST TRIAL.

Toronto, Sept. 20.—The following additional charges against the Hon. E. J. Davis were filed yesterday afternoon in connection with the North York protest trial, which opens this afternoon in Newmarket: "The petitioners charge that the respondent collected a large sum of money to be used, and which was used to assist in electing him at the said election, and that such money, being an amount far beyond what the respondent has accounted for, received by the respondent from various sources prior to election day and was used by him for corrupt purposes in connection with the said election, and the petitioners say that one of the sources from which the said money was collected was from a company called "The Lake Superior, Long Lake and Albany River Railway Company," which said company procured a charter for the building of a railroad through Northern Ontario. The said company were desirous of having the Ontario Government vote them a land bonus, and in order to procure such bonus two of the members of the said company, namely, Messrs. Eugene Cane, an agent of the respondent at Newmarket, Ont., and Andrew Yule, another agent in the same place, approached the respondent to secure his influence in having the said bonus passed by the Legislative Assembly of the Province of Ontario, but the respondent demanded as his consideration for his assistance in this regard from the said company the sum of ten thousand dollars as a subscription from the said company to his campaign in the said bye-election, and the said Andrew Yule, Henry S. Cane and Eugene Cane, did thereupon pay to the said respondent the sum of five thousand dollars in cash for the said purposes, but by reason of the fact that the balance of the amount demanded by the respondent was not forthcoming, the said respondent and his associates in the Ontario Cabinet did not support the granting of a bonus to the said railway, and the petitioners charge that the said sum of money received by the respondent was used or very largely used in corrupting the electors in the north riding of York at the said bye-election."

Petrolea, Sept. 20.—On Saturday evening a bold highway robbery was committed in this town. Edward Metcalf of Glencoe and William Wilcox of Oakdale were walking on the G.T.R. track, about 10 p.m. A little north of the pork factory they came up with a stranger to whom they bade good-night, for reply he pointed a revolver at them and demanded their money. The former handed over $17 and the latter $22. The highwayman ordered them to walk backward about 100 feet, which they did. The stranger then hurriedly departed in the opposite direction. The men ran downtown and informed the police, and though a thorough search is being made no clue has yet been found to trace the highwayman.

Six Killed in Crap Game Fight.

Cairo, Ill., Sept. 20.—A negro employed at Bryan's Landing, four miles below here, reports that in a quarrel over a crap game six men were killed, three whites and three negroes. A white man who had lost his money in the game went away and summoning a party of friends returned. A fight with rifles followed.

Britain Protests Thibet.

St. Petersburg, Sept. 20.—The Russian press, discussing the Thibetan treaty with Great Britain, unites in agreeing that the latter country has succeeded in establishing a virtual protectorate over Thibet.

Steamer Put Under Arrest.

Quebec, Sept. 20.—The steamer Truma, bound from Montreal to England, has been attached for $25,000 as a result of the collision on Wednesday with the Ethel Clark.

THE AMATEUR MINSTRELS

FIRST STEP TAKEN TOWARDS ORGANIZATION OF A SHOW.

Some Interesting Facts Relative to the Minstrels of Many Years Ago

Following the announcement printed in the local papers calling a meeting of all interested in getting up an amateur minstrel entertainment, to be given November next, a good number gathered in the office of Mr. A. L. Davis to talk over matters and begin the organization. Among those present and interested in the project besides Mr. Davis were Messrs. H. Rush, Lount, Crane, Kenner, Robertson, Dobbin, Nelson, Neil, Scott Moore, Roadhouse and others. The fact that the members of the C. G. E. Benefit Society had prepared to put on some such entertainment in the near future was brought to the attention of the meeting and a committee was appointed to confer with the C. G. E. Co. men and if possible arrange to run the thing together, using all the available talent.

It is proposed to give the entertainment on two successive nights, providing almost an entire change of programme. There is plenty of talent to be had and in competent hands the whole should be welded into a pretty fair success. Fortunately an amateur minstrel entertainment is the one thing over all others on which no anxiety need be taken as to whether or not a full house will be had. A full house goes without saying and if the expenses can be held down to reasonable limits a good surplus should be left over and available for the objects in view.

The meeting adjourned until Monday night next, when it is expected a start will be made. In the meantime arrangements will be looked into, in the way of rooms for practice, music, etc.

The proposal to put on the minstrels recalls some memories of entertainments of the same kind given away back in the 60's. The town, at that time, had to rely largely on its own efforts for amusements. The travelling companies paid visits at long intervals, one of the best known being the famous Cool Burgess. At the time mentioned there lived in town a number of choice spirits who enjoyed the fun of getting up the show, and there was no lack of talent, especially singers. Several entertainments were given by aggregations calling themselves "The Canadian Minstrels," "The Jolly Dogs," "The Serenaders." Two halls were available, the old music hall, which was the upper story of the brick market building long ago pulled down. The other hall had the loyal and high sounding title of "Victoria Hall" and was the floor over the group of stores now occupied by Miss Delaney, the Imperial Book Co. and Stroud's. It was in the hands of Dr. Wm. Coulter, who carried on a drug business across the street. The hall was not large but it held 400 or 500 and on occasions was packed to the doors.

Of the coterie of spirits who contributed to the olio by voice and gesture about the only two left to recall the scenes are our esteemed fellow townsman, Mr. Harry Rush, and Mr. W. H. Wrighton. Mr. Wrighton was a star performer, and as an end man took the cake. He sang with feeling and earnestness, "Let us Speak of a Man as You Find Him," while William N. Kennedy gave the pathetic and once popular song, "Over the Hills to the Poor House." The Kennedy family were musical; two sisters will be remembered by many of our older citizens, and James and William Kennedy were foremost wherever music was the theme. Jas Kennedy possessed fine culture and fetched the audience in the style after which he sang "Her Bright Smile Haunts me Still." Then there was Fred Babbidge, who possessed a magnificent bass voice, George Leonard an equally fine bass, Charley Coulter, who played first violin, Tom Darcy, a tenor of some consequence, Dave Hamilton, an incorrigible joker, Tom Maloney, Jack Bush, Bob Crowe and George Crowe and Fred Blackett. Put that aggregation on the stage, set in the circle, all dressed in immaculate white shirts and swallow-tailed, or "claw-hammer" coats, with collars of gigantic dimensions, woolly heads of surprising size and the audience got something for their money. There was music in the singing, none of your freak songs, but good plain ballads with a fetching chorus that rounded out into a stream of harmony that was mighty pleasant to listen to. The opening chorus, "Life on the ocean wave," was just from Russell's pen and a new thing. The jokes were good, mostly local, and drew roars of laughter, while the farce at the end of the programme brought down the house. A favorite selection, sung in chorus, was the "Buccaneer's Bride," a thing of fine harmony and worth listening to. Singing of this selection is now a lost art; it went out with the boys who sang it.

AN ITALIAN YOUTH DEAD

Camillo Donofore Succumbed to an Attack of Pneumonia.

Camillo Donofri, an Italian youth, aged eighteen years, died at St. Joseph's Hospital, from pneumonia. He had been ill for about two weeks. He had lived in Canada about two years.

THE ART EXHIBITION

That to be Given in the Y. M. C. A. Open to the Public.

Doubtless many people will be interested in the art exhibition which will be thrown open to the public at two o'clock tomorrow afternoon in the Y.M.C.A. The different pieces of work by prominent artists will be on view from two o'clock until six during Wednesday Thursday, Friday and Saturday. An announcement made a few days ago would convey an impression that admission to the exhibition would only be by invitation, but it is explained today that everybody may do so who so desires. The circulars issued were only intended for those who might not possibly see the announcements in the papers.

BOYS AND STREET CARS

They Have a Habit of Stealing Rides Company not Responsible for any Accident.

To the Editor of The Review.

Dear Sir,—We would like to call the attention of the public to a habit the boys of Peterborough have developed since the street cars began to run and which is not only dangerous to themselves but very annoying to the company and its employes. This is the practice of stealing rides. The boys hang on and sit on any part which projects from the body of the car. The other other night a boy was found curled up in the fender which had been folded up against the back of the car. We do not blame the boys very much as it is quite natural for them to do tricks of this kind, but we wish the parents to distinctly understand that we will not be responsible for any accidents that occur to the children when they are stealing rides, and if they would point out the danger the children are running in doing so they would probably stop. It is a great wonder some of them have not been hurt already as they jump off the cars as soon as they see the conductor coming towards them and in several cases boys have narrowly escaped being run over by horses travelling on the road. If the parents will kindly see that their children do not indulge in this practice any more this will not only confer a great favor on the company but probably save their boys from being seriously injured. We shall be obliged in future to have boys arrested who persist in hanging on to the cars.

Yours truly,
THE PETERBOROUGH RADIAL RAILWAY COMPANY.

THE INDUSTRIAL WILL BE GLORIOUS

Arrangements are Being Perfected—The Programme—Exhibits to be all Placed Monday—Judging of Stock to Begin Tuesday—Official Opening that Day at 2 O'clock.

The directors of the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition are busy men these days, for the time is growing near when their efforts in the direction of a record-breaking fair must show their results. Everything has so far been arranged on a scale that would give the most pessimistic individual the assurance that this year's success will eclipse the best that has gone down to history. The directors have as a guiding star the fact that Peterborough is the best town in the Midland district, or for that matter, in any district, that the country surrounding forms, as a whole, one of the best agricultural communities in Ontario, and that its constituents can be enthused to support a good show and put forth such effort as will make it a decided triumph. To prove these facts, one has but to look at the various fall fairs that are held throughout the County. All of these are on a good footing, and some have a splendid rating. It has often been suggested that with such conditions existing throughout the County, one large Central exhibition, thoroughly representative of the County's best, and not necessarily detracting from the merit of the other shows, should be an easy matter. This has been demonstrated to some extent in the past, but it will be realised in a more marked degree than ever, this year. The efforts of the directors point to it, the flood of entries coming in tends to verify it, and now in view of the approaching date, some information with regard to each day's programme cannot fail to be of interest.

On Monday, every exhibit has to be placed in position. The space in the main building is well taken, and the merchants will make a grand display. In fact they always do, but there is evident this year a more decided interest, and all available space will be used to very best advantage in a demonstration of the excellence of Peterborough stores. Further all stock,—cattle, swine, sheep and horses—to be placed on exhibition, must be brought in on Monday and be ready for judging by nine o'clock Tuesday morning.

At ten o'clock on Tuesday morning the judges will begin their work with the cattle, horses, sheep and swine. The entry list in all classes is very large, and the very best in the district will undoubtedly be on exhibition. Horses promise to be particularly strong, and keen interest always attaches to this feature of the fair. The judges will be Mr. Smith, of Newmanville, Mr. Colin Campbell, of Montreal, Mr. Wm. Hendrie, of Hamilton, gentlemen regarded as eminent authorities in matters pertaining to the horse world. The patrons of the Fair may be assured that everything by way of accommodation for their entries will be available at the grounds.

At two o'clock the Exhibition will be officially opened, and His Honor, the Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario, will press the button. This will be the first visit to Peterborough of the Hon. Mortimer Clark, and great interest will attach to the presence at the Exhibition of so eminent a gentleman. He will be the guest of Hon. J. R. Stratton while here. The band of the 57th Regiment will be present at the opening and during the afternoon an excellent programme of music will form part of the programme.

Some features that are attracting a great deal of attention in other places have been secured by the directors of the Peterborough Exhibition. There are Mr. Beith's prize string of hackney stallions and mares—which captured so many honors at St. Louis, and Grotman's latest importations of magnificent Clydesdales, also prize winners. These animals will not only be of interest to the public, but the farmers will be especially concerned in viewing these horses. On Tuesday afternoon also there will be a sale of pedigreed shorthorn cattle, sheep and swine by Mr. J. W. Gardiner, auctioneer. The speeding ring events promise to be well filled. For the first day the events are a trot, a hurdle race, and a flat race. The judging of delivery horses and rigs for the special prize will also take place on Tuesday afternoon.

The big event will be the concert in Brock st. rink on Tuesday evening. The band of the 57th regiment will meet the famous visitors at 7 o'clock. The doors of Brock st. rink will be opened at 7.15. Tickets are now on sale at Madill's drug store. The band has been creating a most favorable impression wherever they have played. In Detroit the papers went into raptures over them, and everywhere in fact encores have been showered upon them. It will undoubtedly be one of the grandest musical treats ever given in Peterborough.

On Wednesday the fair will, of course, be going in full blast. Features that promise to attract considerable attention during the Fair will be a splendid art exhibit, to which some of the best known Canadian artists will contribute, and it will embrace many works of great value. A display of kindergarten work, by the primary departments of the local schools will also contain much to interest all who visit the fair.

During the afternoon of the third day there will be a parade of prize-winning stock. This will be a most popular feature, judging from the fact that it is always considered one of the grand events of exhibitions in large cities.

The railways and boat liveries are all making arrangements to carry big crowds to Peterborough during the fair and excursion rates will be available. The population of the town will undoubtedly be augmented by many thousands, and those who go into the accommodation business may at night have to put their guests asleep and stand them in the corners. The Street Railway Company will have the very best service arranged for Exhibition days, so that the best possible facilities for getting to the grounds will be at the service of the people.

The directors state that there will be a very good line of side attractions for the Exhibition, among them being the famous English Gypsies.

The following programme is to be rendered by the 57th Band on Tuesday afternoon, and a glance at the different numbers is indicative of its excellence:—

March, "Crimson Flush," ...Alexander
Overture, "Poet and Peasant ...Von Suppe
Novelette, "The Gondolier." ...Hayes
Selection, "Ernani," ... ...Verdi
Serenade, "La Paloma,"... .....Yradier
Cakewalk, "Allezzan" ... Holtzman
"Reminiscences of Scotland"...Godfrey
Descriptive, 'Down by the Swanee River ....Mydleton
Medley, "Georgia," ... ... Huffman
March, "Manisot," ... . Brock

The directors in charge of the art exhibit at the Fair could make use of a show case in which to place the various articles which are to be shown under the auspices of the Woman's Art Association of Canada. This exhibit will be made up of various pieces of fancy needle work, spanning and weaving some of which has been wrought by the Doukhobors and other immigrants some are aboriginal but all very interesting. The object of this Association is to prevent from decline home handicrafts and artistic industries. The directors would be pleased to have the service of a show case for the Exhibition.

At the request of the President, Mr. R. R. Hall has offered a silver cup for the championship of the County in Association football the competing teams to play the first game on Tuesday 27th, and the final on the succeeding days. Clubs are requested to make their entries at once with Mr. Wilmot.

REVIEW OF THE MARKETS

The following review of to-day's market was received by Messrs. W. F. Dever & Co., 'phone 416:—

New York, Sept. 20.—At opening the market was irregular with evidence of realizing in places. London quotations gave no particular lead before arbitrage houses were sellers, and traders as a whole were bearish. Western wire houses seamed to have stock for sale, but there was fair general support. U.S. Steels were about weakest features. There were obvious protecting orders for U.S.Q. at 67, but common was allowed to take care of itself and gave signs of weak and ever extended bull account. Canadian Pacific responded very easily to strength shown in London. Although London had some bull stories on Reading, common divided the arbitrage; selling makes bull account there look rather weak. Western houses are rather bearish.

Painful Accident at the Peterboro Canoe Factory.

This afternoon about two o'clock a young man named L. B. Double met with a very painful accident. He has only been in this country a short while and has been employed with the Peterborough Canoe Co. While operating a planer he in some way managed to get his arm caught in the machine and his hand was cut off at the wrist. The ambulance was immediately summoned and the unfortunate young man taken to Nicholls' Hospital.

WILL HAVE FINE FACTORY

The Green Pump Works to Occupy a New Building.

A few months ago Mr. Walter Greene had to undergo the misfortune of having his finely equipped foundry totally destroyed by fire. Mr. Greene, with characteristic enterprise, at once began the erection of a new building, more complete and commodious than the former. The result of his efforts is seen in the handsome building which now stands on the site of the old foundry. The structure is eighty-five feet long and fifty-five feet wide, and, being a foundry, of course, is only one storey high. It is very well lighted, a fact which one recognizes more clearly when he is told that there are seventeen hundred panes of glass in it. The building is also well provided for in the matter of ventilation. The structure is of brick, with a cement foundation and a felt cement roof. It is composed of moulding shop, chipping room, and blacksmith shop, together with a store room for the coke and moulding sand, and a convenient coke oven for use in the moulding room. In fact, the whole plant is most conveniently fitted out. The cement foundation was made by Mr. Greene's own employees, the brick by McFadden & Goodwin, and the roofing by Maitland & Haggart.

Mr. Greene manufactures pumps, windmills, etc., besides making castings for such firms as the Canadian General Electric Company, Canadian Ultimator Co., Adam Hall, and the Canadian Cordage Company.

CLEAN MONEY IN CHANGE

Mr. Fred Clarke Recognizes the Danger to the Public Health of of Disease Germs.

Probably few people are aware of the presence in long-used money of germs which, scientists state, are inclined, not to healthful conditions, but to carry with them the danger of imparting disease to those who need the money. These "incipient assassins"—for the germs can be regarded as little else—have in fact been known to be contagion's best assistants and it follows that the country which keeps its money clean and unspotted from the world, by not too long usage, is doing a good work for the health of the people of the country. The same thing may be said of Mr. Fred A. Clarke, the George st. hatter, who announces that he will henceforth give only good clean money in change to those who make change at his store. Of course, Mr. Clarke is running considerable risk, for it is easy to see that he will accumulate considerable money that should have been called in long ago, but he doubtless appreciates the truth of contentions advanced by scientists with reference to germs. Henceforth, therefore, nothing but good clean money will be given in change at the Clarke store.

MADE ANOTHER CAPTURE

But the Police made Very Little Out of this Man.

The Chief of Police and Officer McGinty made another capture this morning, but nothing came of it. A lanky New Englander was discovered at Tousley's hotel on Charlotte st. and somehow or other the police got wind of it that he was probably a member of the gang of dynamiters. The man refused to give his name, so the officers obtruded themselves upon the seclusion of his boudoir and walked him over to the station. The man shed copious tears, and his face was of that kind that wrinkles up into a pitiful spectacle when his weepers become busy. He said he had never done anything wrong in his life and always made an honest living. He had lately been to the doctor, and as proof of this showed a bottle of medicine. A flask of whiskey was also in his possession and a new lantern and horsewhip. It was a rather strange mixture of properties. The man gave his name as Calvin Starkey, born in Vermont, aged 47, Presbyterian. He stated that he had been working lately for George Hastings, a farmer near Belleville, and was now on his way to Toronto, to see if relatives there could not get him into the hospital. He stated that he had lost about eleven dollars in Belleville and Mr. Tousley was going to help him to Toronto. Starkey was the most unlikely-looking burglar in the world and the police allowed him to escape. He promised that he would get out of town quicker than usual.

GEORGE-ST LEAGUE.

A Very Successful Rally Was Held Last Evening.

George st. Epworth League held a very enjoyable social last evening in the Sunday School room of the church. There was a large attendance and a pleasant time was spent. What was called an autograph competition took place. Each one in the audience was given a ticket and fifteen minutes were allowed for the collection of signatures. The one who collected the most names in the allotted time received a League paper for a year as a prize. The winner was Miss A. Whiten. After this the following programme was rendered:

Song—Mr. Jas. Brown.
Reading—Mrs. Morgan.
Solo—Mr. J. Bowes.
Violin solo—Miss M. Crothers.
Solo—Miss B. Parnell.

Refreshments were served at the conclusion of the programme and the gathering dispersed after singing the National Anthem. Next Monday evening there will be a missionary meeting at George st. church at which addresses will be given by Rev. Mr. Jolliffe, Rev. Mr. Lewis and Rev. Mr. Crothers. This will be conducted by the Epworth Leagues of George st., Charlotte st. and Park st. Methodist church.

ADEQUATE PROTECTION

Not Necessarily Prohibitive — The Globe Reasoning on the Subject.

Mr. Borden's phrase "adequate protection" may be too indefinite and elastic, but it is not so ridiculous as is some of the criticism which it has called forth. For example, consider this bit from the Toronto Globe:—

In the first place Mr. Borden is going to give adequate protection to the Canadian manufacturer. That means that the duties against The British manufacturer will be higher than they are now—high enough, indeed, to virtually exclude him from this market.

Let us see about that. Adequate protection is, we suppose, a protective tariff high enough to adequately protect the home producer. But cannot the home producer be adequately protected unless foreign competition is excluded? The Globe says no. But when the Globe says so the Globe doesn't know what it says. The Globe does not believe and will not venture to say that the Canadian makers of, let us say, agricultural implements, are not adequately protected by the twenty per cent. tariff. It will assert vigorously that that rate of duty affords them adequate protection. But, so far from excluding foreign agricultural implements from the Canadian market, it did not prevent the importation last year of agricultural implements to the value of $3,171,857. And, by the way, foreign competition in this line of industry was not less free when the tariff was higher than it is.

Mr. Borden would probably smile at the accusation that by "adequate protection" he seeks to exclude British manufactures from Canada. A protective tariff is not necessarily a prohibitive tariff.—Hamilton Herald, Indep.

WOMAN'S GREATEST ENEMY

Constipation the Cause of most Women's Troubles— An Easy Way to Permanently Cure this Painful Condition.

There are few women indeed who do not suffer with chronic constipation. Nearly all are always to some kind of medicine to correct this trouble, and yet they get nothing but temporary relief. One period of constipation is followed by another, and it's physic, physic, physic, year in and year out, till life becomes a burden.

There is now a sure cure for this condition and a cure that does not have to be repeated. It is Dr. Leonhardt's Anti-Pill.

Dr. Leonhardt, of Lincoln, Neb., is the author of this prescription. He used it for years with wonderful success in his own large practice as a remedy for dyspepsia, biliousness, and constipation.

Many ladies who have suffered for years are now enjoying good health and a perfect freedom from the old constipation through the use of Anti-Pill.

Mrs. Tabb, 867 Emerald St. North, Hamilton, Ont., says:

"I am no longer troubled with constipation. I cannot praise Anti-Pill too highly."

Over the Border

By ... ROBERT BARR.

Author of "Jennie Baxter, Journalist," Etc.

Copyright, 1903, by Frederick A. Stokes Co.

"You are lying to me," she gasped.

"Far from it, my little lady. How could I imagine you did not know? You are surely the only person in London who is ignorant of it. Why is everything so quiet near Whitehall, where the generous citizens have been so solicitous about us of late? Merely because the center of interest has changed to the other end of the town, and a rare show was put on the stage for all good people to see, free of cost to themselves, unless they have the brains to know of what they are bereft by Strafford's death, which is most unlikely."

As he spoke he had been edging toward her, catlike, but she paid no heed to him. Then with a spring he caught her wrists, but she did not move or make any effort to free herself. She looked dully at him, as if wondering why he acted so.

"You will be pleased to withdraw yourself, sir, and let me go. My heart is broken."

She spoke with forced calmness, but there was a tremor in her tone that cast doubt on her former assertion regarding the tears.

"Your heart is not broken, and if it was I'd mend it for you. Absurd! Why, you knew the man for scarce a day, and that time is full short for the growth of any large affection."

"I shall never love any as I have loved him."

"Tush! How little you know of yourself. You are a very goddess of love, and I will"—

He released one wrist and endeavored to slip his disengaged arm about her waist. This seemed to rouse the girl from her stupor, for she suddenly thrust him back and, taking him unaware, sent him sprawling; then she sprang for the door. But he was as nimble as she, for, quickly recovering himself, he held her tight before she could turn the key.

"Sir, you forget who I am. Release me at once and molest me no further."

"Divinest of the fair, I swear to you"—

She whisked herself free of him, and, darting to the other side of the room, whipped down a thin rapier from the wall.

"You will be well advised to put an end to this feeling. I am now in no humor for it, and with you—never. If you have not the gift to see it, I would have you know that I detest you and despise you, and have done so since first I saw you."

"Ah, my little Lady Termagant, you say as much now, but when the world knows you paid a thousand pounds for a lover there will be many envious persons who wish to be despised as much."

"You ruffian and thief! Well did Velline estimate your honesty. But stand aside from that door or your stealing will profit you little."

"Indeed!" cried De Courcy, with a laugh, as he possessed himself of a similar weapon to that which threatened him. "'Tis already squandered, and I am in sore need of a further installment. Are you for a duel, then?"

His pretended antagonism was but a feint to throw her off the guard he advised her to maintain, for, being one of the best swordsmen of his time, he knew by her holding of the blade that she was ignorant of its practice. He brushed her sword aside, dropped his own and sprang in upon her, grasping again her helpless wrists, her arms pinioned thus transversely across her body, her right hand still clinging to the useless hilt, with the blade extending past her shoulder and behind her. His sneering, grinning face so close to hers that his breath fanned her cheek, he pressed her back and back against the wall, the sword bending and bending behind her until the blade snapped off some six inches from the hilt and fell ringing to the floor.

"There, sweetest of amazons, you are stingless now, and naught but the honey is to be gathered."

The very ease with which he had overcome her bedwinked him to his danger. The proud, dominant blood of the Wentworths flushed her face with an anger that steeled every nerve in her lithe body. As, with a victorious laugh, he released her wrists and slipped his arms around her she struck him twice with lightning swiftness, first across the brow, then down the face. Nothing could well be more terrible than the weapon she had used, for the jagged iron tore his flesh like the stroke of a tiger's claw. The red cross showed for a brief moment, then was obliterated in a crimson flood.

"Cowardly poltroon, wear the brand of Cain!"

He had warned her not to scream, but now his own cries filled the room as he staggered back, his hands to his face. Yet, grievously wounded as he was, he seemed resolved she should not escape him and, after the first shock, groped blindly for her. She flung the broken weapon to the farther side of the room, and the noise of its fall turned him thither, striking against the table and then against a chair. She tiptoed cautiously to the door, turned the key and threw it open before he could recover himself, for he had lost all sense of direction and could see nothing. She took the immediate risk of drawing the key from the door to ward off the greater danger of pursuit, and calmly locked him in. If screams were as ineffectual as he had insisted, he would take little good from his battering of the door for some time to come. Frances now threaded her way through the maze of passages, meeting no one, for the gloom of death pervaded the palace, at least in the direction she had taken.

She dared not hurry in spite of the urging of her quickly beating heart, but must proceed leisurely, as if she had a perfect right to be where she was, should any inquisitive servant encounter her. At last, with a deep breath, she emerged upon the great courtyard and so came to the gate. The officer bowed to her, and she paused for a moment to thank him for his kindness to her in the earlier part of the day.

"Is it true—that—that Lord Strafford"— She could get no further.

"Yes, my lady, and grieved we all are that it should be so. This morning on Tower hill. The lords refused a reprieve even until Saturday."

BERNIER SAILS AWAY

Gallant Captain Given Command of the Arctic.

Major Moodie Receives His Commission As Commander-in-Chief of the Expedition to Hudson Bay—Inspector Pelletier Head of the Mounted Police—Minister Prefontaine and Many Friends See Expedition Start For North.

Quebec, Que., Sept. 19.—There were thousands of spectators on the King's Wharf and on the Dufferin Terrace when the steamer Arctic left at 12.30 o'clock Saturday afternoon for her three years' cruise in the waters of Hudson Bay and Mackenzie River.

The Minister of Marine and Fisheries, Hon. R. Prefontaine, went on board at 12.15 p.m., after having thoroughly inspected the steamer in the morning, and addressed the crowd from the bridge of the vessel. He was surrounded by many prominent citizens. Hon. Mr. Prefontaine bade God-speed to the officers and crew, saying that they had a very important duty to fulfill, a very important mission to execute for the Government, the organization of a vast extent of Canadian territory in the northern part of the country.

He expressed the hope that, in three years, they would come back, enjoying good health, after having been true to themselves and their country. He said that next year a relief steamer would be sent to them. Turning towards Major Moodie, he gave him his commission as commander-in-chief of the expedition.

To Capt. Bernier, he said that he had the full command of the vessel and its crew, and that he was responsible for the ship. He (Captain Bernier) would in three years from now, perhaps, be in a position to realise the dream of his life—a trip towards the North Pole for its discovery. The Government thought that, for the moment, there was something more important to accomplish, that is, the organization of the vast territories of the far north.

Hon. Mr. Prefontaine then gave to Inspector Pelletier his commission as head officer of the detachment of Mounted Police on board.

The steamer Arctic then left slowly, accompanied by the Druid, with many officials on board. Mrs. Moodie, wife of Major Moodie, accompanies her husband on the Arctic.

Mrs. Doner escaped with a sprained wrist, and a severe shaking up. It is a miracle that both were not killed.

Former Aylmer Woman Dies.

Aylmer, Sept. 20.—Mrs. Hattie Worchester, formerly Miss Hattie Derbe of this place, but who has been residing in Cogswell, Dakota, met with an accident one day last week which cost her her life. It appears that gasoline, mistaken for kerosene, was put into a lamp by the unfortunate woman when it exploded and set the house on fire, and, her clothes becoming saturated with the fluid soon became a seething flame, causing her to be suffocated as well as badly burned. The remains, accompanied by the grief-stricken husband, arrived here on Saturday via the M.C.R.

WIFE-BEATER BEATEN.

Summary Punishment Meted Out to Him Out West.

Manda, Man., Sept. 20.—About 7 o'clock last evening J. R. Spears of Third street was heard by neighbors beating his wife. A number of men gathered together, went to Spears' house and took him out. He was beaten with sticks, and a bluff at preparations made for lynching him. When the rope was round his neck Spears promised not to further illuse his wife. He was taken home and the crowd left word with his wife that he would be more roughly handled should he break out again.

Spears had just returned from Brandon, where he had been sent on suspicion of having tried to set fire to a house. He was, however, acquitted on account of lack of evidence.

About 8.45 Spears again started to beat his wife, and tried to escape from the crowd which gathered at a signal from a picket. His retreat was covered by old John Greene with a shot-gun. Spears was found in the garden a short way off, and taken down east on the prairie. Preparations were made for tar and feathers, when it was decided to give him twenty lashes with a rope instead. This was done. He was made to promise to leave town by six tonight. Greene was to have been treated in the same way, but being an old man was let off with the same promise as Spears.

MR. BORDEN AT SARNIA

Explains the Conservative Policy on Public Matters.

Declares in Favor of a Railway Owned By the Government in Contradiction to a Government Owned By a Railway—His Policy on Other Leading Questions—Received Loyal Assurances From Towns Between Windsor and Sarnia.

Sarnia, Sept. 20.—Sarnia's welcome to the Conservative chief yesterday was no less cordial than that accorded by the people of the southern end of the peninsula. From Windsor stops were made at Chatham, Dresden and other towns, and at each of them enthusiastic receptions were held. The train reached Sarnia at noon.

As Mr. Borden entered the hall in the evening the cheering was spontaneous and hearty. The gallery of the building was almost entirely filled with ladies, and on either side were streamers lettered: "No Gerrymander Will Exclude Clancy From Parliament," and "A Railway Owned Government or a Government Owned Railway." An address to Mr. Borden was read in which he was assured of the loyal support of the Conservatives of Lambton.

Mr. Borden's Address.

Mr. Borden, after a happy reference to the local candidate, discussed the corruption that has recently been unearthed in the courts. He said he would not offend the great body of Liberals by charging them with the crime, but the men of whose crimes we have just read have brought stolen goods to the Liberal party and have been rewarded with places and offices to which the public consider they are not entitled. By condoning such offences the Liberal Government has done much to lower the standard of public life in this country.

"I care not whether it is the Conservative party or the Liberal party that does wrong—whichever party does wrong against the public should receive punishment from the public. The men to be charged are the camp-followers and exploiters." Mr. Borden continued, "It was well-known that any party would have attached to it men of plunder, but it required a strong man to beat them off. The words of Alex. Mackenzie, that he was obliged to sit up of nights to protect the treasury from the thieves and grafters who attach themselves to the party were quoted in this connection."

A People's Railway.

A great part of Mr. Borden's speech dealt with the transportation question. The position of the Conservative party was fully explained, and the audience was responsive when the leader declared for the ownership of the new Pacific Railway by the people of Canada who have been bound down to spend their money in its construction. Mr. Borden said his statement that the people of this country would pay nine-tenths of the cost of the G.T.P. had been challenged in some quarters, but he maintained the correctness of his figures. The responsibility of the people amounted to between $155,000,000 and $170,000,000, while, according to the statement of the president of the G.T.R. the company is to provide only about $15,000,000.

His statement, "Let the people own a railway from the Atlantic to the Pacific" was applauded. Discussing his fiscal policy the leader declared that he had never said he would copy the tariff of the United States, "Let us," he said, "look at our own requirements and fix our tariff in that way."

The other speakers were Joseph Armstrong, M.P.; A. B. Ingram, M. P., and D. Henderson, M.P. The meeting lasted till nearly midnight, and most of the audience remained to hear the cheers.

G.T.R. Refuses a Special.

Sarnia, Sept. 20.—There is considerable feeling here and throughout the County of Lambton because of the action of the Grand Trunk in refusing to furnish a special train for Petrolea Conservatives who wished to come here last night to hear Mr. Borden.

BIG FIRE AT HALIFAX.

Second Serious Waterfront Conflagration in Nova Scotia's Capital.

Halifax, Sept. 20.—Another big waterfront fire broke out about one o'clock yesterday morning in the warehouse of Black Bros., hardware store on their wharf.

Within an hour that building, another large building of Pickford & Black's, occupied as a warehouse and sail loft, a large fish warehouse and several other buildings were in flames.

So far losses are:
Black Bros., $35,000.
Pickford & Black, $15,000.
Thomas Forhan, $2,000.
Leslie, Hart & Son, $5,000.

Another loser was J. A. Neville, who was burned out in last Thursday's fire and had taken temporary quarters in Pickford & Black's building.

Boots Quit Politics.

Winnipeg, Sept. 20.—T. O. Davis, M.P., who was nominated some time ago as the standard-bearer of the Liberal party in Saskatchewan, has resigned, and a convention to nominate his successor has been called to meet at Saskatoon on September 20.

WAR MAY END VERY SOON

CAMPAIGN MUST END IN COSTLY SACRIFICES ON BOTH SIDES.

Any Agreement Must be Based on the Certitude that Japan is Truly Desirous of Friendship.

London, Sept. 19.—The Daily Telegraph's St. Petersburg correspondent quotes an unnamed personage, "whose name," he says, "were I at liberty to reveal it, would cause his words to circulate with lightning-like rapidity around the world," as saying: "It is possible that the war may end sooner than some people imagine. Mediation is as impossible as intervention. Russia cannot permit any interference whether it emanates from friend or neighbor. I cannot describe the conclusion of peace as an impending event, but as a contingency which may be realized much sooner than people suppose. Mediation will not achieve it, but solely the conviction that the campaign must end as the battle of Liao-Yang is ended, in costly sacrifices on both sides and a decisive advantage to neither. Russia, single-handed, can worst and annihilate Japan if she puts forth all her strength and draws upon all her resources. This can be ascertained as any mathematical truth, but the effort would exhaust the nation without benefitting it, and Russia's consequent temporary weakness would operate as a temptation to enterprising States to make their voices heard. If we attempt not merely to defeat, but to suppress Japan, outer States interested in the Far East will vigorously urge their right to be heard, and Russia, weakened by her losses, financial and military, of a long campaign, would find it hard to disallow their claims.

The correspondent's informant is of the opinion that no power could wage another form was clearly put and frankly answered at the outset of the war by a group of public men, whose knowledge of the subject is greater than their influence. Today it is being tackled by others, whose knowledge and power stand to each other in inverse relations, and who are becoming alive to its urgency and getting acquainted with its various elements. They are beginning to perceive that Japan can hold out long enough to compel us to bear the strain very much longer if our aim be to cripple her permanently, and also that peace 18 or 20 months hence, with Japan embittered, but not utterly defeated, would be only an armed truce that would be followed by a more sanguinary campaign a few years hence. The alternatives may be formulated thus: Either the ruin of Japan, purchased by ruinous sacrifices, or a treaty of cordial friendship, to be followed in the fulness of time by that offensive and defensive alliance which for years has constituted the ideal of the Japanese success. Between the roads leading to these two goals there can be no third course. The problem is now being attentively studied in quarters where the will and dead will follow each other at very short intervals, and as the data for sound opinions is abundant, it is possible, and perhaps probable, that peace will be arranged sooner than most people imagine."

The informant added that any such agreement must necessarily be based on the certitude that Japan is really desirous of friendship, as well as peace. Referring to the difficulty of Russia making overtures without creating the impression of weakness, the informant said: "I cannot say there is greater difficulty than Mr. Gladstone experienced in discontinuing the campaign against the Boers after the battle of Majuba Hill. Russia would certainly not choose any such unfavorable moment for ending the present war, but whenever she does take the step, it will be manifest to all that the mainspring of her action will be solely aversion to utterly useless bloodshed."

When asked whether there was any public man in Japan likely to entertain a similar view, the informant replied that there was. He mentioned, among others, Gen. Kuroki, whom he warmly praised as a gifted statesman, as realising the advantage of a Russo-Japanese alliance.

IN THE INTERESTS OF CORPORATIONS

JOHN FLETT, IN THE LAST SESSION OF PARLIAMENT.

Labor Interests Ignored—Some Bills that Were Killed by Design and Malice Forethought—Wisdom of Pressing for Reforms.

The 20th annual convention of the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada opened in Montreal Monday morning with a large representation present. The address of Mr. John A. Flett, the President, will be of interest to local union men and is as follows:—

The last session of the Federal Parliament can be truthfully said to have devoted the major portion of its time to the interests of corporations. The Grand Trunk Pacific Railway again occupied the attention of that body. Not satisfied with their agreement, they demanded further concessions, and got them; despite a resolution introduced by the Opposition, that the Government if this country should build and control the road in the interest of the people—a direct move along the lines of public ownership, and which, I regret to say, only received the usual party vote—some of the alleged reformers and friends of labor, voting against the measure, so wedded to their ideal of party that hitherto professed principles were thrown to the winds in their anxiety to serve their political friends. Hybrid politicians of this type, make the election of direct labor representatives very difficult, owing to the misgivings of those who might feel inclined to support our real friends when nominated for representatives.

The Union Label bill was introduced by Mr. Ralph Smith, in the early part of the session. After it had been introduced a new and extraordinary ruling was given by the Speaker, that a resolution should be passed by the House before the introduction of the bill. This having been complied with, still the bill was not advanced, although the Government promised to set a day for consideration. They failed to keep their word, and the bill never received the consideration due it, although sought for by a most important part of the community.

THE ALIEN LABOR BILL.

Another important measure in the interest of the common people was introduced by Sir William Mulock, the Minister of Labor—a bill to consolidate and amend the Act respecting Alien Labor. One of the provisions in this Act dealt witht he importation of aliens on false representation, and was intended to apply to cases such as the Italians brought to Montreal by Labor Agent Antonio Cordasco, and like other frauds perpetrated upon immigrants by the emissaries and agents of the Manufacturers' and Employers' Associations, which have become notorious of late. The means employed by these parties were fraudulent and cruel in the extreme. The exigencies of the case, in that particular at least, demanded a by-law that would bring swift and condign punishment down on the offenders. This bill was not brought down until late in the session, and met its death at the hands of the Senate by design and malice aforethought.

The toilers of our country have a right to expect that their interests should receive some attention at the hands of our legislators, yet it must be said that so far as labor is concerned the last session was barren of results.

I desire again to repeat here, what was stated in my address to the Congress last year, and it comes with renewed emphasis; "The necessity of having more labor representatives in the House of Commons was never more manifest than during the present session." I would, therefore, urge upon trades unionists and the friends of labor everywhere, to call meetings and support by their vote such candidates as will pledge themselves to support our interests in the House of Commons and the Provincial Legislature, and that the Congress map out a plan of campaign that will be of material assistance in bringing about the exercise of greater influence on Canadian politicians.

The increase in the poll tax from $50 to $500 upon Chinese entering Canada, has had the effect of excluding, or nearly so, this class of immigrants entering Canada, and will, I am sure, be a source of gratification to the people of British Columbia.

While the organized labor movement in Canada has never objected to immigrants entering this country to improve their conditions and becoming citizens with us, yet something must be done to prevent the large and indiscriminate importation by steamship companies, philanthropic societies and others, of those with criminal tendencies, and other undesirable classes, who often become a charge upon the community. Of late an inferior class of immigrants are arriving from continental Europe; they do not assimilate, are very slow to adopt our methods of living, herding on the communal plan. The Government pays one pound per head for foreigners or for those other than from the British Isles.

NATIONAL MOVEMENT.

It is with much pride that we are enabled to point to the steady progress made everywhere throughout the Dominion of the consolidating of the forces of labor, and the uniting under the banner of international brotherhood. I am specially gratified at the splendid progress made in this direction in the grand old capital city of Quebec, since the granting by this congress of a charter to form a central body, one year ago, at the Brockville convention, fourteen locals now being affiliated with that body.

The strike at Sydney this summer demonstrated in a forceful manner the emptiness and foolishness of the cry for national union of labor made by the opponents of labor and others. The fact of the Steel Workers' Union in that city being purely a provincial organization did not enable them to receive any more consideration at the hands of the capitalists operating the works, nor prevent them from calling out the militia, when asked for a restoration of wages to that formerly paid, nor the fact of the Government paying handsome bounties of many dollars per ton upon their output. This should be an object lesson to those who advocate nationalism—that capital knows no nationality or boundary line when employing labor.

THE UNION LABEL.

The union label has been called the olive branch between the employer and the employe. The demand for goods bearing this insignia of fair conditions has greatly increased, but much still remains to be done to direct the great public's attention as to what it really stands for. One of the very best means of carrying out this phase of our work is the formation of branches of the Women's International League. Wherever these leagues have been formed they create a strong sentiment in favor of the union label, and are a mighty influence for good, and should be established in connection with every trades and labor council.

PRISON-MADE GOODS.

Every effort should be put forth to prevent the product of prisoners entering into competition upon the market with free labor. All goods made in prison and offered for sale should be stamped.

In concluding this address, let me impress upon this convention the wisdom of pressing for such reforms only as are of the utmost importance. Better results are likely to follow persistent and intelligent agitation, if properly directed on a few issues. Your deliberations will be watched with the closest scrutiny by our friends as well as by our opponents. I would recommend fewer resolutions and more time to be given to the proper consideration and discussion of those that may be introduced.

ORGANIST AND CHOIR MASTER

At a meeting of the Quarterly and Trustee Boards of the George-st. Methodist church last evening, the question of the appointment of an organist and choirmaster from the list of applications received was considered. It was decided that the position be given to Prof. Falla, who is at present organist at St. Paul's Presbyterian church at Smith's Falls. Prof. Falla gave excellent satisfaction when he presided at the organ in George-st. church a couple of weeks ago, and he comes very highly recommended from Smith's Falls.

Miss Nellie Holmes, treasurer of the Young Woman's Temperance Association of Buffalo, N.Y., strongly advises all suffering women to rely, as she did, upon Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—Your medicine is indeed an ideal woman's medicine, and by far the best I know to restore lost health and strength. I suffered misery for several years, being troubled with menorrhagia. My back ached, I had bearing-down pains and frequent headaches. I would often wake from restful sleep, and in such pain that I suffered for hours before I could go to sleep again. I dreaded the long nights as much as the weary days. I consulted two different physicians, hoping to get relief, but, finding that their medicine did not seem to cure me, I tried your Vegetable Compound on the recommendation of a friend from the East who was visiting me.

"I am glad that I followed her advice, for every ache and pain is gone, and not only this, but my general health is much improved. I have a fine appetite and have gained in flesh. My earnest advice to suffering women is to put aside all other medicines and to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."—MISS NELLIE HOLMES, 840 No. Division St., Buffalo, N.Y.—$5000 forfeit if original of above letter proving genuineness cannot be produced.

BASEBALL.

Thursday's game between T. A. S. and Bobcaygeon should prove a corker. Both teams are playing fast ball and both have their eyes on the pennant. The team from the north have to win to be in the running, for if they lose the game the T.A.S. will be the Kawartha League champions. The T. A. S. have been playing good ball all season and deserve to be supported by the people of Peterborough. They have defeated Auburns three times, Fenelon Falls, Orillia, Lindsay and the Y.M.C.A. and have lost to Peterborough seniors, Lindsay seniors and Bobcaygeon. The finances are not in the best of condition as there have been several expensive trips. Let the local fans show that they appreciate good ball by turning out in large numbers to Thursday's game.

RUGBY.

There will be a meeting of the executive of the local club this evening at 8 o'clock in the Oriental. A full attendance is requested as important business is to be transacted.

The committee of the local club appointed to negotiate with the Street Railway Co. in regard to what the latter will do for the club if the games are played in the Exhibition grounds, laid their case before Mr. Stevenson of the Light and Power Co. yesterday. He will communicate to them this afternoon the decision of the company in regard to the matter. It is probable that the company will place lights in the Exhibition grounds so that the club may practise at night there.

The Argonauts had their first practice yesterday and Hamilton have been practising for some time. The locals should get to work as soon as possible. There are some new men to be coached, and nearly all the team needs some practice before they will be in any kind of condition. The halfbacks should practise kicking as much as possible, as both Argonauts and Toronto have back divisions who are strong punters. The locals will remember how they were defeated last year. The strong kicking powers of the Victoria halves enabled them to win the game by making rouge after rouge. Unless the Peterboroughs learn to kick they will be at a disadvantage when they go up against a team who are strong in that respect.

WHERE STRATTON COMES IN

An Independent Journal Gives Story from the Sault.

The Toronto News, in a report on the Sault Ste. Marie election, has the following:—

"Hon. J. R. Stratton comes into the case also. Patrick J. and Joseph Kearns used to live near Peterborough, and are well acquainted with the Provincial Secretary. When the "Soo" boom started they came "here, built a hotel, and were promised a license. They worked for Mr. Farwell. Mr. Stratton, while here, promised them a license, but refused later. Kearns, in an affidavit, says they were asked $1,000 for the election fund. Not getting the license they retaliated by voting Conservative in 1902, and standing by Mr. Miscampbell through the protest. When Mr. Stratton was up here in September, he saw the man, and the result was they got their license and became strong Smith men."

Bridesmaids' Favors

The wedding custom of presenting the bridesmaids with some little souvenir of the occasion, has caused us to give special thought to the matter.

MAKING FURIOUS ONSLAUGHT

JAPS APPROACHING MUKDEN

Belated Telegrams from Gen. Stoessel Indicate that the Garrison Expects to Hold Out—Japanese Capture two Forts—A Battle Imminent at Mukden.

St. Petersburg, Sept. 21.—Interest is again concentrated upon Port Arthur, owing to news that a general storming of the fortifications there has begun. A few belated telegrams from Gen. Stoessel, the commander at Port Arthur, strengthens confidence in the ability of the defenders to hold out, despite the furious onslaughts of the Japanese.

The last attack mentioned by Gen. Stoessel took place the night of Sept. 14 and was directed against redoubt No. 8, which protects the water supply of the city. The redoubt is about two miles beyond the line of permanent forts and the attack upon this shows that the Japanese were not within striking distance of the main fortress.

The sensational announcement that Gen. Kuroki has crossed the Hun River unopposed, and that the whole Japanese army is advancing upon Mukden does not receive credence here.

General Attack on Port Arthur.

Che Foo, Sept. 21.—Authoritative information has been received here of a general attack upon Port Arthur by the Japanese forces which began before daybreak yesterday and continued until dark. All indications point to an effort to capture certain of the northeast main forts.

Two Forts Captured.

Shanghai, Sept. 21.—The general attack on Port Arthur in which the Japanese fleet is co-operating, began yesterday morning. The Japanese captured two ports on either side of Suishiying, north of Port Arthur.

Attack on Waterworks Repelled.

St. Petersburg, Sept. 21.—Lieut.-Gen. Stoessel, commanding the Russian military forces at Port Arthur, reports by telegraph that on the night of Sept. 16 the garrison repulsed two attacks on the redoubt protecting the waterworks.

Battle Imminent.

Mukden, Sept. 21.—A battle is imminent. The Japanese are advancing with eight, and possibly nine, divisions.

The crops of tall millet have nearly all been harvested, affording a better field over which to form on the flat plains.

G.T.P. DIRECTORATE RE-ELECTED.

First Annual Meeting Held—Pacific Terminus Not Yet Selected.

Montreal, Sept. 21.—The annual meeting of the shareholders of the Grand Trunk Pacific was held at the general offices of the Grand Trunk Railway at noon yesterday. The former directorate was elected, and the meeting then adjourned.

Mr. Hays on his return from the tour of inspection of the West, said yesterday that the western terminus for the Grand Trunk Pacific had not yet been decided on, but Port Simpson and other places of possible choice along the coast to Vancouver had been visited.

Experts, he said, were now collecting data as to the approaches, both by land and water to several ports, which would later on be submitted to the directors, following which an announcement of the choice of a terminus would be made.

John Morley Coming.

Toronto, Sept. 21.—Hon. Richard Harcourt received an interesting letter from Rt. Hon. John Morley yesterday.

He had written him in regard to his approaching visit to Pittsburg and expressed the hope that he would not lose the opportunity of visiting Canada.

In reply Mr. Morley said that he hoped to be in Toronto for a day or two in October prior to his visit to Pittsburg.

Mr. Harcourt said that arrangements would be made to give him a proper reception, and the university were to tender him an honorary degree.

COLONIAL PREFERENCE

Rosebery Declares There Was No Offer From Colonies.

Former Liberal Premier Asserts That the Chamberlain Policy Is Discredited—Says the Agitation Has Been Proved to Be But the Baseless Fabric of a Dream, and That It Is Becoming a Little Ridiculous—The Food Tax.

London, Sept. 21.—Lord Rosebery, speaking at Lincoln yesterday, said that Mr. Chamberlain began by ringing the Imperial chime and telling the country it would be criminal to neglect the offer made by the colonies, and, in the second place, that the preferential tax included a tax on food. All the evidence was entirely against this hypothesis. If the colonies had come to the motherland and asked us, in the interests of Imperial unity, to consider whether it was not possible to find some method for the mutual exchange of our products and theirs that would have been worthy of the consideration of the committee of experts.

There was no offer from the colonies, and the leading authorities of Canada and Australia had given no evidence that they intended such. The leader of the Opposition in Canada had declared in favor of Mr. Chamberlain's policy, which implied that the Laurier Government was not in favor of the scheme of Mr. Chamberlain. The agitation had been proved the baseless fabric of a dream. He considered a tax on the food of the people would not found an Empire, but would be the most dissolving and disintegrating influence that could be applied to the Empire. The agitation was becoming a little ridiculous when it left the region of argument and entered into the region of farce. This was not the way to raise great Imperial issues. It was not Imperialism but Empirickism.

Figment of Imagination.

The Standard, referring to Lord Rosebery's speech, says he had no difficulty in showing that the revulsion after the colonies was a figment of the protectionist imagination. "We think that a certain and definite demand from the colonies for an Imperial preferential tariff would deserve to be seriously considered by this country, though we might not accept it. We have positive evidence there would be strenuous resistance on the part of the Canadian manufacturers to any further lowering of the tariff imposed on British competitors. The mere suggestion would raise a storm in Canada, and so long as this is the Canadian policy we may in vain make an offer."

The Graphic said if Lord Rosebery read the colonial newspapers he would have been saved making so many absurd misstatements.

On Drummond's Speech.

The Daily Chronicle, referring to Mr. Drummond's speech, calls the preference advocated by him a delusion, Britain receiving nothing in return for a preference on food and raw materials.

The Times, combatting Lord Rosebery's statement, that the colonial offer rests only on the conference of 1902 says it rests on the visible evidence of preferential treatment accorded by more than one of the self-governing colonies, also avowed the colonial readiness to enter into negotiations and, lastly, on Mr. Drummond's speech. Mr. Chamberlain's policy is based on a policy already adopted. The colonies are not to be dismissed by flouts and jeers.

CANADIAN MANUFACTURERS.

Committee Meetings Arranged After Which Reception Was Held.

Montreal, Sept. 21.—The thirty-third meeting of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association convened yesterday at the Windsor Hotel. The morning was taken up with arranging the committee meetings of the various trades.

A reception was held in the afternoon, and the first business meeting took place in the evening. Rev. Mr. Barclay pronounced the invocation, after which Mayor Laporte extended the welcome to the city to the delegates. Mr. McGill, president of the Montreal branch, and W. K. George, vice-president of the association, replied. The vice-president referred to the progress made by the association in three years, when it increased from 800 to 1,500 members.

George E. Drummond, president of the association, then read the annual address.

Sir Howard Vincent.

Toronto, Sept. 21.—Sir Charles Edward Howard Vincent, K.C.M.G., C.B., J.P., Senior D.L., for the City of London, A.D.C. to the King, Colonel Commandant of the Queen's Westminster Volunteers, and M.P. for Central Sheffield, arrived in the city yesterday afternoon. At 8.30 o'clock Sir Howard Vincent addressed a special meeting of the Board of Trade.

In the evening, at 6.30, Sir Howard was entertained by the Empire Club to an informal dinner.

Damages For Seduction.

Berlin, Sept. 21.—The fall assizes opened here yesterday afternoon before Justice McMahon. The first case called was that of Henry Beatty of Galt v. John Williamson of the same town, for the seduction of the plaintiff's daughter, Mary. The jury brought in a verdict of guilty, and assessed the damages at $1,000.

MINISTERIAL COMPLICITY

Following the example of the Globe, the shameless corruption at Sault Ste Marie is condemned by the Ottawa Free Press, which then contends at great length that these iniquities were perpetrated without the knowledge or consent of the Ministerial candidate or the Ministers themselves. It strives to maintain that these organized crimes with their enormous cost, were perpetrated quite accidentally and by the caprice of private individuals, some of them aliens from Michigan. As to their knowledge, Mr. Smith and Attorney General Gibson were thoroughly informed of the intended personation by the passengers of the Minnie M. offficered by their agents. Mr. Ross, when he conspired with the Lieutenant-Governor to close the courts that the fraudulent member might retain for a session his usurped seat, was still better informed, for he had not only this warning, but he had the proof in the polling returns of the success of this wholesale personation.

As to the complicity of the Ministers and their machine the whole corrupt campaign was officially conducted. All the active participants in the Minnie M. outrage came within four categories—Provincial officials, Dominion officials, officials of the Ministerial machine, or officials of Sault companies bought wholesale by Mr. Ross. The Attorney General not only assisted in this piratical cruise by refusing to intervene, but though he pretended that there could be no official interference in advance his officials and agent were able to prevent the sailing of the Booth with scrutineers to stop the personation, on the plea that the vessel had no license to carry passengers. Mr. Gibson was also a participant in the wholesale bribery of the Sault Company people and with Mr. Ross and their colleagues rewarded them still further at the public expense. Mr. Conmee was the channel by which funds were conveyed to Mr. Smith and it is a matter of public notoriety how he was recompensed. The leaders of the machine employed by the Government with their embezzled public funds were in the thick of all the roguery and corruption. The local officials of the Ministry had an active part in all the villainy.

There is not a more corrupt election on record than that at Sault Ste Marie. There has not been an electoral scandal in which the complicity of the government has been more clearly established in the belief of every thinking man.

What is the matter with Capt. Sullivan? The Toronto Globe repudiates him and the Hamilton Times accuses him of working for the Conservatives in North Grey.

The fact that Mr. Hugh Clarke retains his seat for Centre Bruce, and the statement of the judges that it was a clean election, is only what was expected. There is no corruption machine on the Conservative side.

Sir Frederick Borden denies Lord Dundonald any credit for the Militia Act. It is to enable him to make this denial that he dishonestly concealed that important public paper, the General's report.

Mr. McEvoy brought a libel suit against Mr. Gamey on purpose to discredit him while he worked so successfully for the Conservative candidate in Manitoba. Having failed in this trick Mr. McEvoy drops his suit.

Sir Richard Cartwright must be relieved from a difficulty. He has only to look at the report of the judges in the Sault election trial to find the names of criminals whom he may fitly send to represent us in the United Kingdom beside his friend, Jackson, K.C.

The Grimsby Independent says:

"When the editor of the Toronto Globe, himself a Christian man, in fact a minister of the gospel, will send forth fifty thousand papers, in which he states in double leaded type that practically there was no corruption in the last election in North Perth, when he is not better than the men who took part in the wholesale corruption, in the organized corruption and in the studied dismemberment of that county."

The Independent journals do not believe that Capt. Sullivan brought the Buffalo crowd to North Grey, North Perth and North Norfolk merely for their health. The Hamilton Herald says:

"There is no doubt about the presence of that Buffalo gang in North Grey. The judges wouldn't believe that they did any crooked work, although they swore they did. Has North Grey a reputation in Buffalo as a health resort?"

Ministerial organs are saying that Mr. Smith, who fraudulently sat for a session as member for Sault Ste Marie, that he might vote the people's money to men who had corruptly aided him, was ignorant of the illegal work in his behalf. He, like the Attorney General, was plainly warned with full particulars of the intended cruise of the Minnie M., and they both made themselves accomplices in the crime by giving it the shelter of their position and refusing to intervene to prevent the outrage.

ACCESSORY TO A CRIME

An Independent Paper Would like the Globe's View.

The independent Ottawa Journal commenting on the warning to the Attorney-General of the trip of the Minnie M., says:—

"The Attorney-General's reply to this was that he was "not an ordinary policeman, and therefore could not be expected to prevent the alleged attempt to personate."

Mr. Gibson added:—"The machinery of the law was here, and if any officer did not do his duty when called upon, the matter should be reported, when he would see that it was done or the officer dismissed."

This left the business to be attended to by the law (if some private person would invoke the law) after the election—note this. Meanwhile, the election taking place, and the Liberal being elected, the Ross Government was for the time being secure in its seat. The election could not be upset for months. As a matter of fact, it was not upset for nearly a year. One reason why was that after the first date for trial of the Conservative protest was fixed, the Ross Government, Mr. Gibson a part of it, by calling the Legislature together at an unnecessarily early date, compelled an adjournment of the trial for some months further.

In Mr. Gibson, therefore, we find a Cabinet Minister in charge of the enforcement of law in Ontario who when warned that one of the vilest possible electoral crimes was about to be perpetrated against the law, declined to interfere, and referred the complainant to a course of action which would not only not prevent the crime, but as Mr. Gibson knew would help himself and his colleagues to carry on a government, remain in power and draw salaries—and which did so help him and them. The Globe recently selected Mr. Gibson as a theme for the highest public praise. It characterized him to be everything that is desirable, privately and publicly. Its expression was that in the strong white light which beats upon politics, Mr. Gibson stood "without smirch or stigma." In law, a direct responsibility attaches to the person who is accessory to a crime. What was the case at the Soo, in view of Mr. Gibson's official position. May we ask the Globe's view?

How to Keep Well

The best efforts of the great physicians are now expending in finding how to keep people well and prevent serious disease. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food was prepared with this object in view. It is not only a cure for diseases of the nerves, but also a restorative to be used when vitality runs low and the weakened condition of the system invites attack by fevers or contagious diseases.

SIDNEY WITH CRIMINALS

The Globe pretends that the Attorney General and Mr. Smith were not aware of the intended criminal trip of the Minnie M. The following is the Globe's own report of the warning that was given:

"The feature of the meeting was the appearance of a lawyer named Boyes on behalf of the Conservative party. Mr. Boyes read an open letter from Mr. Mincampbell to the attorney general stating that it was reported that the Liberals had hired a boat to the Sault and Michipicoten for the purpose of personating dead men, and Mr. Gibson was asked to set the machinery of the law in motion to prevent such shameful proceeding. The attorney-general thought it was a poor compliment to the people of the riding to say that any such thing existed or in the latter was contemplated.

It looked like a desperate play on Mincampbell's part to let himself down lightly. The attorney-general was not an ordinary policeman and therefore could not be expected to take any steps to prevent the alleged attempt to personate. The machinery of the law was here, and if any officer did not do his duty when called upon, the matter should be reported, and he would see that it was done, or the officer was dismissed."

ONTARIO'S BOOK OF SHAME

The Chief Law Officer Shielding Criminals from Interference.

John M. Gibson, Attorney-General, of Ontario, when confronted on the platform at Sault Ste. Marie the night previous to the day of the bye-election with a warning from Mincampbell with reference to the proposed trip of the "Minnie M." said that he was no policeman.

That was a nice attitude for the man who controls our criminal machinery to take.

Right under his nose preparations were going on for the stealing of an election by thugs and plug-uglies, marshalled by the agents of his party. Warned regarding the plot, he simply shrugged his shoulders and replied that he was no policeman.

Neither was he an honest Canadian with the good name and reputation of his Province at heart. With an election to win at all hazards, he cared a fig for neither. His indifference, his criminal negligence, was a spur to the malefactors. They carried out the plot and added another page to Ontario's book of shame.—Galt Reporter.

CONDEMN BONUS SYSTEM

The Engineering and Shipbuilding Trades of London.

London, Sept. 20.—After an enquiry lasting several months, the Engineering and Shipbuilding Trades Federation, which comprises twenty-four trades unions, has issued a report totally condemning the premium or bonus system which was imported from the United States by an agreement between the Amalgamated Engineers' and the Employers' Federation. The system worked excellently in many engineering shops, including the Royal dockyards, for which reason the employers sought to extend it to other trades. The Engineering and Shipbuilding Trades Federation stepped in at this point and said that it must examine the system before it was adopted. A committee was appointed for this purpose, and it has now unanimously denounced the system as an adaption of the most pernicious and most degrading condition of employment in modern industrial history, namely the task work system. The report says: "It has absolutely nothing to recommend it. It creates jealousy and ill-feeling in the workshop, and causes endless bickering and misunderstanding. It has been the cause of more men being discharged than any strike that has ever occurred in the history of the engineering and shipbuilding trades. It prevents men whose waning physical powers unfit them for the closest and hardest labor from obtaining employment except in the busiest times."

The committee furthermore unanimously condemns any system of wage paying except by the hour, or, when mutually arranged between workers and employers, piecework. It strongly urges the societies connected with the federation to do their utmost to prevent their adoption of any premium or bonus system.

The Daily Mail, in an editorial ironically headed, "No Hustling," greatly regrets the decision of the Engineering and Shipbuilding Trades Federation. It says that it must strike another blow at British industry, and weaken the country's position in the struggle with more alert and more enlightened competitors. The trades unions concerned have set their faces stubbornly against a system which attempts to put a premium on energy and capacity, which is the rule in the United States, preferring to reduce all labor to one dead level. It warns the unions that, while they are taking this retrograde position, other nations are capturing British trade.

Cruise of the "Minnie M".
-Toronto News.

It was the steamer Minnie M.
That sailed the stormy sea,
And the skipper had taken a score or so,
To bear him company.

Kind hearts were theirs beneath tough looks,
And changed their names for alien ones.
To vote in a foreign land.

In balloting for absent friends,
—Minors, long since dispersed—
Their skill was only equalled by
Their hunger and their thirst.

The skipper stood beside the safe.
A cigar was in his mouth,
He bade the steward measures take
That there should be no drouth.

Then up and spake an old Heeler,
As he blew the froth from his beer,
"A mile astern I spy the tug
Of the Tory scrutineer."

The helmsman changed her course a point.
He quaffed a foaming stein,
And he steered for the Helen Mine.

"O, Captain, whence these fine cigars,
These bottles, black and green?
And kegs of beer are everywhere,
O, say, what can they mean?"

The skipper opened the strong-box door,
And produced the long and green,
As he answered: "It is nothing but
The oil for the machine."

"O, Captain, this strange name I bear,
O, say, whose may it be?"
"A Helen miner, dead and gone,
For this day you are he."

"But if they put me on my oath,
O, say, what shall I do?"
"That we may still be honest men,
The Bible's bogus, too."

"They drank and sang and danced for joy,
O, tell me what it meant?"
"They're proud and glad our Province has So good a Government."

"The company is grateful, too,
To all its merry men,
It sends them each a souvenir,
A five or may be a ten."

"And when elections come again
—An anxious time for them—
They'll give us, perhaps, another trip
Upon the Minnie M."

CANADA'S POSSIBILITIES

As they are Seen by the Secretary of the British Iron Trade Association.

J. Stephen Jeans, secretary of the British Iron Trade Association, has written and has recently published an octavo volume of 300 pages under the title, "Canada's Resources and Possibilities," and the sub-title, "with special reference to the iron and allied industries and the increase of trade with the Mother Country." Mr. Jeans visited Canada in August, 1903, as a delegate representing the British iron trade at the congress of chambers of commerce of the empire at Montreal. Many of the delegates traveled through nearly 11,000 miles of Canadian territory and visited most of the principal centers of population between the two oceans. It is pointed out in the preface of the book that the Dominion has a special interest for the iron trade of the Mother Country for the following reasons:

"1. Because it is already the greatest market among the possessions of the British crown after the Mother Country.

"2. Because it has offered to the Mother Country greater facilities and consideration than have been offered by any other colony of British possession.

"3. Because the future increase of population, and consequently of iron and steel consumption, in the Dominion is likely to exceed greatly that of any other British possession.

"4. Because Canada herself has enormous resources in the raw materials of the iron industry, and is likely in the near future to enter on a large scale into the competition of iron making countries for the supply of the world's markets.

"5. Because it is the attitude and the conditions of the Dominion that have primarily raised the pending controversy as to the fiscal position of Great Britain in relation to her colonies."

Emphasis s put upon the fact that in the last twenty years the proportion of the total iron and steel imports of Canada contributed by the Mother Country has fallen from more than 70 per cent. to less than 45 per cent. It is pointed out that in the United States the great increase of population and wealth has coincided with the greatest increase in consumption of iron and steel, and it is believed a similar relation between the two may be demonstrated to exist in Canada. The author calls attention to the enormous wheat growing area in Canada, which offers good ground for the expectation that the Canadian crop, now about 90,000,000 bushels a year, may be multiplied several times in the near distant future. In his treatment of industrial conditions in all lines in Canada, Mr. Jeans makes prominent the fact that Canada is ripe for rapid development.—Canadian Manufacturer.

COAL FROM NOVA SCOTIA

Operators there are Thinking of Sending to Ontario.

The Nova Scotia coal operators are seriously thinking of sending their product into the St. Lawrence and upper Lake Ontario markets. These markets are now practically dominated by coal from the United States, the short distance and less expensive transportation giving them an advantage which nothing has been able up to this time to overcome. The fact that the two greatest Canadian railroad systems, the Grand Trunk and the Canadian Pacific, make the bulk of their purchases in the United States shows that so far the present arrangement has not been seriously disturbed.

Representatives of the Dominion Coal Co. have been carefully looking over the towns and cities on the St. Lawrence River, as well as those on Lake Ontario, with a view to possible new business in this territory. The plan may be to ultimately put on a few boats in addition to those which now carry eastern coal to Montreal. Perhaps some paying return cargoes might be had, particularly from Kingston, where a great deal of grain is handled in the course of a season.

Such boats might very likely make paying trips with coal to Prescott, Brockville, Gananoque and Kingston, as well as to some Thousand Island points. To do more than this would probably require a bonus of some kind by the Canadian Government, which action would not be without precedent in the Dominion. Without such subsidy it is simply a question as to how far up the St. Lawrence and into Lake Ontario maritime coal can be carried and compete with the prices and the service of the Pennsylvania and Ohio mine owners and shippers. The situation is simply reversed when Nova Scotia and Pennsylvania coals are brought together in the northern New England markets.

There is a general feeling that in time Nova Scotia coal will become an important factor in Eastern Ontario districts. National pride will undoubtedly lead the Canadian dealers and the Canadian people generally to favor their own country's product so long as they could do so without disadvantage to themselves. —Canadian Manufacturer.

The Newest Card Cases

One of the latest decrees of fashion is that the card case shall match in color the costume of "milady." These can be easily and quickly made from velvet leather, and when lined with silk of the same or a contrasting shade, they look very pretty. The Review Stationery Department has a full line of velvet leather in the popular shades of brown, green, grey and red. This leather for the cases costs but a trifle, and it may have a design fastened upon it, or a pretty all-over initial fastened on to make it more elaborate.—The Review Stationery Department.

JUST FIFTY YEARS AGO

WAS THE BATTLE OF THE ALMA FOUGHT.

Veterns of the Crimea are Becoming Very Few — Mr. Robert Coulter of Town is One.

Just fifty years ago yesterday occurred the battle of the Alma. There are a number of veterans of the Crimean War living in this locality, one being Mr. Robert Coulter, Downie street, and he speaks with animation of the stirring times, when fifty years ago, the British forces beat back the Russian enemy.

The Battle of Alma was fought five days after the landing of the allied forces in the Crimean Peninsula, in the south of the mighty Russian Empire. When the troops who took part in this great battle mustered early in the morning between six and seven o'clock, they knew that within a very short period of time they would be face to face with their Russian foe.

It was not though, until nine o'clock a.m. that the order was given by Field Marshal Lord Raglan for the whole line to advance. The troops who bore the brunt of the attack were the Coldstream Guards, the Scots Fusilier Guards, the 23rd Royal Welsh Fusiliers, 19th Cambridgeshire Regiment, and the 42nd Highlanders, though many other infantry regiments were in the line of fire and acquitted themselves as British soldiers always do, with credit to themselves, their country, and their sovereign.

It is a somewhat singular circumstance that one of the first officers wounded as the troops advanced to cross the river should have been an officer who was well known in Canada; it was Capt. Fred Sayer, of the Welsh Fusiliers. He was shot in the ankle, this wound at once and for all precluding him from taking any further part in the action. Capt. Sayer was famous as an athlete and as a pedestrian, and was well known among amateur sportsmen in Canada, he having been quartered here with his regiment in the early "fifties."

UNDER TERRIBLE FIRE.

The Scots Fusiliers and the 23rd crossed the river and ascended the heights in splendid order, though as an instance of how terribly destructive the fire of the Russian infantry was it should be noted that the whole of the color party belonging to the Scots Fusilier Guards were, with the exception of Lieut. Loyd Lindsay, who carried the Queen's color, either killed or wounded. It is a remarkable illustration of what deadly perils a man may encounter and still come out scathless, when it is related that the color carried by Lieut. Loyd Lindsay had no less than 24 bullets through it. Remarkably though, not a single shot struck the pole, nor did its bearer receive the slightest injury, yet he was from first to last amidst a storm of shot and shell. Lieut. Lindsay, throughout the entire action preserved his composure, always advancing and always with a cheery word of encouragement to those following him. It is no wonder that when the Order of the Victoria Cross was instituted Lieut. Lindsay, who be his intrepidity and cool performance of duty under the most trying circumstances, and to whom possibly the credit of the victory was in no slight measure due, should be singled out as one of its recipients.

AFTER THE BATTLE.

In the ranks of the officers of the Scots Fusiliers, out of 29 who went into action, 17 were wounded. The Coldstream Guards also suffered terribly, they having two officers killed and many wounded, some of whom subsequently died from their injuries.

In the Welsh Fusiliers, Sergt. Luke O'Connor specially distinguished himself. He subsequently received a commission and died a general officer a very short time ago.

The ranks of the 30th Regiment were all but decimated, and in all of the infantry regiments engaged none suffered so terribly by death and wounds as did the officers of the Cambridgeshire.

Cavalry and artillery played but a small part in the attack upon the Heights of Alma; it, like Inkerman, fought six weeks later, was a battle contested and won by infantry.

As an instance of how steadily the British troops advanced, even though impeded by the river and steep heights, where they might easily have lost their formation, it should be mentioned that in the teeth of the murderous fire and despite the fact that they for a brief moment fell back (the consequence of a misunderstood order) the heights were stormed and the enemy in full retreat before sunset on that eventful day of 50 years ago.

The survivers of the Crimean campaign are becoming year by year less and less numerous. The late Duke of Cambridge and the still surviving Lord Wolseley were the last two officers who took part in that memorable campaign who retained their places on the active list of the British army.

There are probably about twelve more officers on the retired list who saw service in that war, but the vast majority of those who took part in it, whether they were officers, non-commissioned officers or men, have "crossed the bar," and long since answered to "their last long roll call."

IMPRESSIONS OF HIS TRIP

in its outside appearance the speaker characterized it as dull and dingy in the interior. They saw there the monuments of many famous kings and poets and also the dais and chair where our present king was crowned. St. Paul's cathedral was also visited. Mr. Lewis stated that this edifice far surpasses Westminster Abbey in the brightness of its interior. It is the highest building in London, being over 400 feet high. It is filled with the monuments of famous soldiers and sailors, among them Nelson and Wellington. In the crypt is buried Sir Christopher Wren, the architect of the building.

The party also were shown Windsor Castle, the abode of the King. The situation is most magnificent, rising 150 feet above the city. The king's apartments were pointed out to them, as well as the chapel where the King and Queen were accustomed to worship. The party saw the British museum, the zoological gardens and Madame Tussand's wax works.

After leaving London the party proceeded to Liverpool and from there crossed over to Belfast, the most prosperous of all Irish cities and renowned for its manufacture of linen. Dublin was next visited. It was remarkable for its wide streets and noted buildings. Among these are the famous Dublin University and the Bank of Ireland, which occupies the old Irish parliament buildings. They saw here Phoenix Park, which contains a magnificent monument to the Duke of Wellington.

The return voyage was marked by several incidents, including a burial at sea and frequent encounters with icebergs. They had with them on the steamer the famous Black Watch Band, who entertained them with two concerts daily.

The speaker concluded his address with the description of the landing at Montreal and the reception given to the Black Watch Band there. A vote of thanks, moved by Mr. C. E. Cragg and seconded by Mr. J. Stubbs, was unanimously passed.

Rev. Mr. Lewis will repeat his lecture in the Union Hall at the Stewart Settlement this evening.

The bidding opened with 9 3-4 by Mr. Whitton, this was raised by Mr. Fitzgerald to 9 7-8, Mr. Cook offered 9 15-16, Mr. Grant saw 9c. Mr. Brentenell went 9 1-16, Mr. Whitton 9 1-8. This was the best and Mr. Whitton bought Melrose Abbey, Ormond, Brickley, Shamrock, Dartford, Killarney, Norwood, Benfort and offered 9 1-16 for further. He called Lang, Warminster, who accepted.

Mr. Kerr got in his bid of 9 1-16 a fraction of a second ahead of several others, but Mr. Brentenell offered 9 1-8 and bought Myrtle, Fraserville, Trewern.

Mr. Rollins offered 9 1-16, but Mr. Kerr went a sixteenth better and took Central Smith, Lakefield, Keene, Fleetwood and Buckhorn.

Mr. Cook at 9 1-8 bought Missing Link, Otonabee Union, Cavanville, and Mount Pleasant.

The price still held and Mr. Whitton again called, this time taking Westwood and Villiers. Warsaw refused, as did also Shearer, unless the goods were settled for in Peterborough.

Mr. Rollins bought at 9 1-8 North Smith, Oakdale, Daisy D., Pine Grove, Young's Point, North Dummer, Stony Lake, Oak Leaf, South Burleigh, East Cavan and Maple Leaf.

Mr. Whitton again called 9 1-8, and got Indian River and Ballyduff.

Peterborough, Warsaw, Shearer, Cedardale remained unsold. Mr. Wm. Anderson representing Shearer, was made several offers, but refused to sell unless payment was made at the point of shipment. To do otherwise, he claimed, would be breaking the rules of the Board.

Mr. Cook held that this was not fair to the buyer. A salesman who agreed to payment through the bank on the delivery of the goods was taking nothing more than a commercial risk.

Mr. Whitton agreed with this pointing out that in Brockville the other day, he had purchased 1500 boxes and they never even asked him to go near the factory.

The chairman held that a good many buyers in this district had on former occasions, been left with the cheese on their hands, after it had been bought on the Board and brought to the point of shipment. He agreed with Mr. Anderson that a violation of the rules existed in the point he had raised.

The factories remained unsold. Mr. Whitton observing, "I'm just as well satisfied; we don't need cheese that bad. I don't give a darn."

It was decided to adjourn for two weeks.

IMPRESSIONS OF HIS TRIP

Interesting Address by Rev. J. G. Lewis Relative to His Recent Trip to the Old Country--Sights That Were Seen and Lessons That Were Impressed.

Mark-st. Methodist church was fairly well filled last night to hear the pastor, the Rev. Mr. Lewis, deliver his lecture on his trip to England. Mr. Lewis is eloquent and forcible and his remarks were enjoyed by all. Before and during the lecture the choir entertained the audience with selections. Mr. C. E. Cragg occupied the chair.

In beginning Mr. Lewis said that he never regretted the trip to England and did not think that he was foolish in going there. The party consisted of Rev. Mr. Bamford and wife, of Trenton, and Rev. Mr. Lewis and Mrs. Lewis. They embarked on the steamer Lake Manitoba at Montreal, on the evening of June 29th. Here Mr. Lewis gave some of the dimensions of a modern ocean liner. She was 500 feet in length, draught of 28 feet, tonnage 10 000, and average speed throughout the voyage was 15 knots. She used 100 tons of coal daily, and carried 709 passengers and a crew of 200 men.

The voyage down the St. Lawrence was most delightful. With varied scenery, good appetites and four meals a day there seemed nothing lacking to complete their comfort. The scenery was entirely new to most of them. Stretched along both sides of the river were the little white cottages of the French farmers. Here and there was a little village with its magnificent Roman Catholic Church extending high above the little houses.

All were on the lookout for the ancient city of Quebec, and finally this famous stronghold was reached. Rising high above the city, upon which is situated the old fort and wall, which is more ornamental than useful just at the present time. The party saw Wolfe's Cave, where that brave warrior climbed the ascent and gained access to the Plains of Abraham, and there fought the battle which gave Canada to England, though losing his life in the struggle.

Leaving Quebec, the voyage was once more begun. The entrance into the ocean was indicated by fogs and colder weather. Fogs enclosed the vessel nearly all the way across, and the weird shriek of the fog horn was continuously heard. The captain said afterwards that it had been a most anxious voyage for him. Mr. Lewis said that he witnessed the troubles, but did not experience the suffering of sea sickness.

On the first Sunday of the voyage it was Mr. Lewis' duty to preach in the afternoon. Of course, being good loyal Canadians, the party celebrated Dominion Day by a concert.

Everybody on board was glad when land was first sighted. The party landed at Liverpool on Sunday after a voyage of 10 1-2 days. The scene at the dock was one of hustle and confusion. It seemed, the speaker said, as if everyone had forgotten that it was the Sabbath. That evening they had the pleasure of hearing the famous Presbyterian divine and author, Ian Maclaren, preach on the beginning of sin.

From Liverpool the party passed to the quaint medieval city of Chester. This place is one of the oldest in England. Its history extends back to the time of the Romans. There is a wall of from 12 to 20 feet high and two miles in length. Inside of the walls are the old Chester Castle and Carts. Here also they were shown King Edgar's castle and the dungeon in which he used to cast his prisoners.

Next Mr. Lewis and party passed into North Wales to a famous watering place or summer resort there. This place had a fixed population of 10,000 people, and 2,000 reside there in summer. Towering right above the town is a promontory 680 feet in height. On the sides of this there are platforms of stone, upon which little houses have been built. An electric car ran up the mountain, from the top of which a most magnificent view could be had. Here the speaker gave a most vivid picture of a thunderstorm as viewed from the summit. The scenery of north Wales is romantic and varied. There are lakes, rivers and mountains in profusion. He could not understand why people visited Switzerland when they had such magnificent scenery close at hand. Next some time was spent at a slate quarrying town. It was entirely surrounded by mountains, and state quarries were numerous. At night they were disturbed by the crashing of slate which had dislodged from its position. From here they passed on to what he termed a toy railway, the tree being only two feet wide and stations in proportion. The road twines up the mountain like a snake. In the southern part of Wales, the farming district, Mr. Lewis saw the farm his father had owned and the church where he used to worship, as well as the cemetery where his parents were buried.

The journey from Wales to London led first through a vast mining district where the air was black with smoke, and then the farming district of England was traversed. The next stop was made at Stratford-on-Avon, the birthplace of the immortal poet, Shakespeare. The house where he was born still stands. It walls are packed with names of tourists and curiosity seekers. Among the most famous names are those of Tennyson and Browning. It is estimated that 20,000 people pass through it every year.

From here the party passed on to Warwick town. Here is situated the famous castle and grounds. The passage to the castle was cut out of solid rock. The castle is of stone, three storeys high and surrounded by a wall and moat. In this castle they were shown a collection of arms, showing the revolutions which have taken place from time to time in the characters of weapons.

Next the party visited the classic city of Oxford where the renowned university is situated. There are 22 colleges, 500 professors and teachers, and 3,000 students. Here John and Charles Wesley received their education.

Then they passed on to London, a world in itself. It stands unparalleled among the cities of the world. It beggars all description. The diameter of the city is 28 miles, the area 600 square miles, and it has 6,000 miles of railway. The park system of London is most comprehensive, there being in all 1,000 acres devoted to that purpose. Mr. Lewis and the party with him visited the Parliament buildings. They are nearly 1,000 feet high and three storeys high, their most prominent feature being the towers. Of these Victoria tower is the largest in the world, being three hundred and sixty feet high. The clock known as Big Ben is the largest and most accurate time keeper in the world. In their visit to the House of Commons they were shown some of the celebrities, such as Balfour, Austen Chamberlain, Joseph Chamberlain. They had the honor of being conducted through the House of Lords by Lord Aberdeen, a former Governor-General of Canada. They saw the paper ordering the execution of Charles I., bearing among others the signature of Oliver Cromwell.

Westminster Abbey was also visited. Although massive and attractive

A DANGEROUS CHARACTER

A despatch received from Toronto goes to show that the police gathered in a dangerous man to be at large the other day when they landed Joseph Murphy behind the bars. He is now in the county gaol and will appear next week on a charge of housebreaking. The despatch says:

Toronto, 21.—Local detectives say the man arrested in Peterborough under the name Sam Murphy is Joe Thompson, a well known safe cracker wanted in Toronto and in the Maritime provinces.

BOTH BY-RAWS DEFEATED

VERY SMALL VOTE POLLED BY THE RATEPAYERS YESTERDAY.

Did not Turn out in Numbers which Importance Warranted.

Yesterday the ratepayers of Peterborough defeated the two bylaws submitted for their opinion, one to provide for the borrowing of the sum of $12,000 for reconstructing an repairing certain bridges and purchasing new land for and opening new streets, and the other for borrowing $25,000 with which to build and equip a new fire hall. The negative majority on the former was 38, and on the latter 34. A very small vote was polled, and this evidently accounts in a measure for the defeat, as there appeared a general opinion in favor of the by-laws. Evidently a large number of ratepayers did not vote, thinking that the by-laws would be carried easily, while all those who had objections evidently turned out. There was no great agitation over the by-laws and it is possible that quite a number of the ratepayers did not know a vote was being taken.

An Alderman, when seen today, was asked what course the Council would take now. He replied, with reference to the bridges, the by-law intended to provide for work that was necessary. The only thing possible now was to do as much as would be considered advisable each year and to pay for it out of the general amount raised. The new streets, of course, would not be opened, nor would George st. be extended. The Town has bought property with a view to extending Barnardo Avenue, but this would probably be resold or put to other use. The erection of a new fire hall was out of the question for another year at least, when it might be reconsidered.

The action of the ratepayers yesterday, is not by some considered a wise one. Following is the result of the vote:—

GOVERNMENT AGREEABLE

ACCEPT PROPOSITION WITH REFERENCE TO ARMORIES SITE.

Deputation from Town Interviewed Ministers at Ottawa To-day—What the Proposition Means.

Last evening a deputation consisting of Alderman Adams, J. J. Hartley, chairman of the Board of Education, V. Eastwood, W. G. Ferguson, R. B. Rogers, members of the Board, Mr. R. R. Hall and S. R. Armstrong, town clerk, left for Ottawa, where to-day they were given a hearing by some of the Ministers with reference to the proposition that the Government grant $10,000 towards the purchase of the Separate School grounds on which to erect armories and also a new Collegiate. As is well known the price asked for the grounds is $30,000, of which the School Board will give $10,000 and the town $10,000. The following telegram received from Ottawa by a member of the Board of Education from one of the deputation indicates that the Government will contribute the remainder for the purchase of the property:

"Satisfactory arrangements made with the Government for the immediate acceptance of our proposition."

FINED FIFTY DOLLARS

AN ITALIAN FOR SELLING LIQUOR WITHOUT A LICENSE.

The Magistrate Gives Judgment — Several Cases at Court.

In Police Court this morning Police Magistrate Dumble gave the following judgment in the case in which Camille DeLuke, an Italian, was charged with selling liquor without a license, contrary to statute:—

"The evidence shows that defendant kept a lodging house for Italian laborers. They paid him for the use of his rooms and bought food and cooked for themselves.

"There was evidence of defendant's getting large quantities of lager beer and whisky, and of his selling lager to boys, and to the Italians. In August defendant got from one liquor merchant, 23 kegs of lager, and 3 gallons of whiskey. In the first nine days of September he got 20 kegs of lager, and last Friday, 11th, he got 5 kegs of lager, and 2 gallons of whiskey.

"The defence was that the Italians clubbed and bought the lager for their own use, the defendant simply buying it for them, as their agent. The defendant kept a supply of grocories such as Italians use, and had accounts with them in his book, which was produced. An examination of the book shows many entries charged against Italians, including beer at 5 cents per bottle. These charges for beer are in most of the accounts. The only explanation defendant could give of these entries was the word "bianco;" was Bianco a man's name. This explanation was not satisfactory.

"I find that the defendant sold the lager in contravention to the law, and I adjudge that he do forfeit to pay $50 and costs to be paid forthwith, and in default of payment, that he shall be confined in the County jail for three months."

The costs in the case amounted to $6.75.

Two men, for being drunk and disorderly, were fined $2 and $3.57 costs.

Thomas Henderson, an old man who was at one time a farmer in Cavan Township, was charged with being an idle person without visible means of support, and the Magistrate gave him the necessary permit to board six months in gaol.

Gilbert Hudson, from Cordova, was found sleeping in a barn, and appeared in Court this morning. He stated that he was going to the woods to work and was allowed to go.

An information charging DeLuke with giving liquor to minors without consent of parents or guardian was withdrawn.

SPLENDID ART EXHIBIT

Several by Miss Wallis, a Lady who has Succeeded Admirably in her Chosen Vocation.

A representative of the Review this morning visited the room in the north-east angle of the Y.M.C.A., where Miss Wallis' exhibit of the works of art is placed, and will remain for the remainder of this week. The articles shown are of great intrinsic merit, and were intended as a specimen collection for the St. Louis Exhibition. There is a work in terra cotta by the great sculptor, Oscar Waldmann, of Paris, and also several photos of celebrated paintings in the Louvre. It is proverbial that artists, like other people, have their trials. The Academy, at Montreal, after approving of Miss Wallis' work, declared themselves unable to send it to St. Louis, since no other Canadian sculpture prepared for exhibition was of a suitable character, and as, of course, her exhibit would prove too small a collection if Canadian sculpture was to be shown at all. However small the satisfaction of such a course, Miss Wallis was compelled to put up with it. Being here on a visit this summer, she brought her collection up from Montreal for exhibition. The public generally are cordially invited.

One of the subjects is an original bust in marble of a child. It stands about 18 inches high, and preserves in stone the fine expression of youthful innocence and charm.

Another exhibit is a bronze cast of a Dachshund, the original of which was bought by the authorities of the International Exhibition at Dresden, Germany, and still another bronze is labelled "La Toilette," representing a rat in process of making his toilet.

The terra cotta group by Waldman, gives a very vivid representation of a lion about to devour a wild boar.

Several medallions by Miss Wallis complete a very fine exhibition of specimens of art, and one that cannot fail to be of interest.

Probably the most important of Miss Wallis' works is "Mercury Charmed at His Own Invention," a life size figure of the youth graven in stone. It has acquired the distinction of being exhibited and accepted in this year's Salon at Paris. A photo of this gives an excellent idea of the work.

Doubtless many would like the opportunity to view these specimens by one who has succeeded admirably in her chosen vocation in the art centre of the world. The Review had the pleasure to look at Miss Wallis' testimonials, and they bear out the most sanguine hopes of her friends that she would do credit to Canada in her chosen sphere. Following is one letter received by Miss Wallis:—

Paris, Sept. 5, 1904.

Dear Miss Wallis,—I went again with an experienced judge of works of art to see your statute at your studio. This has more than confirmed my first impression at the Salon, and my friends agreed with me, as other critics and artists had done before, that you had displayed a skill and talent of a very high order, and that some recognition ought to be extended, in our country, as it is always done on this side of the Atlantic, to an artist who has attained such a degree of eminence in a foreign land, and in an artistic centre like Paris.

Belive me, dear Miss Wallis, respectfully.

MEETING OF PRESBYTERY

Considerable Business Done at the Campbellford Session.

The quarterly meeting of the Presbytery of Peterborough met at Campbellford yesterday. Mr. Atkinson of Warsaw was moderator. There were present Messrs. Bennett, Torrance, Potter, Reeves, Atkinson, Yule, Kemp, Macfarlane, Goodwill, Maclennan and Whitlaw, ministers, and Messrs. Barr of Warsaw, Black of Warkworth, Clark of Campbellford, Roxborough of Norwood and Buchanan of Havelock, elders. Interesting reports were received from delegates who had visited the Augmented Congregations and Home Mission Fields. The next meeting of the Presbytery was appointed to be held in St. Andrew's church, Peterborough, at 9 o'clock on the second Tuesday in December. A letter was read from Mr. McIntosh of Centreville tendering his resignation of his pastoral charge. A meeting of the Presbytery was appointed to be held at Millbrook on the 4th of October for the disposal of this resignation and other necessary business. Rev. J. A. Wilson, assistant pastor of St. Paul's, was appointed to exchange with Mr. McIntosh and read the edict requiring the congregation to attend this meeting.

Interesting reports were received showing what grants are needed for Augmented Congregations and Home Mission Fields. Arrangements were made for supplies for the mission fields during the winter, and for the visitations of congregations giving a smaller stipend than $800 and a manse, with a view of adding an increase to the minister's salary. Congregations in arrears to the pastor are to be written to by the clerk of the Presbytery.

PHENOMENA OF LIGHTNING

Its Choice of a Pathway of Least Resistance from the Clouds to the Earth.

(Jas. G. Bayles in New York Times.)

A discharge of atmospheric electricity never loses time or wastes energy in going from one point to another. In a word, it chooses "the path of least resistance." It may not seem to, but it does—though why the path it chooses should be easier than the one it rejects the observer is not always able to determine, probably because he cannot know all the conditions. The air, if normally dry, is not a good conductor; hence, a spark will usually select, if it finds one, a stream of watery vapor traversing the air and follow that wherever it may lead. Such streams are thrown off by masses of hay drying in a barn, in the steam ascending from a chimney at the bottom of which any hydro-carbon is burning, and in the evaporation of anything which throws off watery vapor. Starting from the clouds, its destination is the only part of the earth's superficial stratum which can hold and dispose of it, the water stratum in the soil at varying depths of 5 to 75 feet. It will not stop until it gets there, and what damage it does on the way may be assumed to express impatience at the resistance it encounters. A tree is a better conductor than the air, and is chosen as the path of the current, if conveniently placed, just as a house, a man or an animal would be; but neither a tree, a house, nor a living creature is a really good conductor, and for this reason it is usually more or less damaged when put to this use. That lightning appears to be so freaky and to do so many eccentric things to what it "strikes," is not because it is erratic. A force which acts in invariable obedience to natural law cannot be that. It simply knows its own business a great deal better than do those who seek to explain its behavior.

All the phenomena of lightning and all its forms are determined, doubtless, by the kind and amount of resistance it encounters. Its light is due to the resistance of the atmosphere. Its noisy and often terrifying but quite harmless accompaniment of thunder, is due to the sudden separation and reunion of bodies of air from sudden heating and cooling, and perhaps in part to the explosion of gases, into which watery vapor is decomposed by the intense heat of electrical flashes, the result of such explosion being their recombination in the proportions of water.

The form of lightning which is unusual and outside the average experience, is the globular or fireball manifestation. These so-called fireballs do very surprising "stunts." When the writer was a boy, and was summering in Morristown, N.J., he saw—or with others thought he saw—a manifestation of globular lightning. The bolt struck the spire of the old First church, facing the green, and knocked its weather vane awry. It passed down the outside of the spire, bobbing from point to point, dropped to the steps leading up to the front door, rolled down them about as rapidly as a football might have done if dropped from a height, jumped into the middle of the road, side stepped from there to the top of a rail fence, danced along this for a hundred feet or so, and exploded with a deafening report. It certainly scared one into rigidity, but did no other harm.

Several years later I was in an upper room in a frame house, occupying what is now the corner of Seventy-ninth-st., and West End Avenue, New York. The only other person in the house was the cook in the kitchen. The house was struck by lightning, apparently on the ridge of a porch on the south side. The charge followed a wisteria vine to the ground, scooped out a waggon load of mud from around its roots, and plastered it against the side of the house, passed under the porch, leaping an area some five feet wide, entered the house through a small hole which it made in a brick foundation wall, crossed the south basement, followed a hall past a portable furnace of large size, entered the kitchen through the open door leading into this hall, crossed it, and passed out by way of a closed window, not in line with the hall, taking half the window casing with it. It seemed to me at the time a very foolish performance, but no doubt there was better reason for it than I was able to discover.

Over the Border

Author of "Jennie Baxter, Journalist," Etc.

Frances bent her head and struggled with herself to repress undue emotion, but finding that impossible turned abruptly and walked fast down Whitehall.

"Her bright eyes, bless her," said the officer to a comrade, "are not the only ones dimmed with tears for this morning's work."

On reaching the inn Frances thought of waiting for the faithful Vollins, but she had not the heart to meet him nor the inclination to rest another night in the city now so hateful to her. She wrote a letter which was forwarded to him by a messenger, but said nothing of her visit to Whitehall, telling him his estimate of De Courcy had been correct, promising to send the thousand pounds to be replaced in her father's treasury as soon as she reached her home in the north, and asking pardon that his counsel had been declined.

Two hours later Frances was on her way to the north. She paused on Highgate hill and looked back on the babel she had left, vast and dim in the rising mist of the mild spring evening. "Oh, cruel city! Oh, faithless man! The bloodthirst of London may be whetted and not quenched, perjured king of England!" She bowed her head to her horse's mane and wept helplessly.

CHAPTER IX.

WILLIAM ARMSTRONG rode his splendid black steed like one more accustomed to the polishing of saddle leather than to the wearing out of the same material in the form of boots. Horse and man were so subtly suited, each to each, that such another pair might well have given to some early artist the first idea of a centaur. Armstrong was evidently familiar with the district he traversed, for he evinced no surprise when, coming to the crown of a height, he saw in the valley below him a one storied stone building, whose outhouses and general surroundings proclaimed it a solitary inn, but the horse, now self contained and doubtless more fatigued, thrust forward his ears and gave utterance to a faint whinny of pleasure at the near prospect of rest and refreshment. The hand of the rider affectionately stroked and patted the long black mane, as if in silent corroboration of the animal's eager anticipations.

The young man was as fair as his mount was dark. A mass of yellow hair flowed out from under his Scot's bonnet and over his broad shoulders. A heavy blond mustache gave him a semi-military air, a look of the cavalier, as if he were a remnant of that stricken band across the border which was fighting for King Charles against daily increasing odds; but something of jaunty self confidence in Armstrong's manner betokened that the civil war raging in England was no concern of his, or that, if he took any interest in it, his sympathies inclined toward the winning side, as indeed was the case with many of his countrymen. His erect bearing, body straight as one of his native pines, enhanced the soldier-like appearance of the horseman, and it needed but a glance at his clear chiseled but resolute face and powerful frame to be convinced that he would prove a dangerous antagonist to meet in combat, while the radiant good nature of his frank countenance indicated a merciful conqueror should victory fall to him, as seemed likely unless the odds were overwhelming.

Both prowess and geniality were on the instant of being put to the test as he approached the inn, where a wayfarer is usually certain of a welcome if he has but money in his pouch. A lieutenant, his tall weapon held upright, stepped out into the road from the front of the closed door before which he had been standing, when he saw that the traveler was about to halt and dismount.

"Ye'll be fur dawnerin' on a bit faurer forret," hinted the sentinel in a cautious, insinuating manner, as if he were but giving expression to the other's unspoken intention.

"A wise man halts at the first public house he comes to after the sun is down," replied Armstrong.

"Ah'm thinkin' a man's no verra wise that stops whaur he's least wanted, if them that's no wantin' him has good airn in their hoona."

"Aye, my lad, steel's a bonny argument, rightly used. Whut's a' th' steer here, that a tired man, willing to pay his way, is sent doon th' road?"

"Weel, ye see, there's muckle folk in ben yonner that has mony a thing ta chatter about, an' that's a' Ah ken o't, except that Ah'm ta let nane inside ta disturb them."

"Whose man are you?"

"Ah belong ta th' Yerl o' Traquair."

"And a very good friend of mine the Earl of Traquair is. Will you just go inside and tell him William Armstrong is sitting here on his horse?"

"That wull Ah no, fur if th' king himsel' were ta ask Ah munna let him by th' door. Sa jist tak a fule's advice fur yince and gang awa' ta th' next inn afore it gets darker an' ye're like to lose yer rod amang th' hills."

"I must get something for my horse to eat. He's done, and should not be pushed farther. I'll wait outside until their lordships have finished their council."

"Th' stalls are a' fou already, an', if not wi better nags, at least wi the nags o' noblemen, an' Ah'm thinkin' that's neither you nor me."

"The stalls may be fou, but my beast's empty, and I must get a feed of corn, noble or simple. Ye tell the earl it's me and ye'll be thankit."

"Indeed, me braw man, Ah tak' orders fra the yerl himsel' an' fra nane else. Jist ticket yer beast wi' the spur, or Ah'll gie him a jab wi' th' point o' this spear."

The descent of young Armstrong was so instantaneous that the man at arms had no opportunity of carrying out his threat or even of leveling the unwieldy weapon in his own defense. The horseman dropped on him as if he had fallen from the clouds, and the pike rang useless on the rough cobble-stones. The black horse showed no sign of fright, as might have been expected, but turned his intelligent head and calmly watched the fray as if accustomed to any eccentricity on the part of his master. And what the fine eyes of the quadruped saw was startling enough. The wide spread limbs of the surprised soldier went whirling through the air like the arms of a windmill in a gale.

Armstrong had grasped him by the waist and turned him end for end, receiving him, Catherine-wheel-wise, until the bewildered wits of the victim threatened to leave him through the action of centrifugal force. By the time the unfortunate sentinel lost all reckoning of the direction in which solid earth lay with regard to his own swiftly changing position he found himself on his assailant's shoulder, gaping like a newly landed trout, and, thus hoisted aloft, he was carried to the closed door, which a kick from Armstrong's foot sent crashing inward. The intruder flung his burden into the nearest corner of the large room as if he were a sack of corn. Then, facing the startled audience, the young man cried:

"Strong orders should have a stronger guard than you set, gentlemen. I hold to the right of every Scotsman to enter a public dram shop when he pleases."

A dozen amazed men had sprung to their feet, overturning a chair or a stool here and there behind them and here and there a flagon before them. Eleven swords flashed out, but the upraised right hand of the chairman and his commanding voice caused the weapons to hang suspended.

"The very man! The very man we want! Will, where have you dropped from?"

"From the back of my horse a moment since, as your henchman here will bear witness, Traquair."

"Armstrong, your arrival at this juncture is providential. That's what it is, providential!"

"It must be, my lord, for you did your best to prevent it. Your stout pikeman would not even let you know I was within call, so I just brought him in to give the message properly."

The sentinel had by this time got on his feet and was staring at the company like one dazed.

"On the stanes ootside, ma lord."

"Very well, go ont and lift it, and see that you hold a better grip of it when the next man comes along. Attend to Armstrong's horse and keep an eye up and down the road."

LINDSAY MERCHANT INJURED.

Thrown Out By Runaway and Found Unconscious on Road.

Lindsay, Ont., Sept. 21.—Yesterday afternoon A. Primeau, grocer and butcher, and for 25 years a prominent business man of this town, drove out into the county west of here for a load of produce.

Last night two bicyclists found him lying unconscious on the Little Britain road, a short distance from town.

He was brought to the Ross Hospital, where he now lies unconscious as a result of severe concussion of the brain.

His horse had run away and thrown him out.

Gun's Recoil Upset Canoe.

Port Arthur, Sept. 21.—V. Mill, a Nova Scotian, was drowned by his canoe upsetting in Neebing River yesterday morning. He and companion went out duck shooting. Both men fired at a bird and the recoil of the gun upset the boat. Neither could swim. One man grabbed the boat and held on until he reached shore.

Rolled Under Fender.

Ottawa, Sept. 21.—Joseph Derrie of Maxville, Ont., an excursionist to the fair, lies in a precarious condition in the Protestant Hospital as the result of a street car accident. He was caught under the fender and dragged a considerable distance. He is about 22 years of age.

Loses His Right Hand.

Peterboro, Sept. 21.—Burns Doble, a young man whose home is in Sunderland, had his right hand taken off here yesterday afternoon while working at the Peterboro Canoe Factory. He was engaged in running one of the planers when his hand became caught in the rollers. He is about 22 years of age and had been in town for two months.

Eight Passengers Injured.

Winnipeg, Sept. 21.—The eastbound Imperial Limited ran into the westbound Transcontinental Express at Medicine Hat yesterday. Eight passengers were injured, though none seriously. The cow-catchers on both engines were badly damaged, and the cars of the trains more or less damaged. The explanation given by the engineer of the limited was that steam issuing from an engine on a side-track had obscured his view of the signals and the Transcontinental standing before the station.

Freights Collide in Fog.

Forest, Sept. 21.—During a heavy fog yesterday morning about one o'clock a freight train, westbound, ran into the rear of another freight train, near the town line crossing. One engine was derailed and a cattle car was thrown into the ditch. No one was injured except Brakeman J. J. O'Rourke, who received a slight injury to his nose.

PROSTS NIP WESTERN GRAIN.

Average Wheat Yield Will Not Be More Than 16 Bushels.

Winnipeg, Sept. 21.—Heavy frosts were general throughout the west Monday night, ranging from 2 to 8 degrees, practically no district escaping. Although the great bulk of wheat is now in, certain sections in Saskatchewan and Northern Assiniboia have still a considerable percentage to harvest.

According to the C. P. R. weekly crop reports, given out yesterday, wheat growers all over the country are being greatly handicapped by the rains of the past week. In some parts it has been raining continually for the past four or five days, while in other places, frequent showers are putting a complete stop to threshing. As a result, at some points, from 5 to 25 per cent. of wheat and oats still remains to be harvested.

Many sections of country were not visited by rust at all, but at many of these places frost has nipped the grain considerable, although, in no instance, in comparison to injury by rust. It would appear that the average yield of wheat will not reach higher than 16 bushels to the acre. Some points show a yield as high as 30 bushels, with oats averaging up to 40 bushels, but these places are extremely rare.

Line by the C.P.R. Co. The officials declined to give information for publication. Another meeting will be held at an early date to settle the matter.

Lady Teacher's Suicide.

Ottawa, Sept. 21.—Miss Harmon, principal of the Harmon School for Ladies, committed suicide Monday night by jumping off the Alexandria Bridge. She was evidently mentally deranged, as a note in her pocket read: "Dr. McCarthy has killed me with his theories about keeping boarders. Take my body to Rogers' morgue, Rideau street, and from there to Montreal to Kate." She jumped off the bridge into the Ottawa River about 10 o'clock, and her body was recovered yesterday morning.

HUGH CLARK CAN BOAST

Says Chief Justice in Dismissing Petition Against Him.

Liberal Petitioner Had No Evidence Whatever to Support His Charges of Corruption—The Court Congratulates Major Clark, M.P.P., Upon the Purity of His Election and Absence of Outside Interference.

Walkerton, Ont., Sept. 21.—Major Hugh Clark, M.P.P., for Centre Bruce, is confirmed in his seat. The hearing of the protest against his election only occupied ten minutes yesterday morning.

Mr. Hartley H. Dewart, K.C., appeared for the petitioner, Dr. J. M. Stewart, of Chesley, the defeated candidate. Mr. E. A. Du Vernet and Mr. Arthur George, of Chesley, with Lieut.-Col. Scott, of Walkerton, represented Major Clark.

Unable to Prove Corruption.

Mr. Dewart informed the Court at the outset that the petitioner, while satisfied there had been corruption, was unable to prove it and would offer no evidence.

Mr. Du Vernet took issue as to any evidence of corruption. "I have gone into the evidence carefully," he said, "and have been unable to find anything to support any charge of corruption. Mr. Clark's expenses were only $73.10. He took the precaution of allowing no outsiders to interfere with the campaign. He thought the people of this community should attend to this matter themselves, and he feels they did so without interference and in most cases without canvass."

Mr. Justice Street—"What did his majority?"

Mr. Du Vernet—"Forty-four."

Congratulated By the Court.

"In view of the statements of counsel," said the Chief Justice, "nothing remains for us to do, but order the dismissal of the petition with costs. The result shows the value of the prudence that has been pursued by the respondent in this case by relying on the support of his friends and the voters and not seeking outside assistance, or, as perhaps it may be termed in some cases, interference. It must be gratifying to him to find that by his own unaided efforts he has succeeded in carrying the constituency. With regard to what has been said about corrupt practices we have to assume that none can be proved or they would be presented to the court. The election was of a pure character, and as far as we can see the respondent can boast of it. The fact that the majority was small and that the petitioner had no evidence to offer contradicts the idea of there having been any corruption."

Major Clark was warmly congratulated by his friends. He makes the second Conservative against whom the protest proceedings have failed in the present series.

NORTH YORK PETITION.

Hon. E. J. Davis on the Stand—How Elias Pegg Lost Money and Others Found It.

Newmarket, Sept. 21.—The trial of the North York election petition against the return of Hon. E. J. Davis was begun here yesterday before Chancellor Boyd and Justice Teetzel.

Hon. E. J. Davis on Stand.

The first witness after the purely formal proceedings as to date of election, reading of writ, etc., was the respondent, Hon. E. J. Davis, who stated that he was returned at the bye-election on Feb. 29, 1903, by a majority of 449. In the course of his examination, Mr. Davis accepted responsibility for Duncan Marshall, but knew nothing of the Central Liberal Association.

The denial of agency, of bribery, of corrupt practices, the forgetfulness of all the incidents of the election campaign that were not wholly pure, were the means adopted by the Minister to meet the assertions of petitioner's counsel.

A number of witnesses gave testimony as to who were Liberal workers.

Lieut.-Col. Lloyd knew George Heise, but had not canvassed votes with him. In reply to Mr. Alexworth, Col. Lloyd explained the tenancy of the room a which the committees met, and which he had rented, and sub-let to the association, and for the rent of which and for fuel he had been paid $47.25.

Sir William on the Stand.

The court adjourned at 1.10 for an hour, and on reassembling, Sir William Mulock was called. A Dominion election in North Ontario was being conducted concurrently with the North York election. He did not know J. D. Thompson. Mr. Blackstock undertook that any further charge against Sir William would be withdrawn, and did not require his further attendance.

W. C. Widdifield, secretary of the Reform Association, stated that there was no specific membership. He had to rely on the assistance of such prominent Liberals as volunteered. He knew Somerville, who was a member of the central committee, Heise, Cane, Pegg, Winch and William Maclure he knew, as workers. Others also testified to the names of those who took an active part in the election.

Elias Pegg's Story.

Elias Pegg swore he had heard the day of the election that a statement was made that Henry Hodge had got $6 from him to vote for Davis. Pegg had gone to him and asked him if he had made such a statement. Hodge admitted he had, and Pegg said he had lost $5, and if Hodge had found it he wanted it back.

Henry Hodge swore that by an arrangement with Pegg the latter had come over to his place the next day and Pegg said he had got the money. They went into the stable, and Pegg took out his pocket-book and rolled some money up in a ball. He said:

"You must find the money."

"All the trouble I had to find it was to turn and pick it up," said the witness.

There were a five and a one dollar bill. Pegg said he would try and get Hodge more next time.

"What about Will Andrews?" He was just going there.

"You might get Solomon Staley for $5."

"I got him for less than five."

Hodge took the $5 he got to Thomas Brunton. He told Pegg that Brunton had the money, and Pegg left the house, saying he was going for it. He never went.

T. M. Brunton produced the bills which Hodge had given him 18 months before. He had preserved them carefully, and the $5 showed the familiar brown back.

Harry Stickwood said that as a result of a convention Pegg put $2 into his hand.

"When a man shoves money in your hand, anybody would take it," said the witness, when cross-examined. It made no change in his opinion, however, and he voted for Lennox.

J. M. Boyd of Owen Sound, was called just before 6 o'clock, in connection with charge 24, to prove the identity of William J. Robinson. He was the same man on whose corrupt practice the election had been voided in Owen Sound on Nov. 21, 1902. He recognized him as present in court, and also his photograph.

The court was adjourned at 6 o'clock until 9.30 this morning.

Receipts of live stock were 102 car loads as reported by Messrs. Fox & Hay of the C. P. R. and G. T. R., composed of 1512 cattle, 800 hogs, 2200 sheep and lambs, 600 hogs, 111 calves.

There seemed to be no demand for shipping cattle, and had there been any dealers waiting them they could not have got any of choice quality. There may have been one or two loads that were intended for exporters, but they were bought up as feeders. Export bulls, of which there were several, sold at $3.75 to $4.25 per cwt. One choice quality 2-year-old bulls, bought by W. H. Bailey, weighing 1470 lbs., sold at $4.60 per cwt., but this was the best quality bull seen on the market in months.

There were few good quality butchers' cattle offered and only a limited number brought over $4 per cwt. The highest sale reported was for a picked lot of 9 weighing 1085 lbs. each at $4.37½, sold by Maybee Wilson; Corbett, Henderson & Murse sold two weighing 1140 lbs., each at $4.35; and McDonald & Maybee sold 24 weighing 1170 lbs. each at $4.35, and one lot of 20, averaging 1060 lbs. each, at $4.10 per cwt. and another lot of 17 cattle at $4.00; and Maybee & Wilson sold a lot of 20, weighing 1020 lbs. each at $4.12½ per cwt. Medium sold at $3.60 to $3.75; common sold at $3 to $3.35 and inferior rough at $2.50 to $2.75 per cwt.

The bulk of offerings of feeders and stockers, which was large, were of common to inferior quality, only a limited number of choice lots being offered. Trade was good for the best qualities, but slow for inferior lots. Feeders weighing from 800 to 1000 lbs. each sold all the way from $3.40 to $3.90 per cwt.; those weighing 800 to 900 lbs., off to $3.60; stockers of good quality $2.90 to $3 for those weighing 600 to 700 and inferior qualities at $2.25 to $2.50. Distillery bulls, 1300 to 1500 lbs. each, at $2.75 to $3.12½ per cwt.

There was a fifteen load supply of milch cows and springers, many of which were of medium to good quality. The demand for them was good and prices ranged from $30 to $60 each. The bulk of offerings sold from $35 to $45 each.

The demand for veal calves was good for all of good to choice quality. Prices ranged from $3.00 to $3.25 per cwt. for the general run, with extra choice quality at $3.50 per cwt.

The run of sheep and lambs was large, over 2000 being sold. Sheep were firm at on Saturday last. Mr. Harris reports at $2 to $3.25 per cwt.; culls sold at $2.50 to $2.60 per cwt. Lambs sold at $4.12½ to $4.85 per cwt., the bulk going at about $4.40 per cwt. While the trade was reported as being good for sheep, the lamb trade was reported as being much slower.

Deliveries of hogs were not large and prices were easy at the decline reported on Saturday last. Mr. Harris reports reports the quality as not being good, in many instances he had to cull out a large percentage of lean stubble hogs, with little or no fat on them. Price for selects was $5.15, lights and fats $4.90 per cwt.

ECZEMA ON LEG
FOR TEN YEARS

Would Scratch Till the Blood Flowed—Entirely Cured by Dr. Chase's Ointment.

Mrs. Hiram Frey, Norwood, Ont., states—"I was troubled for ten years with eczema on one leg. The itching was terrible, and when scratched the blood would come. The doctors could not cure me. Fortunately I heard of Dr. Chase's Ointment, and its persistent use has completely cured me. There is now no trace of the disease left.

My little girl two years old, has also been cured of Eczema by Dr. Chase's Ointment. Her face was a mass of sores and we had to bandage her hands to keep her from scratching it. Today her face is clear of even the scars which the ugly sores made, and she is thoroughly cured. I am glad of an opportunity to let people know what a blessing Dr. Chase's Ointment has proved itself to us."

A SPECIAL ATTRACTION

WILL BE THE EXHIBITION OF THE ARTS AND HANDICAPTS AT THE FAIR.

Will be a Demonstration of the Work which the Woman's Art Association is Doing.

A special attraction to the ladies at the Fair will be the arts and handicrafts exhibit, sent from Montreal. This exhibit will include work done by the French-Canadians, such as homespuns, woollens, linens and weaving, fine Honiton and point lace made by English and Irish settlers, embroideries and drawn linen by the Doukhobors and Galicians.

The exhibit is sent under the auspices of the Woman's Art Association of Canada, of which the Countess of Minto is Honorary President.

The object of this Association is to restore the almost lost industries of the original settlers, and to improve the character of their designs. In order to encourage home arts and crafts the Association lends them material aid in the disposal of their work.

A number of local ladies who are interested in the W.A.A. will have charge of this exhibit.

We understand that a number of sketches, the work of Montreal artists, are to form an added attraction to this department.

Such is this work which the Woman's Art Association is carrying out that Canadian home-spuns are beginning to be well known, and are already much sought after, both for durability and for beauty of texture. Already the improvement in spinning and weaving is most noticeable, and the designs in portiers, covers, etc., are better chosen than formerly. In the effort to conserve the vegetable dyes the Association is meeting with signal success. The women themselves are eager to recover the arts of their grandmothers.

The Association has been successful in dealing with the Doukhobors, whose Russian embroideries are famous and sell readily.

Indian work has been the most difficult to influence; it will take some time to teach the Nomadic tribes that their own old dyes and patterns are truly beautiful.

Experience has taught many valuable lessons in the management of this work, which is of national benefit; but one fact becomes clear and more insistant, it is, that the encouragement of industries within the home, solves in great measure the problem of keeping our young women at home.

Those who know country life in Canada realize the fact that money on a farm is scarce, to the women almost unknown, hence discontent among the younger members, and flight to the independence of the city. The Association pays cash on delivery for all orders, thus encouraging the workers and gaining influence, which is used for the improvement of the work.

Now is the time to prevent our home girls,—those brought to us by our immigrants, those belonging to Lower Canada, and those distinctively aboriginal—all already on the decline, from disappearing altogether. If the effort be not made within the next few years, Canada will be the poorer through the loss of artistic industries, which, preserved, may spread the fame of her craftsmen abroad.

THE Y.M.C.A. SEASON'S SUCCESSFUL OPENING

Pleasing Programme of Vocal and Instrumental Music--Mr. Percy K. Holmes Introduced by the President and Tendered an Ovation--Physical Work of the Institution.

Mr. Percy K. Holmes, the new Y. M.C.A. physical director, was certainly tendered an ovation at the social-musicale which marked the opening of the Y.M.C.A. season last evening. The affair was held in Association Hall which was filled to overflowing by young people, and older ones too, all of whom manifested a great interest in the evening's programme. There were many young men present, and every one of them, it is safe to say, is affiliated in some way; if there were any who are not, they probably have taken out membership tickets by this time. The President of the Y. M. C. A. Board, Lieut.-Col. Edwards, was in the chair, and introduced a very pleasing programme, the numbers of which were well received.

In making the audience and Mr. Holmes acquainted Lieut.-Col. Edwards first referred to the work of the Association. It resembled a triangle — it had three sides and all might be considered equal, the spiritual, mental and physical. The spiritual, mental and physical. The spir- The physical and mental sides were very important, the former having to do with the development of the body, and the latter emphasizing, as part of its office at least, the cultivation of sociability. It was very fitting that both young men and young women should give attention to this aspect of the work of the Y.M.C.A. and Y.W.C.A. The ladies had done a great deal for the Y.M.C.A. and all who looked upon the building or were benefitted by its work must be impressed with what the town and the young men owed to the woman who founded it. Her memory, said he, will always be revered here, and we shall ever be thankful and proud that we had such a woman in our midst. Continuing he further referred to the work done by women for institutions for young men and women throughout the States, and, coming nearer home, said it was a pleasing fact that time had been taken by the forelock and that the young men had invited the ladies to be present at the opening, expecting, of course, the compliment returned when the fine new Y. W. C. A. would be opened.

The president stated that the physical work was one of the leading features of the institution. Last year when the physical director had resigned it was determined to engage a man equal to him, or as good as could possibly be got, a young man in whose life the physical, spiritual and mental sides had been developed. Mr. Holmes, who had just graduated from the Springfield Training School, was recommended in the highest terms to take up the work here, and the speaker now introduced the new physical director.

THE PHYSICAL DIRECTOR.

Mr. Holmes was greeted with a storm of applause. Though physical director he pleaded not guilty to the charge of being a speaker, but the audience undoubtedly soon thought different. At the outset he told a story about a boy who came home from a social with his "inner man" filled, his pockets also bulging and who described his condition to his mother as being "more'n full." Said Mr. Holmes:—

That is just the way I feel—more than full of gratitude and thanks to you for your kind and hearty welcome. I must say that it gave me a thrill of patriotism when I met Col. Edwards and Mr. Williamson at Buffalo this spring and decided to come back to Canada, my native land. When one is in a foreign land it does his vision good to get back home and see the old flag.

It makes me glad when I think of the possibilities of our country, Canada—destined in the near future to be a great country, even as great as the neighboring Republic. (Applause). Canada with her great natural resources cannot help but become a great country, and yet her resources are practically undeveloped. She has 30,000 more square miles of arable land than has the U. S. She has probably the greatest coal fields in the world, for a thousand miles from Alaska down through British Columbia. She has almost an inexhaustible supply of timber for building and manufacturing purposes. She has iron, gold and many other metals, in abundance. Her inland water ways are such that she can get her inland products to the coast cheaper than can the United States even.

Canada will soon become the granary of the world. Within a short time Manitoba alone will be raising more wheat than Germany and Russia together. The people of India think of Canada as the land of Paradise; and well is it named.

Where in there a country where people can enjoy to a greater extent freedom of their religious convictions; where the purity and the standard of home life is higher, where educational advantages are greater? It is said that the American people are more enterprising and that they live faster, but after all what do we live for? Do we not get as much out of life, and even more, than any other people. All these things I have referred to are essential to the welfare of a nation, but there is one more far greater asset — our young men. Canada may well be proud of her young men. Wherever they go they make themselves felt. (Applause.)

It has been a pleasure to me to find such a fine and throbbing little city as Peterborough, and, above all, to find such a fine lot of young men. I am sorry that my acquaintance with the young ladies is so limited, because I believe they are as fine as the young men. (Applause.)

To get at the strategic point of the development of a nation is to get at the young man or the boy; the boy of to-day is the man of to-morrow. The last 60 years has been a period of urbanization—that is, a period of moving from the country to the city. This has naturally brought crowds of young men within the temptation of big cities and away from home influences. As early as 1842 Geo. Williams, a young dry goods clerk in London, Eng., saw the great danger that young men were in in the big cities away from home. The first step was to start a little bedroom prayer meeting for the fellows working in his department. This developed into a missionary society. A literary society was then formed for mutual improvement. Here young men became converted. This soon spread to other business houses. In 1844 a society was formed and a committee appointed. The name adopted was the Young Men's Christian Association. They soon outgrew the room and had to get larger quarters. Up to 1865 it was a purely religious organization, but they soon saw the need of an all-round development. They began to pay attention to the mental side, then the social and then the physical. The work become too large for England alone and so extended to America, where to-day it has assumed greater proportions than anywhere else in the world.

Here in Peterborough, with such a fine building and equipment, and I doubt if very few cities of the size in Canada or the United States have such a fine building and equipment, a great deal of good can be accomplished. With the co-operation of the Y.M.C.A., the Y.W.C.A, and the churches the moral and religious life of Peterborough ought to be raised higher than it has ever been before. (Applause.)

The very pleasing programme of vocal and instrumental music opened with a Rubenstein Impromptu played with artistic grace upon the piano by Miss Alice K. Roger. A vocal solo "Beauty's Eyes," by Mr. Jas. Dawson was very effectively sung. Miss Crothers was very successful in her interpretation of the berceuse from "Jocelyn," and responded to an encore. Later in the evening the audience applauded her rendition of Behm's Cavatina. A very charming vocal solo, "Forget, Forgive," was sung by Mrs. E. Eardly Wilmot, and a pretty cradle song was a selection given on another occasion. In appreciation of this number the audience encored and Mrs. Eardley-Wilmot again favored them, her song being "Only a Rosebud." With great purity of vocal tone and expression, Mr. J. Lawrence sang, "Sing me to Sleep," and as an encore, "Violets." Mr. E. Norman Jolliffe's singing of "The Sailor's Grave," was enthusiastically received, and responding to an encore he gave the song, "I Long for You."

Cake and coffee were served at the close of the programme, and with the singing of the National Anthem, a very auspicious opening social was brought to a close.

IN THE REALM OF SPORT

BASEBALL.

The following will be the T. A. A. team against Bobcaygeon to-morrow: Quinlan p., Fitzgerald c., Treanor 1b, Grady 2b, Craig ss, Callaghan 3b, Letranouille lf., Fitzpatrick cf, Dorcher rf. The weather is getting too cold for baseball so the Abstainers are going to finish the Kawartha League series by a victory to-morrow.

The Port Hope Guide has the following to say about the Midland League meeting on Tuesday night: The C.L.A. Executive, the Trent Valley Lacrosse Executive and the Executive of the Town League have all handed out queer decisions, but last night the Executive of the Midland Baseball League outclassed them all.

There were several matters came up for settlement. Lindsay had protested the game with Peterborough for pitching Reid, a non-resident, and Bowmanville had protested Peterborough for playing McCann, who did not come under the residence rule. Then Bowmanville had another protest against Cobourg for playing Burge, whom they claimed was not a resident of Cobourg. Of course the two first mentioned protests came out at a previous meeting and the Executive ordered both Bowmanville and Lindsay to play the game over in Peterborough. The matter that occupied most of the time last night was the Bowmanville-Cobourg affair. Bowmanville claimed game played in Cobourg on the ground that Burge had been out of Cobourg since the 16th of July. Burge may or may not have been a resident of Cobourg but there was one thing certain, that Bowmanville did not produce evidence enough to have him thrown out, that is from a reasonable point of view. But that is the one great fault with the Midland League Executive. As soon as a player is protested they put him down as guilty. If they would just take into consideration that a man is "innocent until proven guilty" and make the protesting club furnish satisfactory evidence it would just save them a whole lot of trouble and not cause so much hard feeling.

However, to get back to the question. The Cobourg representative admitted that Burge had been working in Belleville, but was home every week. If Cobourg had violated the rules in playing Burge, it was not done intentionally, and they were willing to drop this player and have the game replayed. From the fact that Lindsay and Bowmanville had been given a similar deal to this it seemed only fair that Cobourg's proposition, to replay the game should be accepted. But the Executive did not look at it in this light, and after the vote was taken it stood four in favor of giving the game to Bowmanville and two to have the game replayed. Of course majority rules and Cobourg were obliged to abide by one of the rawest decisions ever handed out by an executive. Here is Peterborough, which twice violated the rules by ringing Kingston and Toronto pitchers, and after admitting their guilt were ordered to replay the game. Then look at Cobourg's side. Burge, who has been a playing member of the Cobourg team for the past three or four years, secures a good position in Belleville about the middle of July. He plays for no other team except Cobourg, but because they bring him up for a game against Bowmanville he is thrown out and the game awarded to Bowmanville. It is indeed a very unfair decision, and one that will help to kill baseball in the Midland League in the future.

This kills Cobourg's championship aspirations.

RUGBY.

Last evening in the Oriental one of the largest and most enthusiastic executive meetings in the history of the club was held. President F. S. Clarry was in the chair and there were present Mr. R. F. McWilliams, hon. vice-president; W. Crowley, capt and last year president; F. A. Clarke, second vice president; C. C. Graham, sec.-treas.; H. A. Hollingshead, F. Burnham, F. Bradburn, E. Hartubise, A. Noble and F. Ford.

Mr. Larmouth, manager of the Street Railway Co., was present at the meeting. In regard to the club's request that the Light and Power Co. should put lights in the Exhibition grounds for practice purposes Mr. Larmouth said that the lights will be installed the latter end of this week. A vote of thanks was passed to the Light & Power Co. for their kindness. The schedule was next considered. It was thought advisable that as many games, exhibition or otherwise, as could be arranged should be played. The secretary was ordered to get on games on all off dates. It is possible that the Victoria will appear here on October 1 and Varsity on Oct 22. On Oct. 8 Argonauts will play the first league game here and the following Saturday the Toronto will be here. The meeting decided that a coach was a necessity and a good man will be procured at once, probably before next Saturday.

There will be a practice on Thursday afternoon on the field to the north of the C. G. E. works and Captain Crowley desires all who can attend to do so. On Saturday afternoon there will be a big practice at the Exhibition grounds. Two teams will be chosen and a game played. The meeting thought that something ought to be done for junior rugby. The proposal to enter a team in the junior series of the O.R.F.U. was abandoned. It was finally decided to carry on a City League, to be operated and financed by the Peterborough Club. It is probable that a good league will be formed which will boom junior rugby. A meeting will be held Friday night to arrange matters. The following clubs are likely to enter—Y. M. C. A., T.A.A, Bough Riders and All Saints. These teams are asked to keep the date in mind.

It was decided to resurrect the annual dance, and a committee was appointed, consisting of Messrs. R. F. McWilliams, A. A. Hollingshead and F. Burnham to look after the affair. In all probability it will be held on Friday night, Oct. 21, the night before the Varsity game, so the College players may be guests. An interesting part of the proceedings was the handing over to the secretary of a check for $7.85 from the Britannias, one of last year's city league clubs who have disbanded and who had a balance on the right side of the ledger. A vote of thanks was tendered the Britannias thanking them for their generosity.

A PASTOR'S WIFE CURED OF PELVIC CATARRH

She Suffered for Years and Felt Her Case Was Hopeless—Cured by Pe-ru-na.

MRS. ANNA B. FLEHARTY, recent Superintendent of the W. C. T. U. headquarters, at Galesburg, Ill., was for ten years one of the leading women there. Her husband, when living, was first President of the Nebraska Wesleyan University, at Lincoln, Neb.

In a letter written from 461 Sixty-seventh street, W., Chicago, Ill., Mrs. Fleharty says the following in regard to Peruna:

"Having lived a very active life as wife and working partner of a busy minister, my health failed me a few years ago. I lost my husband about the same time, and gradually I seemed to lose health and spirit. My daughter is a confirmed invalid, and we both felt great need of an invigorator.

"One of my neighbors advised me to try Peruna. A bottle was immediately secured and a great change took place in my daughter's as well as in my own health. Our appetites improved very greatly, the digestion seemed much helped, and restful sleep soon improved us, so that we seemed like new women.

"I would not be without Peruna for ten times its cost."—Mrs. Anna B. Fleharty.

What used to be called female diseases by the medical profession is now called pelvic catarrh. It has been found by experience that catarrhal diseases of the pelvic organs are the cause of most cases of female diseases.

Dr. Hartman was among the first of America's great physicians to make this discovery. For forty years he has been treating diseases peculiar to women, and long ago he reached the conclusion that a woman entirely free from catarrhal affection of these organs would not be subject to female disease. He therefore began using Peruna for these cases and found it so admirably adapted to their permanent cure that Peruna has now become the most famous remedy for female diseases ever known. Everywhere the women are using it and praising it. Peruna is not a palliative simply; it cures by removing the cause of female disease.

Dr. Hartman has probably cured more women of female ailments than any other living physician. He makes these cures simply by using and recommending Peruna.

Mrs. Anna B. Fleharty.

Mrs. Esther M. Milner, DeGraff, Ohio, writes:

"I was a terrible sufferer from female weakness and had the headache continuously. I was not able to do my housework for myself and husband. I wrote you and described my condition as near as possible. You recommended Peruna. I took four bottles and was completely cured. I think Peruna a wonderful medicine."—Mrs. Esther M. Milner.

Congressman Thad. M. Mahon, of Chambersburg, Pa., writes:

"I take pleasure in commending your Peruna as a substantial tonic and a good catarrh remedy."—T. M. Mahon.

If you do not receive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

Address Dr. Hartman, President of The Hartman Sanitarium, Columbus, Ohio.

BATTLE EXPECTED SHORTLY

Kuropatkin Likely to Resist Japanese at Mukden.

JAPS MEET WITH REPULSE

Both Armies Have Recovered from the Effects of the Fight at Liaoyang and are Fit--Japs Fail to Capture Dai Pass, but are Slowly Pressing North.

Tokio, Sept. 22.—An impression is growing general that an engagement will soon take place at Mukden. Gen. Kuropatkin is evidently preparing to make a determined resistance to any attempt to dispossess him, and is entrenching and constructing defences. He has an immense force available, but the opinion is expressed that Tie Pass would be a more favorable location for defence. The Russians, however, are unwilling to suffer the loss of prestige which would be involved by the abandonment of Mukden. Both armies are now resting and have recovered from the effects of the fight at Liaoyang.

Troops Were in Touch.

A telegram received yesterday from military headquarters in Manchuria says that portions of the Russian troops engaged in reconnaissances while returning from Ping-Taitsze continued in touch with the Japanese lines along the Mukden and Fushu roads on Sept. 18. There was no fighting.

Japs Fail to Capture Dai Pass.

St. Petersburg, Sept. 22.—General Kuropatkin, telegraphing under Tuesday's date, declares that the situation at the front is unchanged. He describes an outpost fight Tuesday at Dai Pass, half way between Bentsiaputse and Sintsintin. A Japanese force, consisting of four companies, marched up from Dsiantchan, twenty-three miles northeast of Saimadzi, and tried to capture the pass and turn the Russian left flank, but the Russians repulsed the attack, and the turning movement was checked by machine guns.

Pushing Northward.

Gen. Kuroki's Headquarters in the Field, via Fusan, Sept. 22.—The Japanese are slowly pushing northward. The outposts are in touch near Yentai, and skirmishes between outposts and patrol parties occur daily. It is believed that the Russians are gathering a force at Yentai, preparatory to making a strong stand for the protection of the coal mines.

Hun River Not Crossed.

St. Petersburg, Sept. 22.—The reports that Gen. Kuroki has crossed the Hun River at Fushun turns out to be false. The Russians strongly hold the road to Fushun and Bentsiaputse. It is pointed out that if the Japanese had occupied Fushun the Russians would have been compelled to evacuate Mukden, since Fushun is nearer to Tie Pass.

Russians Doubt It.

While the despatches to the War Office do not indicate that Field Marshal Oyama's main armies have yet resumed their forward movement, advance detachments of Japanese are feeling out the strength and disposition of the Russian forces and Japanese flanking columns are already pressing northward.

Mukden Battle News Premature.

The reports that a battle at Mukden is imminent are, however, regarded as premature. All that seems to be definitely established is that Oyama is again essaying to flank Gen. Kuropatkin from the east. His advance forces are seeking to obtain command of the roads leading twenty to thirty miles east of Mukden. Tuesday they attempted to seize Di Pass, on the road to Fushun, in order to turn the Russian left, but they were repulsed. In addition to the two Russian corps already mobilizing, seven other corps are to be called to the colors.

Favor Advanced Legislation.

Montreal, Que., Sept. 22.—The reception of reports occupied the time of the Manufacturers' Association yesterday. The decision to send a delegate to Great Britain next year, and the diplomatic move to meet representatives of the Labor Congress, now in session, met with approval. The Association also passed a resolution approving of the placing of express companies under the control of the Railway Commission.

Shot in a Restaurant.

Montreal, Sept. 22.—Belanger, a rag-picker, was shot in a Dominion street restaurant yesterday afternoon by Leon Lecallion, the proprietor. A quarrel over a lunch served to the rag-picker led to the shooting. Belanger was hit in the region of the heart, and may not recover. Lecallion was arrested.

Seven to One

That is about the ratio. About seven times as many persons are injured as die from all causes yearly.

Accidents are a more prolific cause of death than any disease except lung diseases.

Twice as many people are accidently killed as die of old age. Does it not seem reasonable to you as a business man that it would be to your interest to carry an accident policy?

YOU are subject to over two hundred diseases, and liable to accidents without number.

Official figures prove that One Man in Five carrying an Accident and Sickness Policy makes a claim for indemnity each year.

YOU have no guarantee that you will not be the One Man who will be disabled this year.

THE ROSS MACHINE

It is a great pity that the judges, through some defect in the law, or in the regulations of the court, or in their own mental equipment from their abstinence from party politics, take such a view of their duty, as to let the members of the machine go harmless. They seem to think that hardly anything short of a power of attorney will make (a corrupt election worker the agent of a candidate. Other people, not supposed to be more intelligent than the judges, are well aware that one object of the Ross machine is to relieve the candidate of the risk of agency. Mr. Aylesworth showed his knowledge in this regard in the confession he drew up for Mr. McNish to sign, after it had been submitted to Mr. Ross, declaring that the corruption in West Elgin had been practised by organized outsiders coming into the riding. The Reform Association of South Ontario, where Mr. Dryden gladly took the benefit of the machine work, spoke similarly. Over and over again the same band of criminals have made their appearance at different elections, and the judges could not be convinced that they were not travelling amateurs for whom nobody was responsible. In North Grey they seemed willing to accept Mr. Aylesworth's theory that Capt. Sullivan and his Buffalo band were conspirators working on behalf of the Conservatives.

The truth seems to be that these criminals are not agents appointed by the candidates, who steer clear of them as far as possible, but they are the agents of Mr. Ross and his colleagues, appointed, paid and rewarded by them for their work. The Ministers knew Preston very well and obtained him his reward, for hugging the machine, from their Ottawa allies. In the same way they secured his pay for Jackson, K.C., who said he did his South Oxford work in consultation with Mr. Ross. Capt. Sullivan is so well known to Mr. Davis that he remunerates him with a fat slice of the people's property. Frank Sullivan is on such terms with Mr. Stratton as to introduce to him a member of the Legislature. Mr. Stratton's own witnesses swore that Vance had access to him at all hours. Sutherland and Marshall are recognised by Ministers as being in charge of the campaign work. The Minister responsible for the corrupt management of a district and the machine man sent down to conduct operations confer and act together. In short, Ministers and machine men, to use an appropriate colloquialism, are thick as thieves.

A canvasser or a scrutineer can be held an agent, and unseat his candidate by giving a tip to an ostler or a drink to a friend. But the officers and members of this regular army of election criminals, cannot be held as agents of the candidate or involve him in the consequence of their crimes. They are only the agents of the Ministers, lent by them to candidates who will support the Administration if elected by such methods. And this seems to be the judicial idea of the election of a representative of the people.

Mr. A. W. Wright, in an open letter, refutes in strong, but justifiable language, the slanderous charges made against him by Mr. Aylesworth, and retorts upon that gentleman with some unpalatable but undeniable truths.

The Globe says that the Sullivans are unsavory workers for the Liberal party. The Sullivans say that the Globe made a slip, that it meant Sutherland, to whom that description better applies. Let us hear from the rest of the gang what they think of each other.

The independent Woodstock Express says:—

"The Globe wants the Liberal party in Ontario to cut loose from workers of "the unsavory Sullivan species." But if it had not been for the work of the "unsavory Sullivan species" where would the Liberal party in Ontario be?

The Montreal Star asks:—

But where are you going to place the gulf between the thieves and the gentlemen who employ them. Or profit by their thefts? In other words where are you going to draw the line between gentlemen of the "unsavory Sullivan type" and gentlemen of the odoriferous Gibson type?

The Montreal Gazette says:—

Ten men have been reported by the judges in the Sault Ste. Marie election case as being guilty of offences which are punishable under the Criminal Code. The treatment extended to them by the Ross Government will be interesting to note. The culprits will not be annoyed. Rottenness is not obnoxious to rottenness.

North Oxford Liberals say they ran their bye-election without the aid of the machine or of outsiders. Did they? A temperance man offered himself as a candidate as a protest against the dishonest treatment of their cause repeatedly practiced by Mr. Ross. Then Mr. Ross, the head of the machine, its patron and paymaster, intervened. He induced the temperance candidate to withdraw by promising if he did so to enact a stringent temperance measure that session. Having got the dangerous candidate out of the way, of course Mr. Ross broke his pledge as usual. It was very effective machine interference.

In an effort to defend the Ross usurpation the Toronto Star says:—

"If the methods by which a Government retains its majority are not correct, it is for the courts to establish it and the electors to condemn it."

It was to prevent the courts from establishing that his methods were not correct that Mr. Ross and his facile instrument, the Lieutenant-Governor, closed these courts last February. The courts, having been at least allowed to sit, have established the villainy of the methods of Mr. Ross and his agents. They have also shown that the electors were not allowed to pronounce their condemnation, the Ministerial agents with the aid of the Attorney-General having imported aliens to do the voting.

GUILTY IGNORANCE

An insight into the methods of the Provincial Government is afforded by the testimony of Hon. E. J. Davis in the North Grey election trial. It appears from his evidence that he is totally ignorant of the Central Liberal organization. He knows the organizers. When they are at work in his district he advises with them, expects them to carry out his suggestions, in fact treats them as experts engaged by the party for election purposes, but he does not know who employs them, whence they draw their pay, nor anything about their movements beyond what he may advise. In fact he sees the machinery moving, even gives directions to the engineers, but has not the first idea where it obtains its power. This highly organized force is kept in a state of efficiency, ready for any emergency, at the beck and call of Ministers who do not know whence it comes or whither it goes. A more extraordinary story of guilty ignorance was never told in a witness box in Canada. Mr. Davis could get some rather startling information from some of his colleagues. — Toronto News, Indep.

AN UNBROKEN CHAIN

The Election Crimes Brought Directly Home to the Ministers.

It must be ascertained who on this side of the border are the scoundrels responsible for the conspiracy of perjury in the North Grey case.—The Globe.

It would be well worth while to spend considerable time and enough money to win a bye-election to ascertain the real facts of the case, and bring the scoundrels to justice, whoever they may be. But it is exceedingly doubtful that much of an effort will be made. The party managers could probably not be dragged into a further investigation of the mess, and there is nobody else likely to attempt it. It would also be worth while to ascertain who on this side of the border are the scoundrels responsible for the Soo case; but we are not likely to have much further light on that subject either. And yet the trail should not be difficult to follow. George Sutherland was the local organizer; he was appointed by James Vance, who is the representative of the Liberal machine. According to the Toronto News, a good authority on such subjects, the machine is nothing less than an outside department of the Administration. From the plaggers of the Minnie M. to the Government there is an unbroken chain. It should not require the capacity for deduction of a Sherlock Holmes to make a tolerably fair guess at the real "scoundrels." We hope The Globe will insist on ascertaining who the scoundrels are who were responsible for the North Grey conspiracy. Having gone so far in the cause of righteousness, it cannot, for shame's sake, let up till it exposes the scoundrels responsible for the Soo conspiracy, too.—Woodstock Express, Indep.

TWO MEN DROWNED.

Upsetting of a Sailboat in Moffatt Straits, Near Port Arthur.

Port Arthur, Sept. 22.—In Moffatt Straits, about noon Tuesday a sailboat with three fishermen, Harry Shelly, Thomas Williams and Robert Smith, was suddenly capsized by the wind. Smith was lost sight of on the spot, the boat turned on end, and Williams and Shelly hung on to the mainmast. About two hours later Williams gave up, and was also drowned, Shelly securing his body to the mast. About 4 p.m. James Gerson, who was on his way to Rossport with a tug, picked up Shelly, who was still hanging to the boat, and Williams' body. Williams was single, and had been in this vicinity for a number of years. Smith leaves a wife and three children in Port Arthur.

Peterboro Man Killed.

Buffalo, Sept. 22.—A man supposed to be Gordon McEwan was found seriously injured in the Grand Trunk yards here last night. It is supposed he was struck by a New York Central train. At the hospital it was found necessary to amputate the man's right arm. The surgeons say his skull is fractured. Papers found on him indicate he is a telegraph operator in the employ of the G.T.R. at Peterboro, Ont.

Died in Dentist's Chair.

Ottawa, Sept. 22.—Miss Lottie Borthwick, aged 18, daughter of Thos. Borthwick, Gloucester township, a niece of ex-Mayor Borthwick, of Ottawa, died yesterday afternoon while under the influence of an anaesthetic in Graham & Beatty's dental parlors, Wellington street. She asked for an anaesthetic, and nitrous-oxide, commonly known as laughing-gas, was administered. Dr. Baptie, coroner, who was present for an hour, trying to restore respiration, returned a report to the Crown Attorney that death resulted from an anaesthetic accident, with no one to blame.

Three Injured While Blasting.

Collingwood, Sept. 22.—Three men—Reuben Ayers, John Bell and John McFarlane—were injured while blasting out a drain at the Imperial Steel and Wire Co.'s works Tuesday night. The accident was caused by a slow fuse, which the men took for a misfire. Their injuries are not of a serious character, consisting chiefly of cuts about the face and head.

Escapes Death at Crossing.

Toronto, Sept. 22.—Local C.P.R. officials were advised last night of a level crossing accident a short distance west of Ayr Station. Thomas Henderson, 20 years of age, a farmer, was struck by an eastbound freight train while attempting to drive across. His collar bone was broken, and he was considerably bruised about the head. Of the team of horses he was driving one was instantly killed, while the other was badly hurt.

Two Firemen Hurt.

St. Thomas, Sept. 21.—Morley Jones, Wabash engineer, who resides at No. 74 Bellaclava street, and his fireman, Fred Oliver, who lives at No. 126 Alma street, were injured at Canfield Junction on the Wabash yesterday morning. Their engine was running light and they did not notice another engine ahead of them until it was too late to avoid an accident. They then jumped and the engine was derailed.

Woman Severely Burned.

St. Thomas, Sept. 22.—Mrs. Wm. Brommell was severely burned by the explosion of gasoline Tuesday night.

HOLY WAR PROBABLE.

Buddhist Pilgrimage to Mecca in February Causes Comment.

St. Petersburg, Sept. 22.—It is rather significant that, with the success of the British expedition to Thibet and the protest of Russia against the British-Thibetan Treaty, some of the Russian papers have suddenly become greatly disturbed over the importance of the Buddhist pilgrimage to Mouran in February. According to information which has been drifting eastward from the depths of Mongolia, the agitation for a holy war, noted at the time of the pilgrimage to Ourge, in July last, continues. Wandering Lamas are spreading the agitation. According to reports at Ourge, there is a general agitation among the Buddhists in favor of freeing themselves from the dominion of China, some of them favoring the removal of the Dalai Lama to Northern Mongolia and entering on a holy war for the establishment of a Buddhist kingdom, while others advocate appealing for the protection of Russia.

Parker For Africa.

London, Sept. 22.—(C. A. P.)—Sir Gilbert Parker, who has been spending a few days with Mr. Chamberlain, visited Gravesend yesterday prior to his leaving on a four months' tour in South Africa. He proposes to submit a land settlement scheme to the Governments of the Transvaal and Orange River colonies on a principle already approved by them and the home Government.

London, Sept. 22.—(C.A.P.)—The London Tatler contains an illustration of King Edward and Sir Gilbert Parker talking together at Marienbad.

THREE CHARGES PROVEN

Bribery in North York During the Last Election There.

Four Men Reported, But Judges Do Not Consider That Their Agency Was Established—Argument on Charge That Hon. Mr. Davis Engaged W. J. Robinson, a Reported Corrupt Practitioner, As His Agent in Sutton, Not Concluded.

Newmarket, Sept. 22.—The second day of the North York election trial was prolific of some result, the petitioner succeeding in proving that bribery was resorted to in three different cases on behalf of Hon. E. J. Davis, but the court ruled that agency had not been established; hence the Minister is not held responsible for the corrupt acts.

Four Men Reported.

Chancellor Boyd and Mr. Justice Teetzel agreed that these charges had been fully established:

That Elias Pegg paid his son-in-law, William Rolling, $5 by dropping it in his buggy and calling attention to the fact.

That Pegg paid Harry Hodge $6 by dropping it in the stable and telling Hodge "you'll find the money for yourself."

That Pegg paid Henry Stickwood $2. He handed him the money. Stickwood objecting to the roundabout methods suggested.

It was shown that James Mason got $2 from Pegg, but nothing was said about the election, and the charge was dismissed.

Pegg, Rolling, Hodge and Stickwood were reported for corrupt acts.

The Robinson Charges.

The second charge was much more serious. Mr. Blackstock forged a chain of circumstances to show that one W. J. Robinson, who was reported by the judges as being guilty of a corrupt act in North Grey, which act resulted in the voiding of the election, was brought into North York, and that he acted as agent for Mr. Davis at Sutton; that he attended committee meetings and generally assisted in the work of the campaign, and that he was seen in the presence of Mr. Davis and a man named McArdle. The act of personally engaging Robinson is sufficient to unseat Mr. Davis. Here is the section of the act respecting the election of members of the Legislative Assembly, which covers the case:

The Law in the Case.

"If, on the trial of an election petition, any candidate is proved to have personally engaged at the election to which the petition relates, as canvasser or agent in relation to the election, any person, knowing that such person has within eight years previous to such engagement been found guilty of any corrupt practice, by a competent legal tribunal or by the report of the judges upon an election petition, the election of such candidate shall be void."

How Davis Shields Himself.

Hon. Mr. Davis shields himself behind his general ignorance of what was going on in North York during the bye-election campaign. He says he did not know Robinson, and that the man was engaged without his personal knowledge. It was established that Mr. Davis signed the certificate appointing the man his agent at Sutton. And it was conclusively proved that Hon. Mr. Davis was told by Candidate Lennox that such a man was at work in the riding. A series of point meetings was held, and at one or two of these meetings Mr. Lennox informed Mr. Davis that Robinson, the man reported for corrupt practices in North Grey, was at work in North York in the interests of the Liberal party. That Mr. Davis heard what is said was indicated by his reply to the speech of his opponent. In that reply, Mr. Davis sought to modify the character of the offence committed by his worker.

Mr. Blackstock's Argument.

Mr. Blackstock presented this case in a lucid and able manner, quoting several precedents to show that candidates have been held to have personally engaged workers, even when the actual engagement was not made by the candidate in person. If the personal liability was not conceded by the court in this case, he pointed out, it would be practically impossible to hold a candidate responsible for the corrupt act of any worker.

Mr. Aylesworth has still to put his construction on the meaning of the law that applies to this case. The decision of the court is expected before noon to-day.

CATCH OF COD A FAILURE.

Gale Sweeps Newfoundland, Causing Loss of Life and Much Damage.

St. John's, Nfld., Sept. 22.—A fierce gale swept this region yesterday. The schooner Amy Louise, 114 tons, of St. John's; schooner Bobs, 97 tons, of Parrsboro, N.S., and the schooner Elinor, 86 tons, of Plymouth, have been driven ashore. The schooner Ripple, 70 tons, of Quebec, has been lost, with five men. The Labrador mail steamer is delayed. It is feared that last week's gale has devastated the Labrador seaboard. Reports from St. Pierre show that gales have severely damaged the French fishing fleet. The catch of cod is the poorest in ten years.

FOR UNITY AND HARMONY

LABOR'S PLEA MADE TO THE MANUFACTURERS' ASSOCIATION.

Conference Sought so that Matters Might be Considered and a Remedy Suggested.

To the Manufacturers' Association, Montreal:

Gentlemen,—As we have learned by the public press that you are about to hold your annual meeting, we take the liberty of thus addressing you, that we may bring before you some matters of utmost importance to our common welfare.

We must all feel that it is a matter much to be deplored that between the employers and the employee in this country, there is not that unity and harmony which we believe should prevail in the ideal society. Do not the severance and continued conflict between employers and employees indicate that somewhere in our mechanism, there is a want of proper adjustment? Is it not, therefore, our duty instead of entering or engaging in struggles, which must be injurious to both parties, to seek earnestly for the cause of this antagonism, in order that appropriate remedies may be applied for its rectification?

We ask you to look at the condition of the laboring classes, the people who have to work, often at heavy toil, eight, nine, ten or more hours daily, year after year. Is it not unquestionably true that these parties are the principal factor of maintaining the abundance of wealth in the world? Without their active agency, where would the prosperity of the nation be? Whether right or wrong, the laboring men believe that it is due very largely to their industry that the nations enjoy their great prosperity. And at the same time they hold with equal firmness the belief, that out of that prosperity they do not receive anything like their proper share. Where they produce a thousand dollars worth of goods, it is their belief that they receive only a few hundred dollars worth, possibly not one-half of their just due.

In confirmation of this belief we ask your attention to the following fact: For hundreds of years workmen have built the homes, the factories and the warehouses of the towns and cities. How many of these structures have they been able to claim as their own? In the early settlement of this country nearly every settler owned his own home; but as the cities have increased in magnitude, it has been increasingly more difficult for the laborer to do this, and in the largest cities he never dreams of such a possession.

The cause of this condition is not difficult to find. It has been shown in the statistics of several cities that the value of the land equals, and in some cases exceeds, the value of all the buildings that labor has place on the land. The law at present allows individuals to appropriate this value as their own. Consequently, it matters not how much labor builds up the city, the land owners can appropriate as their own all these buildings as quickly as they are constructed. In confirmation of this power we call attention to the conditions of many leases, which demand that the builder shall pay a ground rent for some years, after which the buildings shall become the property of the land owner.

When crops are raised or goods manufactured or houses built, who should have the right to the ownership of these commodities? Should they belong to the producers or should some man who never did the first thing towards their production, be able to say: Population has crowded on to this land, therefore these products belong to me? The law at present allows this; but how can the law be just which allows the man who raises no crop to claim the crop as his? In this city the claim of the landowner has risen to the enormous height of a hundred thousand dollars yearly for the occupation of a single acre.

Now, here are two distinct classes. On the one hand are the workers, devoting their energies and their lives to the maintenance of the industries and the production of the wealth of the country. And yet we have noticed again and again that you object to the small share which we receive out of the product of our industry, even though it may be not one-half of what is our just due. On the other hand, as the city grows the landowner claims a larger and larger share of the product. While industry is doing its utmost to build up the business, the landowner is subjecting it to a greater and greater obligation, thus tending to drive it to bankruptcy. And yet we cannot recall a single instance in in which you have uttered the shadow of a whisper against the unjust exaction. Is it not true that in your opposition to recognized industry, you are trying to crush those who are your greatest assistants, while not a word of protest passes your lips against those who are trying to crush both us and yourselves. Our claim for more more pay is honest; but in what way can man justly claim a large share of the product, when he has contributed in no way to its production.

Must there not be something essentially wrong in an economic system, which compels one set of men to do all the work and then receive but a scant share of the product, while to another set of men who do nothing to support the industry there comes a fortune yearly? Have we not followed blindly the methods of the old world, where for centuries those who produced the wealth, were crushed into poverty; while others who toiled not, neither did they spin, revelled often in the wildest luxury?

Have you not for years fought for a system of taxation, which must fall in a hundred insiduous ways, on the laborers, so as to diminish the purchasing power of their pay; but which at the same time enables land owners in our large centres to claim larger and larger fortunes, as the taxation has necessarily increased. How can that method of taxation be just, which brings increased burden to one part of society and increased fortune to the other?

How can this system of taxation be called a protection to industry, when we see industry placed under a greater and greater obligation to furnish fortunes to maintain an idle aristocracy?

So long as this injustice continues, what hope is there for industrial peace? Can it be expected that men with any proper conception of their rights will submit in servile silence to this system of spoilation and oppressions, fortunes to idleness and poverty to industry?

Furthermore, is it not eminently unjust that the toiling masses should be taxed millions of dollars to support an immigration policy which must submit the wage earners to the most intense competition, while with every addition thus made to the population of the country, the landowner can increase his exaction against industry in every form?

We trust, gentlemen, that you will see your way to enquire with us into the correctness of the conclusions to which we have called your attention, and it would give us much pleasure to meet representatives from your body at any time, that we may reason together as to these important considerations whereby we may some day evolve some method by which the contests, so unfortunate and so harrassing to both parties, may forever cease.

NORTH MONAGHAN COUNCIL

Business Transacted at the Regular Meeting of the Township Council.

The council of the Township of North Monaghan met in the town hall on Monday, Sept. 19th, 1904, at the hour of 7.30 p.m. All the members were present. The minutes of the preceding meeting were read and confirmed.

Accounts were read as follows: D. V. Traw, cleaning ditch at Springville, $1.60; John Wilson, cleaning ditch at Springville, $1.80; P. Hamilton Co., sundry repairs to grader, $1.85. The accounts were passed and ordered to be paid.

Mr. R. M. Dranistown of Peterborough appeared before the council representing the Peterborough Radial Railway Co. and asked the council to finally pass a by-law authorizing the Reeve and Clerk to execute a franchise agreement between the township and the company permitting the Company to construct and operate a street railway on the boundary road from Charlotte st. corner north to Jackson Park, the rails to be laid upon the west side of the road. The Clerk reported that the passing of this by-law had been advertised and posted up according to law.

Mr. G. W. Hatton appeared representing himself and Mr. R. A. Morrow, interested ratepayers of the township, who objected to the street railway track being laid on the west side of the road, as this would prejudicially affect their property. It was finally agreed that the company lay their rails upon the centre of the highway and construct a roadway suitable for public traffic upon both sides of the railway track.

The by-law No. 542, was then given the necessary readings and finally passed and the Reeve and Clerk signed the franchise agreement.

By-law No. 537 was then passed appointing a collector of rates for 1904. Mr. John Barnard was re-appointed on similar conditions as in the year 1903.

The matter of repairing culverts in various parts of the township was referred to committees and council adjourned until the next regular meeting in October at 7.30 p.m. in the town hall.

Last evening a meeting was held in the opera house, at which the following were present: Sir William Mulock, C. A. McCool, Mr. Lemieux, Solicitor-General; Dr. James, M.P.P.; A. McCool, and the Liberal Government.

There was a large attendance. About twenty nominees were placed before the convention, but all retired in favor of John Cowan, K.C., of Sarnia, who was made the unanimous choice of the convention. R. Holmes, M.P., for West Huron, delivered an address on the issues of the day, dealing largely with Mr. Borden's policy on the Grand Trunk Pacific.

How to Keep Well

The best efforts of the great physicians are now expending in finding how to keep people well and prevent serious disease. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food was prepared with this object in view. It is not only a cure for diseases of the nerves, but also a restorative to be used when vitality runs low and the weakened condition of the system invites attack by fevers or contagious diseases.

Mr. Borden at Stratford.

Stratford, Sept. 22.—Mr. R. L. Borden was accorded a magnificent reception here last evening by the Conservatives of North Perth. Nearly 2,000 people from this city and surrounding districts assembled at the opera house and the words of Mr. Borden upon the questions of the day were listened to with an enthusiastic interest that found expressions of applause. Mr. Borden's confidence in the outcome of the coming general election as being favorable to the Conservative party was seconded by that of A. F. MacLaren, M.P., as to the result of the fight in North Perth. Mr. Borden undoubtedly made a strong impression.

Engineer on C.P.R. Sentenced.

Winnipeg, Sept. 22.—Engineer Crowell, an engineer running on the Regina division of the C.P.R., was sentenced yesterday morning at Regina to two years in the penitentiary for being intoxicated while on his engine. HOCKEY.

Eddie Geroux, the star goalkeeper of the Marlboro hockey club, last season's senior champions of the O.H.A., has taken up his residence in Rat Portage, where he will play hockey this coming winter. He is living with his old chum, Tom Phillips, the star forward of last season's hockey team. Rat Portage expects to have a strong team next season. Several Ottawa players are expected. We wonder whether Eddie has forgotten the busy time he had down here, when 20 goals were scored on him in an hour.

Brantford is going to built a new rink and get together a team which it is hoped, will be able to capture the Stanley Cup next winter. But they must win the O.H.A. championship first, and Belleville knows something about the difficulty of winning an O.H.A. championship, with a lop-sided and autocratic executive to go up against. Brantford may go through the early part of the season all right, but if their bump doesn't arrive somewhere about St. Valentine's day put us down for another guess.—Belleville Intelligencer.

Gothead with your rink, Brantford. As long as you play clean hockey and run your team on an amateur basis, you need not fear the O.H.A. executive. It's only ringer teams like Belleville that are in awe of them.

Eddie Howell, one of the stars of the local team last year, will play at the Michigan Soo, and a dispatch from that place has the following to say about him: William "Pud" Hamilton, formerly of Kingston, Ont. and Pittsburg, will play point, and in front of him, at cover point will be Ed Howell. Howell played with Peterborough, Ont., last year, and the season before was with Paris, when that team won the intermediate O. H.A. championship. He was one of the original members of the Portage Lake team and is regarded as an exceptionally good defence man. Howell has already taken up his residence in the Michigan "Soo."

RUGBY.

There is a strong chance that the Victorias of Toronto, last year's intermediate champions, will drop out of the senior series of the O.R.F.U. They want to be drawn in the same series as Torontos. In addition the manager of the team points out that two of the Vics' home games are upon the same day as Varsity and Argonauts home games are, and he wants to know what chance a struggling team will have to draw against such a strong counter attraction. A meeting of the club will be held tonight to discuss the situation. If the Vics drop out the remaining five teams will be drawn in one district, which will increase the expense of playing in the senior series.

OUR ATTORNEY GENERAL

Can Such a Man be a Constitutional Adviser.

We have in Ontario an Attorney-General, who is in charge of the administration of justice. He is the chief official in the administration of the law and in its enforcement. (To enable him to exercise these important functions, he has a deputy, who gives most of his time to the enforcement of the law. His authority is further aided by a corps of detectives.

In setting in motion the machinery of justice, the attorney-general has a free hand. He can incur any expense in promoting public morals and in putting down crime of all kinds.

Crimes against the sanctity of the ballot are the worst of all crimes, and the law makes full provision for the punishment of the perpetrators. Yet the attorney-general of Ontario so amply vested with power and so amply supplied with money, refuses point blank to prevent or try to prevent the depredations of a gang of pluggers and personators, of whose plan he was fully aware. When Mr. Gibson's attention was called to the purpose of the Minnie M. he replied, in effect, that he was not a policeman.

Within the last week it has been shown that the crime of which the attorney-general was given full notice was actually committed. Mr. Gibson had at his disposal an efficient force of detectives. A telegraph message of ten words could have placed these detectives, or as many of them as were required, in the constituency of Sault Ste. Marie to head off the Minnie M. and similar electoral outrages. Mr. Gibson chooses to sneer at the men who laid the charges. Either he was anxious that the crooked work should be carried through, or he had a strangely low estimate of the seriousness of plugging and personating. Is Lieutenant-Governor Clarke willing to take advice from an attorney-general of this kind?—Toronto World.

REV. DR. CODY POINTED TO SOME HIGH IDEALS

His Very Able Address at St. Luke's Harvest Thanksgiving Service--What People Should be Grateful for--What They Are to Guard Against--Political Corruption and Democracy.

The annual Harvest Thanksgiving held last night in St. Luke's church was a service most inspiring and in every way bright and enjoyable. The church was very prettily and appropriately decorated with fruit, grain, products of the garden, and a profusion of flowers, asters being in predominance. All of these were very artistically grouped throughout the interior of the church, the top of the pulpit being outlined with beautiful flowers, and the altar also looking beautiful with exquisite floral adornment. It was a service that strongly suggested the time of the year, when of all seasons, the heart of man should be especially thankful. This fact was emphasized by Rev. Dr. Cody, of St. Paul's, Toronto, who pointed to the duties of thanksgiving and to the responsibilities of the people of Canada in possessing a glorious heritage. In the course of his able address he referred to the evil of political corruption, and emphasized the necessity that men should regard the ballot as a God-given trust. It is not often that the opportunity is here given to listen to so vigorous a speaker, so convincing and brilliant an exponent, as Dr. Cody, and his address last evening was of the kind that moves men. Rev. J. C. Davidson and Rev. Wm. Major assisted the rector, Rev. E. A. Langfeldt during the service.

Rev. Dr. Cody's text was Deuteronomy, 8: 10, "When thou hast eaten and art full, then thou shalt bless the Lord, thy God, for the good land which he hath given thee." He pointed to the constant danger of forgetting the common, simple elements in life and religion. Some truths were so extremely true that they lay neglected in the lumber room of memory, side by side with exploded error, and some duties were so obligatory that it was often considered a superfluity to reform them. One truth he emphasized was that of absolute dependence upon God for all that we have or hope to be, both temporally and spiritually, and one of the duties was that of constant thanksgiving to Him Who was the Author of all good. It was important in order to discharge such great duty, that there should be special seasons and times set apart for it. A grateful man had ever with him a song of thanksgiving, but further provision, apart from this, should be made for expression of man's gratitude to God. The speaker said that the interior of the church, adorned with symbols of the harvest, bore testimony to thanksgiving. At His throne of grace, man would be reminded of his indebtedness to him, and would be inspired to his highest idea of Christianity—himself a living sacrifice, body, soul and spirit, through the eternal merit of the Redeemer.

Certain elements that made any service of thanksgiving a possibility were considered as follows: 1, Acknowledgement and confession of belief in a personal God. 2, Belief in the doctrine of the reality of the Divine presence—amid all changes and chances in life there was being wrought out a great divine plan. 3 Our belief not only in a personal God but in One from whom comes every possible form of goodness.

At this time of year most fitting was it that God should receive thanks for the immediate blessings of the harvest and all things temporal and spiritual lavished upon the people of this Dominion. Reference was made to some of the great benefits for which thanks should be rendered.

GREAT BENEFITS.

The highest of these was considered to be our common Christianity, the consummation of which was thankfulness to God for redemption through Jesus Christ. The value of this great boon was seen in the contrast between Christian civilization, however blotted it might be, and the highest form of heathen civilization. Another benefit was that of religious freedom—common as the air and a heritage to be guarded by perpetual vigilance, the price of safety. It was bought with blood and tears and sacrifice, said the speaker, and it is for us to watch lest that boon should be impaired, as it always will when any group of religious people will bind themselves to take governments by the throat and wrest concessions which the highest good does not require and which the good of that sect seems to demand. The blessing of the harvest and of commercial development also called for thanksgiving. Agriculture lay at the base of the prosperity of every community, and God had richly endowed this country. Here wheat was king, and the revolving of seed time and harvest would show the absolute dependence upon the gifts of God. The country had known no blight nor famine and this year the value of the production in the great West would probably equal if not indeed surpass in some portions. An instance of Canada's prosperity was given by the speaker, who pointed out that in 1868 the total trade returns amounted to 131 millions; in 1896 they were 220 millions and in 1903 400 millions. The statement was made a few days ago that capital invested by manufacturers amounted to 520 millions. On every side, no matter what Government was in power, there were seen the signs of prosperity. There should exist a confidence in the country and in its future, and a splendid optimism of what she may be and what she can be.

The boon of peace was one of the richest blessings enjoyed by this land, and the prayer of the speaker was that the land would long remain undyed by the blood of her sons, her neighbors or any other foreign powers. Anything almost, save those things that were beyond human life in value, was to be sacrificed rather than have hideous war play havoc with the homes and all else that constituted a contented and happy nation.

TRUE PATRIOTISM.

"What about this land itself?" asked Rev. Dr. Cody. We Canadians have been slow in realising the heritage God has given us. We have been full of faith in regard to the wrong things—in what political parties have been able to do for us—and doubtful of the possibilities of our glorious country. We are becoming awakened to the fact that our country is all right—no matter what political party is in power. He held that the party should belong to the people instead of it preying upon the people. The worst kind of a patriot was he who would subject the interests of his country to the exigencies of any party under the sun. God knows, said he, we have too many men in our land, in other lands, who live on the country instead of for it, and die for it if need be. God was surely teaching a thrilling, vibrant sense of patriotism through the Japanese. The speaker emphasized the need that there should be a cultivation of that legitimate pride in ourselves and in the country God had so richly blessed. There was here a vast field to be worked for God—for civilization, evangelization and Christianization. No other nation could do it, because no other had been dowered with the particular gifts which God had given us. Canada's people were not cribbed, cabined or confined, but there was room here for broad sentiment and lofty ideals.

WHO IS GORDON M'EWAN?

Said to Have Been a G.T.R. Operator Here at One Time.

The following despatch from Buffalo relates to the death of a man named Gordon McEwan, who it is claimed, was a G.T.R. operator here, although enquiry fails to establish his identity:

Buffalo, Sept. 21—A man supposed to be Gordon MowEan was found seriously injured in the Grand Trunk yards here tonight. It is supposed he was struck by a New York Central train. At the hospital it was found necessary to amputate the man's right arm. The surgeons say his skull is fractured. Papers found on him indicate he is a telegraph operator in the employ of the G.T.R. at Peterborough, Ont.

RESORT AT CLEAR LAKE

REPORT IS THAT STREET RAILWAY PEOPLE HAVE MADE PURCHASE.

Proposal Apparently is to Build a Summer Resort — Local Authorities Know Nothing About any Negotiations.

A rumor current on the street today is to the effect that representatives of the Peterborough Street Railway have purchased about fifteen acres of land situated on Clear Lake, for summer resort purposes. The report is given some credence by the statements of people who are in touch with affairs at Young's Point and vicinity. When interviewed with regard to the subject, people who would be supposed to know definitely if such a deal had been put through, state that they had heard nothing about it, but that negotiations looking to the purchase would be carried on from Chicago.

Mr. Larmouth, Managing Director of the Street Railway Company, stated that no action was being taken at present in connection with an extension to Lakefield or Young's Point, until the local system had been thoroughly completed. It was, however, the intention of the Company to make such extensions.

Should there be any truth in the report which is being circulated about the streets, the indications are that the value of the lakes more adjacent to Peterborough as places of outing in summer may soon be practically recognized, and that in a way which will increase their popularity to an immense degree. Even with existing facilities every summer sees a much larger number of visitors, and it can easily be seen what an impetus would be given by the operation of electric cars to and from the Lakes, and the opening of a modern summer resort on the shores of some one of the charming bodies of water.

CALVIN STARKEY'S TROUBLE

Gets a Month in Port Hope for Being Peculiar.

Calvin Starkey, the weeping Wandering Willie who worked himself by his tears out of the police station the other day, came to grief in Port Hope. The Guide of yesterday says:

"Chief Bond last night about 11.30 ran across a lanky goat near the Midland platform. He was acting in a rather strange manner, and the Chief thought it better to look him up. He had on his person a flask of whisky, a lantern, a new mouth organ, a jack knife wrapped in tissue paper and a bottle of medicine. He said that he had come from Millbrook on his way to Toronto. At the sight of the cell he shed crocodile tears and pleaded that he had never done anything wrong in his life. He gave his name as Calvin Starkey, 47 years of age, was born in Vermont and is a Presbyterian. It appears that he was arrested in Peterborough yesterday but was allowed to go shortly after his arrest. He was brought up for trial this morning and it was quite evident that he had been indulging too freely in the intoxicating fluid. He was sentenced to one month in gaol, just to kind of straighten him up."

GEORGE COWLING'S SUDDEN CALL

FELL FROM A BUILDING THIS MORNING AND DEATH RESULTED.

Was at Work on Meldrum Building and met With an Accident but Returned to Work — Was Taken Ill Soon After and Expired in Nicholls Hospital.

This morning a very serious accident occurred at the new mill of the Meldrum Milling Co. Mr. George Cowling, one of the men engaged on the building, and in the employ of Mr. Thomas Rutherford, contractor, in some manner fell off the building, a distance of about ten feet, to the ground. He did not appear to be seriously injured and soon returned to his work. A little while afterward he began to feel ill and decided to go and see Dr. Greer. He had proceeded on his wheel as far as the bridge which spans the creek on Simcoe-st., when suddenly he fell insensible to the ground. Then a very unfortunate incident occurred. The local police seeing the man lying senseless on the ground, thought that he was the worse of liquor and took him to the station, where he remained twenty minutes before the mistake was discovered. He was at once taken to the Nicholls Hospital, as it was feared that he had sustained internal injuries. Medical aid was at once summoned. Dr. Greer, who happened to be at the hospital, was called to attend, but though everything possible was done, Cowling expired shortly after arriving at the hospital. Death was due to compression of the brain, a result undoubtedly of the fall sustained at the building.

The late George Cowling was a young man about thirty-five years of age, and had lived in Peterborough about five years. He was esteemed by all who knew him, and held office in the local lodge of the Independent Order of Oddfellows. On the construction of the Meldrum mill on Simcoe-st. he was a foreman of carpenter work. His very sudden death will cast a gloom over that part of the community in which he was acquainted, and from whom sympathy will go out to Mrs. Cowling in her bereavement.

VISIT FROM ENGLISH ENGINEERS

Not Improbable that Peterborough Will be Included in their Tour.

Mr. Walter J. Francis, C.E., has returned from New York, where he attended the reception given by the American Society of Civil Engineers to the members of the English Society who are on their way to St. Louis.

Some time ago it was stated that these gentlemen from England intended making a trip throughout the United States and Canada, and the probability was that they would visit Peterborough. Of course the great point of interest to these gentlemen would be the hydraulic lift lock. There are about two hundred engineers in the party, many of them of considerable repute, and Peterborough would consider such a visit a great favor. Mr. Francis had nothing definite to give out with regard to their plans, but would not say that a trip hither was proposed.

RECORD OF JOE MURPHY

THE MAN WHO OWES HIS ARREST TO WHISKEY.

His Name is Thompson and he is Wanted in Toronto but Probably has Been Carrying on Big Operations in the East.

Wednesday's Toronto News has the following in reference to the capture made by the police here:—

In the person of "Joseph Murphy" the Peterborough police have captured Joseph Thompson, one of the most expert handlers of dynamite and nitro-glycerine for safe-blowing purposes in the country. Thompson was found drunk in a Peterborough residence on Monday. He evidently had intended to despoil the premises, but his visit to the wine cellar turned his thoughts in another direction, and he quickly rendered himself incapable of carrying out his project. The Peterborough police found a loaded revolver, dynamite cartridges, glycerine and other tools of the profession in his pockets. He gave his name as Joseph Murphy, but the description forwarded to Inspector Stark disclosed immediately his real identity.

A BAD RECORD.

Thompson lived at one time in Toronto, and he has on two occasions been sent to the Central Prison for eighteen month terms for burglary. Inspector Stark pronounces him one of the most expert safe-crackers and sneak thieves on the continent. He was partner of Edward Kimball, who was convicted about the time of the Vareco murder in 1900, for having in his possession various chemicals for purposes of burglary and safe-blowing. Some years ago Thompson was engaged with the famous desperado, Joseph Fitzstephen, in sundry crimes near the Ottawa River. Thompson turned Queen's evidence and was released; Fitzstephen was sent to the Kingston Penitentiary for a long term. It turned out to be a life-sentence, for he fell off a scaffold one day in the penitentiary grounds and broke his neck.

Inspector Stark also asserts that Thompson was an accomplice and advisor of the Quackenbush gang.

WANTED IN TORONTO.

Thompson is wanted in Toronto on a minor charge of street theft, but the authorities of eastern Ontario towns have probably a greater claim on him than this city, for he has avoided big operations here for many years. Several police chiefs of smaller towns in the east have charges to lay at his door. It is probable that he will be sent to the penitentiary before he can be delivered into the hands of the Toronto police.

The following letter has been received from the Chief of Police, Toronto:—

Chief of Police,
Peterborough.

Dear Sir,—In reply to your letter of the 20th inst., I beg to inform you that we identify Murphy as Joseph Thompson; safe-blower and all-round criminal, with a record of two eighteen months terms in the Central Prison for burglary. He is reputed to be an expert in the use of dynamite and nitro-glycerine, and has been associated with most of our prominent criminals of the past ten years, notably Edward Kimball, who got a long term for having a very large quantity of dynamite in his possession at the time of the Vareco murder, and whose resort on Victoria-st. was the resort of all the tramp thieves of that day. He was associated with Joseph Fitzstephen in the commission of a series of burglaries in Quebec Province, against whom he turned Queen's evidence, resulting in the former getting a long term in the penitentiary. The Quackenbush gang, with Chas. Burk, now serving a three years' term for attempting to release Chas. Quackenbush from the Central Prison, were associated with him in the Cooper robbery some years ago, for which they were not convicted, however, owing to Mr. Cooper's inability to identify them; Thompson, we understand, originally came from Montreal, and may possibly have a record there. He is a reckless criminal of the Frank Rutledge type, whom you will require to watch closely. He is wanted here for theft.

Your obedient servant,
H. J. GRASSETT.
Chief Constable.

Thompson was identified by the very excellent photographs taken of him by Mr. R. M. Roy. His description is as follows:—Age 28, height 5 feet 7, weight 154 lbs., dressed in navy blue suit, black Christy, black shirt with collar attached, and black tie.

He will probably come up for trial on Monday or Tuesday of next week.

USE OF ELECTRIC WELDING

Becoming a More Important Factor in Many Industries.

The electric welding is becoming a more and more important factor in many industries. During recent years the extension of its application has witnessed its entrance into new fields. Sometimes, indeed, new manufactures, or new ways of obtaining results, have been based upon its use. The electric welds under consideration are the results of that operation of uniting two pieces of metal by what is known as the Thompson process, first brought out by the writer and rendered available in commercial practice a considerable number of years ago. The rapidity, flexibility, cleanliness, neatness, accuracy and economy of the electric process has won for it such an important standing in the arts that many future extensions in its application are assured.

The uniformity of the work, the control of the operation, the extreme localization of the heat to the particular parts to be united, and the fact that the process is not limited to iron and steel, but can deal equally well with other metals, such as copper, brass, bronzes, and even lead, are characteristics of the electric welding operation.

In the wagon and carriage industry the process is applied in the production of tires of all sections, axles, hub, spoke and sand bands, fifth wheels, shifting rails, steps, shaft iron, etc., while it has found a large use in the welding into continuous strips or bands of the wires inclosed in rubber tires for holding them in place. The larger part of the dash-frames used in carriages in the United States are now probably made by electric welding, while iron and steel agricultural wheels are built up, or have their parts united, by electric welds.

To enumerate the many applications to the bicycle industry would be almost to catalogue most of the metal parts of this useful machine. It must be borne in mind, too, that a welding machine, slightly modified, is equally applicable for locally heating parts in electric brazing or hard soldering for upsetting and for bending or shaping.

In the wire industry the part played by electric welding is already quite important, and becomes steadily more important, and becomes steadily more important, as the simple joining of wires of iron or steel, or copper into long lengths, the welding of wire or strip into hoops for barrels, cubs, pails, etc., is supplanting the older forms. Numerous machines are in operation turning out electric-all-welded wire fence, much as a loom turns out cloth.—Elihu Thomson, in Cassier's Magazine.

Over the Border

By ... ROBERT BARR,

Author of "Jennie Baxter, Journalist," Etc.

Copyright, 1903, by Frederick A. Stokes Co.

"I'll look after my own beast, Traquair."

"No need for that, Will. We have matters of importance to discuss, and Angus here will feed the horse as well as you can do it."

"I'll eat and drink whatever's set before me and never ask who is the cook, but I trust no man to wait on my horse. You bide by your sentry march, Angus, and I'll see to the beast."

With this Armstrong strode out of the house, the ill used sentinel following him. As the door closed the interrupted hum of conversation rose again. Who the interloper might be was the burden of the inquiry.

"Armstrong's the very man for our purpose," said Traquair. "If any one can get through Old Neil's armies by craft or by force it is Will. I had no idea he was near by or I would never have wasted thought on any other. I have known him for years, and there's none to match him, hielan' or lowlan'. We need seek nae farrar if Christie's Will is wullin'. I wish unanimous consent to tender our present dangerous mission to William Armstrong in the hope that he may get safely to Oxford and, what is more important, bring us with equal safety the king's written command. If any of you have some one else to propose whom you think may accomplish his business better than Will Armstrong, I ask you to nominate the man and give reasons for your preference."

Each man looked at the others as if waiting for some one else to make further suggestion, but as the silence was prolonged the earl was about to address the company when the door opened and Armstrong himself entered.

CHAPTER X.

"WULL," cried Traquair. "We have been talking of you, my man, and we have some employment for you if you are ready for it."

"Well, my lord, there's no lack of that in these kittle times, for a fighting man gets civility and a welcome, whether in England or Scotland, whichever side he takes."

"I hope you are for law and the king against riot and rebels?"

"Ye see, Traquair, I'm not just a faction man, but am standing clear, to give both sides fair play."

"The crisis is this, William," said Traquair. "There are papers that we must get through to King Charles at Oxford. Then, what is much more important, we must get his signed warrant back to us before we can act to any real purpose in this ploy. The victorious rebels pretend that they are fighting for certain so called liberties, but we have reason to know that their designs run much deeper, that they aim at nothing less than the dethronement and possible murder of the king. It is necessary to get proof of this to the king and to obtain his sanction to certain action on our part, for if we move without his written commission and our plans fail we are like to get short shrift from Cromwell, who will deny us the right of belligerents. Whether the king believes this or not, the documents we wish to send him are less to the purpose than that you should bring back to us his commission, so you will know that your homecoming is much more vital to us than your outgoing."

"I see. Still, if they kill me on the road there, it is not likely I will win my way back, so both journeys are equally vital to me."

"You will be traveling through a hostile country, but nevertheless will find many to favor you, for though the land is under the iron hand of Cromwell he is far from pleasing all the people, although they may make a quiet mouth save a doubting head. Brave as you are, Will, it is on the smooth tongue rather than on the sharp sword that you must depend, for, however many silent friends we may have along the route, there are too many outspoken enemies for even you to fight your way through. Have you a good horse?"

"The best in the world."

"The pick of my stables is at your choice. Had you not better take a spare animal with you?"

"No. That would be advertising the importance of my journey. If I can get through at all, it must be by dawnering along as a cannie drover body anxious to buy up cattle and turn an honest penny by selling them to those who want them worse than I do, a perfectly legitimate trade even during these exciting times. They all know the desire of a humble Scotsman to make a little money, though the heavens and kings be falling."

"That's an admirable idea, and you know the country well?"

"No one better. Indeed I'll trade my way to the very gates of Oxford if time is not too great an object with you."

"Time is an object, Armstrong, but you will have to do the best you can, and we shall await your return with what patience we may. You will tackle the job then?"

"It's just the kind of job I like. Can you allow me three weeks or a month?"

"If you're back inside of a month, Will, you'll have done what I believe no other man in all Scotland could do. Well, that's settled, then."

The earl was interrupted by a roar from the sentinel outside, which caused every man in the room to start to his feet, but before they could move Angus came bursting in.

"Somebody dropped from the hole on the loft above the stables an' was aff ta th' wood afore I could stop him."

"To horse!" cried Traquair. "Mount instantly and let's after him!"

"It's useless, my lord," said Armstrong quietly, the only unexcited man in the group. "Ye might as well look for some particular flea in all the hielan's. He'll have a horse tied to a tree, and a thousand cavalry couldn't catch him if he knows the wilds hereabout."

"Where's the landlord?" Traquair asked. "Angus, bring him in here."

"Have there been some stragglers about today?" demanded Traquair.

"Not a soul, my lord, on my oath, not a soul."

"Is there connection between the room above and the loft over the stable?"

"No possibility of it, my lord."

"What did I tell you?" said Henderson, plucking up courage again. "This turmoil is utterly without foundation."

"Dash it!" cried Armstrong, with a gesture of impatience. "Will you take a man's word for a thing you can prove in a moment? Get a ladder, Angus, and speal up through the hole the spy came out at. Take a torch, an' if ye drop a lowe in the straw you'll no' be blamed for it by me. See if you can win your way through from the stables to the house."

"Go at once, Angus," commanded Traquair; then to the landlord, who showed signs of wishing to be elsewhere, "No; you stay here."

"I'm feared th' man will set fire to the place," whined the landlord.

"Better be feared o' the rope that will be round your neck if you have lied to us," said the earl grimly, and as he spoke they heard the tramp of the sentinel's feet overhead.

"Is that you, Angus?" asked Traquair in an ordinary tone of voice. "Can you hear what I say?"

"Perfectly, ma lord. There's a very cruanin' trap 'tween th' stable loft an' this, that one would na hev fount in a hurry, but the thief left it open in his sudden flight."

The lips of the landlord turned white but he remained motionless, panting like a trapped animal, for the giant form of Armstrong stood with his back against the door, the only exit.

"Very well. Come down," said Traquair quietly.

When the sentinel returned, Traquair bade him get a rope and tie the innkeeper hand and foot, while the prisoner groveled for his life, his supplications meeting with no response.

"Now take him outside, Angus, and if there is any attempt on his part to move, or if there is an alarm of rescue, run him through with your pike and retreat on us. As for you, you false knave, your life will depend on your lying quiet for the moment and on what you tell us hereafter."

"Am I ta be ta'en awa', your merciful lordship?" sobbed the man, who, now that his life seemed in no immediate danger, turned his anxiety toward his property. "What'll become o' th' inn, for there's nane here to tak care o't?"

Canada's resources—the mineral, agricultural and forest wealth, and the great inland waters and he said these constituted the potential forces in the industrial struggle, and what nation could enter 20th century life better equipped. He gave Ontario her place as the premier province, yet Northwest still unoccupied. Canada was the granary of the Empire, In Manitoba, Assiniboia, Alberta and Saskatchewan there were 135 million acres of good wheat land, yet only five millions had been occupied and from this some fifty million bushels would be produced. It was a land of providential surprises.

There should be here a strong, vigorous race, for it descended from good, clean, true stock. The asperities of the climate ought to preserve their energy, and character, and the rest should be able to give a good account of itself.

The political relations of Canada to the Old Land were in the form of a parliament readily responding to the will of the people ,and there was, he hoped, reverence for the laws that had been made. With all the national dependence and freedom existing here, it was a glorious fact that the ties remained unbroken which bound us to the Mother Land across the sea a land where men of hallowed memory stood for constitutional liberty—the seers and prophets they were of the English speaking race Canadians were the fellow countrymen of Edward I, of Shakespeare, of soldiers, sailors, statesmen constituting a noble army of leaders in every walk in life, It was a proud thing to be a citizen of no mean state, where existed truth, righteousness and liberty, those characteristics which made for the exhaltation of a nation.

WHAT TO GUARD AGAINST.

The speaker dwelt with emphasis upon elements that were to be guarded against in the life of a nation. Though here many people had many reasons for thanksgiving, there were also agencies making for unrighteousness that had to be avoided. One of these was sever criticism, and lack of reverence for the past and for things that were in themselves venerable. Linked with this in some sense was the over-conceit of provincialism. There were many lessons in the literature and art of generations that had gone before. There was a fear of becoming too self-involved, and to rest at what had already been done, and to think that some other need guide, or help or teach us. More subtle than any element was that which beset every growing community,—the proneness to take a materialistic view of every thing. He impressed the Scriptural teaching that a nation's life did not consist in the abundance of things which she possessed. Busy ages were not always great ages; therein men were apt to lose the sense of vision with regard to things spiritual and their indebtedness to the Almighty.

In the development of materialism there was a tendency to idolize money, a power condemned but in a way that made it ready to corrupt. The speaker next considered the dangers attendant upon a democracy that was the genius of this continent, and was indeed its glory, and its test. There was a danger of rushing in the wrong direction at the bidding of a demagogue, and a danger of political corruption. "When men fight out battles by the ballot," said he, "there comes in a tendency to organize in such a way that this or that faction shall win its way by wrong means. Every man and woman who lives in this province has more or less felt some sense of shame at the apparently endless revelations that are made in connection with the election trials in which the commission has seemed to be reached in revelations at the Court. The dream men on both sides abhor that kind of thing, yet we say what can be done? It is not for one man to say what shall be done. Without speaking in a partisan sense it does seem to be the duty of electors to make governments feel that they are in for ever and a day, and if governments of one side or the other get to feel that the people will repeatedly turn them out if they do not properly behave themselves it will do much to prevent in future what has been a regular saturnalia of corruption. I do not think the pulpit has been guilty of silence in this matter. All we can do is to proclaim the principles of righteousness to all men, that they use the ballot as a sacred trust in the sight of God. If men will use the ballot as a trust committed to them than they will as far as possible do a good service for their country. We have no reason to complain of the heritage God has given us, and if we think clearly, work hard and vote honestly, shall have men to be proud of." He urged them in conclusion to let the key-note of thanksgiving be the key-note of their individual lives, and that they offer themselves to God as living sacrifices willing to spend and be spent in the cause of Christianity.

The service given by a large choir was very enjoyable. Miss Davies sang with excellent effect the solo, "Come Unto Me." In the anthems, "What shall I render?" Mr. Joseph Legg and Mr. Shepherd took the solos.

KING PETER I. CROWNED

Saluting Guns Increased By Stages Until They Reached 101—Monarch Kissed the Crown and Placed It On His Own Head—Wearing the Crown the New King Rode Through the Streets to the Palace.

Belgrade, Servia, Sept. 22.—Peter Karageorgevitch was crowned King of Servia yesterday. There were no hostile demonstrations and no attempt to carry out the numerous threats which had been made against the new king's life. In the solemn ritual of the Greek Church and in the elaborate state procession which preceded and followed the coronation the tragedy of Servia's previous ruler found no echo. Amid the thunder of the saluting guns from the royal palace and the garrison King Alexander's murder was at least outwardly forgotten.

King Peter on Horseback.

Here and in every garrison town of Servia the dawn of day was marked by a salute of 21 guns and before the sun was well up King Peter, on horseback, rode out from the palace. The brilliant procession then started for the cathedral through the troop lined streets. Behind the soldiers were packed dense crowds who in spite of the rainy weather stood patiently awaiting to see the King. The Royal Heralds, Cavalry and Life Guards (the Heralds bearing the Royal Standard) and carriages with the Montenegran and Servian princesses, preceded the monarch. Beside King Peter rode his two sons, George and Alexander.

Metropolitan Consecrated Him.

The cathedral was reached shortly after 8 o'clock. There the representatives of the foreign powers, the Cabinet Ministers and others had already been waiting for some time. As King Peter entered the metropolitan consecrated him and more military salutes were fired. The King then took up his position under a canopy and the metropolitan, assisted by many bishops and other clergy, commenced the solmen service. After the prayer the Premier and other ministers handed the crown and regalia to King Peter.

Kissed the Crown.

He kissed the crown, placed it on his head and robed himself in the royal garments. An artillery salute of 101 guns then announced to the people of Belgrade that King Peter had been crowned.

Wearing the crown on his head and fully robed the King left the cathedral, remounted his horse and rode through the crowded streets to the palace. There, in the grand festal hall, King Peter received the congratulations of the diplomatic corps, ascended the throne and once more took the sceptre and orb in his hands.

MONTREAL'S LATEST BLAZE.

Half a Million Fire Loss in the Wholesale District of City.

Montreal, Sept. 22.—A disastrous fire broke out about 1 o'clock yesterday morning in the block bounded by St. Sulpice, Debresoles, Lemoyne and St. Claude streets, near the rear of Notre Dame Church. The block was devoted entirely to the wholesale trade in various lines, and it is estimated that the loss will be $530,000.

The fire broke out in the premises of the Canadian Hardware Company, midway in the block between St. Sulpice and St. Claude streets, and the five flats were soon a raging furnace. From there the fire spread to the Central Agency's warehouse on the west, and Chaput, Fils & Co., on the east. The Central Agency is the warehouse of the British Thread Trust, while Chaput's carry one of the largest stocks of groceries and liquors in the city, and occupy a larger warehouse than the other two firms put together. The value of their stock is computed at close to half a million dollars.

The Revised Fire Losses.

A revision of the loss places the total at $530,000, and the insurance $385,000. The losses and insurance are distributed as follows:

Chaput, Fils & Co., loss $320,000, insured for $250,000.

Canada Hardware Company, loss $150,000, insurance $75,000.

Hotel Dieu, owners of buildings, loss $50,000, fully covered.

Central Agency, loss $10,000, fully covered.

Let the Government Own.

London, Sept. 22.—At the meeting of the Union of Canadian Municipalities yesterday, Controller Hubbard of Toronto moved that, "In the opinion of this union, the long-distance telephone business of Canada should be taken over by the Government of the Dominion, and legislation obtained whereby the local business of telephoning can be taken over and operated by the local municipalities in which such businesses are carried on, and for these purposes a draft be prepared by the Union of Canadian Municipalities for presentation to the Dominion Parliament and Provincial Legislature by the different municipalities through their representatives." After discussion, the resolution was unanimously carried.

Whitton, Kerr, Rollins, Brentnall and Cook. The board adjourned for two weeks.

Grand Trunk Report.

London, Sept. 22.—The half-yearly report of the Grand Trunk Railway Company contains little more than the preliminary statement issued a month ago. The directors attribute the poor results to the unprecedented severity of the weather during January, February and March. The efforts made to neutralize the diminishing revenue by reducing the expenditure have been successful. The general meeting takes place to-day week.

To Remove Grounded Steamer.

Kingston, Sept. 22.—The Donnelly Salvage and Wrecking Co. has sent a steamer to release the steamer Howe, which ran on a shoal near Thousand Island Park, while en route to Oswego with a cargo of pulpwood. The vessel is on very hard, and is owned by the Great Lakes and St. Lawrence Transportation Co. of Duluth.

Mayor to Get $1,200 a Year.

London, Sept. 22.—The mayor's salary after Dec. 1 next will be $1,200 per annum, instead of $700, as at present.

ECZEMA ON LEG FOR TEN YEARS

Would Scratch Till the Blood Flowed—Entirely Cured by Dr. Chase's Ointment.

Mrs. Hiram Frey, Norwood, Ont., states—"I was troubled for ten years with eczema on one leg. The itching was terrible, and when scratched the blood would come. The doctors could not cure me. Fortunately I heard of Dr. Chase's Ointment, and its persistent use has completely cured me. There is now no trace of the disease left.

My little girl two years old, has also been cured of Eczema by Dr. Chase's Ointment. Her face was a mass or sores and we had to bandage her hands to keep her from scratching it. Today her face is clear of even the scars which the ugly sores made, and she is thoroughly cured. I am glad of an opportunity to let people know what a blessing Dr. Chase's Ointment has proved itself to us."

TRIUMPHS IN THE WEST

The Black Watch Band Meeting with Great Reception.

At the Black Watch Band concert in London the Princess Rink in the evening was crowded with close on to three thousand people. One elderly Scotchman had come a distance of three hundred miles from a town west of Chicago. When the pipers marched in among the audience playing their tunes, one elderly Scotchman who was sitting on the elevated seats at the side of the rink could not restrain himself and got up in his place and commenced to dance to the music of the pipes. He was in full view of the audience and the cheering of the pipers developed into shrieks of delight at the enthusiasm of the old gentleman. Another old Scotchman who was down in the audience inspired by the spectacle, climbed up to the elevated seat where his countryman was, and joined in the dance. Suddenly it occurred to them that they were perhaps furnishing too much diversion for the crowd, and the one who first commenced to dance stopped suddenly in spite of the encouragement of the other to continue. After that his Scotch reticence returned to him, and he did not venture on any outbursts for the remainder of the evening. The music of the band itself however aroused the greatest of appreciation and there were double encores all through the programme, ending with hearty national choruses and loud cheers.

The Band will visit Peterborough on Tuesday 27th. Tickets are on sale at Mudill's drug store.

THE NEW SUPERINTENDENT

Mr. J. H. McClellan a Business Man of Wide Attainments.

(Ottawa Free Press.)

In choosing a business man of such wide attainments and with a splendid shipping experience, the Government seems to have found the one man in Canada best fitted for the position of Superintendent of the Trent Valley Canal.

Mr. McClellan's more recent residence in Peterborough, where he has watched the steady continuous progress of the work, places him in the happy position of being able to take up the work of commercialising the canal, and bringing it to the attention of shippers.

Already at an expense of $4,000,000 there are now 170 miles of open and continuous navigation, and the Government is determined to develop forward the completion of the work in carrying out its policy of developing the rich resources of Western Canada.

An estimated expenditure of $4,000,000 will complete the canal from Georgian Bay to Lake Ontario, and Canada will than have a short cut waterway from the Northern Lakes which will place the Manitoba wheat many day's nearer its ultimate destination.

This canal costing but $16,000,000 to complete will have a greater commercial value than the Erie Canal, on which the American government is expending in improvements alone $101,000,000.

A despatch from Ottawa states: "Mr. J. H. McClellan of Peterborough has been notified of his appointment as Superintendent of the Trent Valley Canal. His duties will be to take charge of the commercial features of the waterway. He will act as paymaster, and purchase the supplies, oversee the lockmasters, and attend to the conserving of the waters of the Otonabee River, with the object of insuring as even a flow as possible in the interest of navigation, the users of hydraulic power, and of the lumbermen.

TUG STRUCK LOG

While Navigating the Narrows — Other News from Lakefield.

Mr and Mrs. D. W. Edwards arrived home from Toronto on Friday last.

On Tuesday morning about nine o'clock Mr. Z. White's tug, while going up the narrows, struck a sunken log which was lying and towards the boat going at full speed. The result was disastrous to the tug which filled rapidly with water and sank. Through the good efforts of the crew of the Empire, the tug was uplifted and put on dry dock for repairs. The tug's crew got into a canoe and thus escaped getting a ducking.

Mr Hugh Strathy spent Sunday in Toronto.

Several families in the village are beginning to use electric light for lighting purposes, and Mr. Farrer, the genial manager of our plant here, is kept busy.

The Agricultural Society are getting along famously with their fall fair arrangements. Their posters are quite attractive and their prizes for exhibits are numerous and worth the getting. A large number of private citizens are contributing prizes for various articles also. This year no doubt will exceed all former years.

Our cement walk is finished and it is a credit to the town and a pleasure to all pedestrians. In future years, and not very far in the future either there will be nothing but cement walks in this village.

Miss Bailey of Peterborough is in town the guest of Mr and Mrs. De la Hunt.

Messrs Dr. J. N. Johnston and F. H. Jory have purchased the livery business of Mr. Chas. Doyle and they intend getting some first class new rigs. Mr. Doyle intends to start up business in Orillia.

SPORTING NEWS.

TUG-OF-WAR.

A member of the Quaker tug-of-war team writes:—

The old canal tug-of-war team, known for the past two years as the Quakers, six years ago won the J. R. Stratton trophy at the 1st of July picnic in Ashburnham, and since then have had eighteen contests, of which they have been the victors of sixteen, only losing two. They are now in the pink of condition to meet all comers at the Peterborough Exhibition, and six of the heaviest of the team are also prepared to run with any other six men out of any tug-of-war team for 150 yards for from $10 to $100.

We would feel much obliged if the Secretary of the Turf Club would give us some information about the T.V. Cup, which we won four times and since have heard nothing about it.

A SEPTEMBER WEDDING

Miss Maude E. Williams and Mr. John J. Menzies.

Yesterday evening at 6.30 o'clock, a very interesting event took place when Miss Maude Elinor Williams was united in marriage to Mr. John James Menzies. The ceremony took place at the residence of the bride's parents 48 Bolivar street, and Rev. Mr. Jolliffe was the officiating minister. The parlor was handsomely adorned with autumn leaves. The bridesmaid was Miss Edith Williams sister of the bride, while the groom was assisted by Mr. Albert Menzies, of Fenelon Falls, his cousin. The flower girls were Miss Estelle Cunnannon and Miss Victoria Allen, cousins of the bride, and the Wedding March was played by Miss Nellie Allen, also a cousin of the bride.

The bride received very many costly presents. The employes of the C. G.E. works sent a very handsome clock. The groom's gift to the bride was a silver tea service, to the bridesmaid an opal ring, and to the flower girls gold brooches. The groom was presented with a stick pin, inlaid with pearls. The father's gift to the bride was a cheque. The bride's dress was of cream taffeta, with applique trimmings, while the bridesmaid were a white organdie costume, trimmed with lace. After the ceremony, about fifty guests sat down to the sumptuous wedding repast, which had been prepared. The happy couple left on the 9 o'clock train for Port Hope, Toronto and Barrie. The bride's going away suit was a very neat costume of navy blue cloth.

NUPTIAL KNOT TIED

Mr. Robert Mathieson and Miss Celia Billings were Married.

Nuptial knot tied.

At the residence of Mr. Richard Castle, Rink st., last night Mr. Robert Mathieson and Miss Celia Billings, both of Peterborough, were united in marriage by the Rev.. J. G. Potter of St. Andrew's church. The bride was very prettily attired and carried a bouquet of carnations. Mr. M. W. Peters was groomsman and Miss Mary Knapp performed the duties of bridesmaid. After the ceremony the wedding supper was enjoyed by all present.

A VERY PRETTY WEDDING

Miss Cassie Robertson and Mr. George Gillespie.

A pretty ceremony took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George Robertson, of Otonabee, when their second daughter, Miss Cassie, became the bride of Mr. George Gillespie, formerly of Otonabee, but now residing in Burlington. A large number of the relatives and friends of the contracting parties were present. Rev. Mr. Jolliffe performed the ceremony at 12 o'clock noon, after which the guests partook of an elaborate lunch. The bride looked charming in a dress of white mousselaine de soie, over white taffeta silk, with chiffon trimmings, and was assisted by her cousin, Miss Alice Dunnell, who wore a pretty frock of cream etamine. Mr. Peter Gillespie-brother of the groom, was best man. The bride was the recipient of a great number of valuable presents, and the Oakdale Sunday School, with which she has been associated for a number of years, presented her with a silver sugar bowl, cream pitcher, and a dozen of spoons.

Mr. and Mrs. Gillespie left on the 5.10 C.P.R. for Toronto and Western Ontario, and will reside in Burlington.

A MADOC WEDDING

Two Young People Married who Have Many Friends Here.

The following item, which appears in today's issue of the Globe is of interest to many friends of the contracting parties in town and vicinity, who will extend best wishes for the future:

"The marriage of Miss Helen Blanche O'Flynn, niece of Mr. Edmund D. O'Flynn, of Campbellford, was solemnized in the Methodist church Madoc, which was prettily decorated for the occasion, on Wednesday, September 14th. The officiating clergyman was Rev. Dr. McDiarmid of Madoc. The bride was given away by her brother, Mr. J. L. O'Flynn, of Sault Ste. Marie, the Wedding March being played by Miss B. O'Hara. The bride wore cream crepe over white satin, and carried lilies of the Valley and maiden hair fern. The bridesmaid, Miss Susie O'Flynn, of Belleville, a cousin, wore cream net over taffeta, with ruchings of chiffon, and also wore the wedding favor of the groom, a sunburst of pearls. The groom was assisted by his brother, Mr. Wm. A. Garrett, of Toronto, and the ushers were Mr. P. Walter O'Flynn, Madoc, and Mr. J. Frank Linton, of Campbellford. After the ceremony a reception was held at the residence of the bride's uncle, where about 40 intimate friends and relatives were assembled. Refreshments were served in the dining room, the decorations being pink roses and ferns. The going-away gown was a tailor-made suit of navy blue, with hat to match."

JAPANESE AGAINST MUKDEN

Operations are Rapidly Developing

SOME UNCONFIRMED RUMORS

One to the Effect that the Vladivostock Cruisers Sailed out and Another is that General Stoessel Re-captured a Fort from the Japanese.

London, Sept. 23.—Various unconfirmed rumors have reached London that the Vladivostock cruisers have sailed out, that Lieut.-Gen. Stoessel has made a counter attack and captured a fort from the Japanese, that Madame Stoessel was wounded in the shoulder while attending wounded soldiers at Port Arthur, that the Russians are leaving Mukden, etc.

Where Japs Are.

St. Petersburg, Sept. 23.—Gen. Kiropatkin telegraphed under Wednesday's date that the Japanese continue their attempts to turn the Russian left, but without success. According to the latest information received by the War Office Field Marshal Oyama's advance forces are still thirty miles south and southeast of Fushun. The War Office does not expect a battle at Fushun until after a series of rear guard engagements.

Russian Loss at Liaoyang.

St. Petersburg, Sept. 23.—The general staff has issued a revised list of the Russian casualties at Liaoyang, showing that 1,810 men were killed, that 10,811 were wounded, and that 1,213 were left on the field. Fifty-four regimental officers were killed, and 252 were wounded; two generals were killed and three were wounded. Five officers were left on the field. Of those wounded at Liaoyang 1,334 men and 34 officers have already returned to duty. Those reported to be missing are probably dead.

Nearing Port Arthur.

Tokio, Sept. 23.—While official confirmation is lacking it seems certain that the Japanese possess a fort on another height westward of Itzeshan, which they carried by desperate assaults and have since resisted all attempts to recapture by the Russians. Both these heights overlook Port Arthur, offering excellent gun positions which materially weaken the Russian defence.

Japs Against Mukden.

St. Petersburg, Sept. 23.—The Japanese operations against Mukden are rapidly developing. Gen. Kuropatkin announces that the Japanese army at Bentsiaputse is beginning to advance northward. The outposts Wednesday tried to capture Baotou Pass, commanding the road to Fushun. The Russians are offering a stubborn resistance, which is likely to retard decisive operations. Kuropatkin has placed strong forces astride the Mukden, and Fushun roads to Bentsiaputse. The Russians are also holding all the passes of the Daroage, eastward of Bentsiaputse.

A despatch from Harbin announces that another Japanese regiment is moving further eastward, but it is regarded as improbable that the Japanese will move in considerable force from Beiantchan along the roads leading to Mukden, Fushun and Sintsintin. Severe fighting is probable before the Japanese succeed in reaching the Hun River.

New Father-in-Law Dies.

Ottawa, Sept. 23.—Charles Antler, who shot his son-in-law, Charles Gerr, in the thigh Wednesday, was found dead the same night by Chief M. Lee and Constable Thomas Dixon, who went from Pembroke to arrest him. Upon arriving at deceased's home in Buchanan and Wylie townships, the constables were told he had not been seen for some time. They searched a near-by shed and found his body there, shot through the breast, all signs pointing to the fact that he died by his own hand.

Brantford Man Badly Burned.

WHO IS BARNEY CONWAY?

A Man of that Name Killed in California Said to be from Peterboro.

The Postmaster to-day was in receipt of the following telegram from Truckee, California, and dated September 22:

"Barney Conway died to-day; notify parents if any.

SIERRA NEVADA WOOD & LUMBER CO.

Enquiry fails to reveal any information that establishes the identity of Conway as a former resident of Peterborough, although the opinion of the authorities seems to be that he came from some one of the surrounding townships, and having engaged in the lumber camps here probably had no fixed place of abode in the county, but gave Peterborough as his former home.

LENA PRESTON FOUND

Wandered Most on the C.P.R. Track and was Located at a Farmhouse

Lena Preston, the young girl who came by C.P.R. from Cavanville on Monday and lost her way in an attempt to find the Barnardo Home, has been located. Word has been received that the girl arrived at a farm house between here and Indian River, and that she is being carefully looked after. Thinking that the C.P.R. track was that of the G.T.R., which runs past the home, the girl had taken that route, hence her disappearance from those who expected to find her at the station when the train arrived. The Indian at the Home were very anxious as to her safety.

That is about the ratio. About seven times as many persons are injured as die from all causes yearly.

Accidents are a more prolific cause of death than any disease except lung diseases.

Twice as many people are accidently killed as die of old age. Does it not seem reasonable to you as a business man that it would be to your interest to carry an accident policy?

YOU are subject to over two hundred diseases, and liable to accidents without number.

LORD DUNDONALD

Apparently the Liberals are intending to make their treatment of Lord Dundonald an issue in the approaching campaign. Sir Frederick Borden is now supplying his organs with extracts from the General's suggestions for the new Militia Act, the Minister having asked him to give them. Lord Dundonald is gravely accused of having recommended the introduction of the conscription. This is about as true as some of the statements made in the House by Sir Frederick and Mr. Fisher, which they had to withdraw as unfounded. The truth is that the old Militia Act provided for a ballot for the reserve militia and Lord Dundonald did not propose to do away with this feature. A few other selections from his recommendations are craftily made, and treated as unfairly to produce a false impression. They cannot be consistent in their fiction. First, we are told that Sir Frederick Borden had drawn the new Militia Bill before Lord Dundonald came to Canada. Then we have in full the letter of the Minister to the General, asking him to make suggestions for amendments of the different clauses of the old Act, as he had only just resolved to begin the work in this this manner. There is a proverb that liars should have long memories.

This trick, quite in keeping with the official treatment of Lord Dundonald, is designed to divert attention from the fact that the most valuable portions of the new Act were founded on the recommendation of the General. Sir Frederick Borden dishonestly suppressed Lord Dundonald's report, hiding it from Parliament and the country, that he might thus pilfer the General's ideas and claim credit for them as his own. He also obtains the additional advantage of making, through his organs, false representations of what Lord Dundonald really recommended in his report, thus venting his spleen on the gallant officer, who exposed his degradation of our citizen army by making it, as far as possible, a political vote-getting machine.

Sir Frederick Borden does not dare to give to the public Lord Dundonald's report, for it would expose this despicable game.

Ross majority 9, with chances of its being diminished in North Norfolk and North Grey.

We have not noticed any of the Ross-Temperance men expressing their opinions as to the cargo of the Government cruiser, Minnie M.

The barnacle organs are still endeavoring to persuade their readers that the notorious Capt. Sullivan imported the Buffalo election crooks for the benefit of the Conservative party.

The Globe is hypocritically calling for pure elections, but we have not yet noticed its congratulations to Mr. Hugh Clark for his successful civic election in Centre Bruce.

The Ottawa Free Press says it is under the impression that there is no such position as Attorney-General for Canada. This is not the only false impression under which the Free Press labors.

Now we understand the Globe's rather puzzling repudiation of its friend, Capt. Sullivan. In a labored leading article, it contends that the Buffalo machine men imported by Capt. Sullivan were for the service of the Conservatives.

IT WAS A VAIN SEARCH

Made by Fenian Raid Veterans for their Land.

Fenian Raid veterans will be interested in the following despatch from Ottawa: Two representatives of the local Fenian Raid veterans, who number between twenty and thirty, recently returned from an extensive trip through New Ontario in a vain search extending over two months, for land to be taken up under the land scrip issued by the Ontario Government. They report having made a most careful examination of the Temiskaming district. In some cases they made selections, only to be assured that they had been already taken. At New Liskeard they were told by the Crown Lands Agent that there were no locations for them and he would not tell them when there would be. He offered, though, if they would pay $80, he would locate them as settlers and when they had done settlement duties, the money would be refunded. By accepting that offer they would have forfeited, they say, the privileges they were entitled to under the Veterans Land Grant Act. The applicants were ordered to Marter township for some good land. They went to the alleged bonanza, which was along the line to the Temiskaming Railway, and what did they find? The good land was there, certainly, but it had all been taken up by the engineers and surveyors of the railways and their friends and relations. To take such a step as the applicants had made to get the knowledge they now possess cost a lot in time and money, but, nevertheless, they had to return home with their scrip in their pockets and hope of ever getting their land forlorn in their hearts.

NEW FEATURE FOR FAIRS

Will Gratify the Human Yearning to Hit Something With an Egg.

The Toronto World has the following story with reference to something that knocks the fall fair hit-the-African-dodger racket all sideways:

John Morrison is busy developing a new market for the toothsome product of the hen and although John's discovery has not yet boosted him into the magnate class, he has shown the true magnate's aptitude for turning the natural proclivities of human kind to his own gain. Deep rooted in the human breast is a love for the sensation of hitting a real man with a real egg. Whether it is the soul-satisfying crash and the subsequent discomfort to the target is a debatable point, but anyway John appreciated the yearning and busied himself in the preparation of a place where people might throw eggs to their heart's content—at five cents a throw.

Now John lives at 89 Dufferin-st., in the immediate vicinity of Stanley Park. Beside the park is a vacant lot, and this John chartered. A canvas screen was erected and in it was a slit where the assistant—the bull's eye—might present his head to those who desired to hit him—at five cents a throw. "Mickey" Hughes, a youth who lives in the vicinity, agreed to be the target, for a share of the receipts. His face was given a markedly African aspect and his mouth was strongly exaggerated. Then John with a case of eggs seated himself behind the guard rope and waited for the crowd.

They came. In twos and threes and twenties they came, impelled by a mad desire to "paste the nigger with an egg." They surged back and forward, each with an outstretched nicket, while the genial John passed out the missiles. All afternoon a fusillade was kept up, the long-suffering "Mickey" dodging when he could and wiping off the contents of the egg when he could not.

Ever and anon the representative of the law hove in sight. When he hove in sight each time John was attacked with a fit of generosity and gave the eggs away, until the officer had passed. Less successful and invidious egg merchants state that John did this because he had no license—but no matter.

By nightfall John had turned a handsome profit and was busy looking up the list of fall fairs. He told The World most that he intended to work the whole country. He would have to carry two men to act as targets, he said, for their side of the work was liable to prove tedious.

The Newest Card Cases

One of the latest decrees of fashion is that the card case shall match in color the costume of milady." These can be easily and quickly made from velvet leather, and when lined with silk of the same or a contrasting shade, they look very pretty. The Review Stationery Department has a full line of velvet leather in the popular shades of brown, green, grey and red. The leather for the cases costs but a trifle, and it may have a design fastened upon it, or a pretty silver initial fastened on to make it more elaborate.—The Review Stationery Department. 2d

CANADA AND BRITAIN

Can't Have Same Tariff Sir Wilfrid Tells Manufacturers.

Dominion Premier Suggests That Trade Treaties Between the Mother Country and the Colonies May Be Able to Solve the Problem—Task Not Without Difficulties, But It Is Possible to Strengthen Friendly Relations.

Montreal, Que., Sept. 23.—Sir Wilfrid Laurier was the principal speaker at the banquet of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association last night. Three hundred attended the function. Among those attending were: Hon. William Patterson, Hon. George W. Ross, Hon. George E. Foster, Hon. R. H. McCarthy, Colonial Secretary of the West Indies; Sir Howard Vincent, British M.P.

The Prime Minister proposed the toast, "Canada and the Empire." After introducing allusions to the noted guests present, he briefly reviewed the history of the British Empire.

Galaxy of Living Nations.

The Empire of England was a galaxy of living nations. In this connection, Rome was the dead mother of a dead Empire, England the living mother of young nations. But what was to be the new feature, if there was to be one? It had been suggested that a bond of union would be found in a uniform tariff for the British Empire.

The differences of civilization, of clime and of production made it impossible that we could have for Canada the same tariff as India, or Australia, or South Africa. But what was possible was that we could have between the Motherland and the colonies treaties of commerce—the expression was not too strong or extravagant—whereby we could sit down, and by mutual concessions, by granting and giving, we could develop the trade of Britain, and her colonies to the mutual advantage of all.

Not the Same Tariff.

He was well aware that the task was not without difficulty. We could not have the same tariff, Sir Wilfrid said, in Canada as in Great Britain, but when the Motherland had chosen her policy, and we had chosen ours, it should always be possible to come to some conclusion which will strengthen still more the friendly relations existing between us. He then asked the gathering to drink to the toast of "Canada and the Empire," and resumed his seat amid loud cheers.

Speeches were made also by Hon. G. E. Foster, Hon. G. W. Ross and President George.

LET TARIFF BE REVISED.

C.M.A. Recommend Members to Take It Into Politics.

Montreal, Sept. 23.—The Canadian Manufacturers' Association closed its convention yesterday by adopting the strongest resolution in favor of a revision of the tariff recorded in its history.

A resolution was also adopted in favor of the establishment of a fire insurance department on account of the excessive rates now charged.

W. K. George of Toronto was chosen president of the association.

The closing meeting in the morning was held behind closed doors. It was afterward announced that the report of the tariff committee had been adopted as presented, with some immaterial changes.

The last paragraph proposed that the association should pledge its members to support candidates in favor of a higher tariff. It was decided to use the word "recommend," instead of "pledge."

Let State Own Phones.

Montreal, Sept. 23.—At the C.M.A. convention yesterday a resolution was adopted commending the consideration of the Parliamentary committee to the resolution of the Windsor Board of Trade, favoring the acquiring of the telephone system by the Dominion Government. The committee is to report at a future meeting.

STRIKELESS NEW ZEALAND

EFFECT OF COMPULSORY ARBITRATION IN OBTAINING PEACE.

How the New Zealand Constitution and Arbitration Act Works and What It Deals With.

St. Louis, Mo., Sept. 17.—Writing to a local pupil Thomas Clarkson of Christchurch, N. Z., gives an account of the effect of compulsory arbitration in abolishing strikes and of obtaining peace between employer and employee. Mr Clarkson says:

"Fifteen years ago strikes were not uncommon in New Zealand. Early in the history of this far-off isle, the conflict between capital and labor became a serious factor and threatened to blight the future of a country whose natural advantages seemed to have predestined for it an important place among the nations. Things came to a head when the maritime strike tied up shipping and stopped trade between the coast ports, and also with New Zealand's neighbor, Australia.

The boycott lasted several weeks. In that brief period the small colony suffered to the extent of millions of dollars.

It was to prevent a repetition of such a catastrophe that the Legislature—which has always displayed remarkable courage in grappling with big problems of the day—passed the Conciliation and Arbitration Act. In reference to this and other laws relating to labor, it should be pointed out that in New Zealand the working classes exert a direct influence on the legislation of the country. This influence is exerted not by a labor party sitting in the Legislature, but by agitation at political meetings, a considerable use of the open columns in the newspapers and at the ballot box. In the first instance the act was drawn up in such a way as to provide for arbitration when the parties in a dispute agreed to this method of adjustment. The result was a failure, and the Legislature then went a step further and passed the act which has now been on trial for ten years.

REGISTERS ALL ORGANIZATIONS.

The New Zealand Conciliation and Arbitration Act deals generally with the wages, hours of labor, and general conditions of employment. It provides for the registration of unions of workmen and also of employers in connection with any trade or industry in the districts of the country. Thus in Christchurch which has a population of 56,000 people, there are separate unions of carpenters, bricklayers, plasterers, butchers, bakers, iron workers, tobacconists and so forth.

There is nothing to compel a workman to join one of these unions, but he usually does for his own interest. The act stipulates clearly that the constitutions of these unions must be such as to make it easy for workmen to join. The workmen's unions almost invariably make it a clause in their demands that the industrial awards shall stipulate that employers must—other things being equal—give preference to employment of unionists. When this is conceded, as it usually is, it materially assists to bring outsiders into the fold, and under these circumstances it is not surprising that practically all the workingmen of New Zealand are organized under the provisions of the Conciliation and Arbitration Act.

There are not so many unions of employers, as in builders' unions fully represents the employers in all the trades connected with building.

In Christchurch, as in other industrial districts created under the act, there is a conciliation board which comprises eleven gentlemen nominated by the whole of the employers' unions in the district, three nominated by the employees' unions and in addition a chairman elected by the six. The members of these boards are invariably men of high standing and are usually selected because of their practical business knowledge. They have power to summon parties in an industrial dispute, and necessary witnesses and having considered the case before them are required to give an award which, if accepted by the parties concerned, becomes binding for the term specified in the contract, usually three years.

ONE ARBITRATION COURT.

There is an arbitration court for the whole of New Zealand. It consists of three persons—one selected by the employers' association through-out the colony, one by the workmen's unions, while the third, who sits as chairman, is judge of the Supreme Court. In this connection it is well to observe that the judiciary of New Zealand, from the highest official up to the lowest, is absolutely above suspicion and a judge of the Supreme Court therefore is a man who commands implicit trust from all classes.

If the carpenters of Christchurch come to the conclusion that they are being underpaid, that their hours of labor are unreasonably long, that an undue percentage of boy apprentices are being employed, or that in any other way they are being unfairly treated, they place a case against one or more employers to the local conciliation board.

The board notifies the other parties to the dispute, and in due course the case is heard, both sides being given opportunity to state their case and support it by evidence. Frequently this threshing out of a case results in an amicable arrangement and there the matter ends. Ordinarily, however, the board makes its award, and the parties to the dispute are given a specified time, within which they may appeal, failing which the award becomes law.

In case of appeal the case goes to the arbitration court, which has full power to hear additional witnesses or compel parties to the dispute to produce business books, documents or such other matter as may be considered necessary for the information of the court. Such information is not made public, and is only made available to the court.

The arbitration court gives the final award which has the law of the country behind it, with substantial penalties upon either workmen or employers who shall violate it. The maximum fine is $2,500. Generally speaking the awards are received with satisfaction by both parties and any breaches of the awards are usually of a trivial nature.

WORKMEN GENERALLY THE PLAINTIFFS.

Either employers' or workmen's unions can invoke the aid of the conciliation board in remedying a grievance, but hitherto it has been practically an invariable rule that the workmen have begun cases. The exceptional prosperity of the Colony since the act has been in force coupled with the increased cost of living, may be a factor in this direction.

Up to the present the employers have practically stood on the defensive, and only such a contingency as a wave of oppression striking the colony would be likely to change their attitude. Opponents of the system say that when that time comes its weakness will become apparent, but there seems no reason to suppose that it will not be equally as effective in solving labor disputes, whether these be introduced by workmen applying for an increase or by employers seeking to reduce wages.

It would be foolish to say that the conciliation and arbitration act has solved the labor problem forever. In America it is problematical whether the influx of an alien population does not constitute a peculiar set of conditions with which such an act will be unable to cope. In New Zealand it has by no means settled the conflict between labor and capital. Disputes occupy fully the time of the conciliation boards and the arbitration court, and the colony's statesman are watching its operations closely so as to make improvements from time to time. But the act has, undoubtedly, taken out of the hands of either employer or employee the power to drag a third party into the dispute.

Neither can compel the unwilling public through the medium of the boycott to take sides, and since the act came into force there has been no strike in New Zealand, nor fear of one. Surely this, if not a complete triumph, is at least a long step forward in the march towards industrial harmony, and should be fruitful of suggestions for the consideration of political economists in America. Industrial disputes from the labor boss, armed pick and state militia, to the calm atmosphere of a court which examines his claim, sees if the employer is getting unfair profits out of his man, and gives the workman for a fixed time a minimum wage for his work, while he can earn as much more as his employer likes to give him. The man need not work nor his employer pay the minimum wage, or any wage, but if he works at all at that trade he must not be "sweated," nor may he undercut his mates in wages.

OTHER LABOR ENACTMENTS.

There are scores of other enactments on the New Zealand statute books directly affecting labor interests. The Factory Act lays down the conditions under which factory work can be carried on. Children under fourteen years are not allowed to be employed, and the hours of labor, holidays, and the employment of women and youths under sixteen years of age are regulated. Good ventilation and sanitary accommodations are points dwelt upon, while machinery has to be properly guarded, fire escapes provided and dangerous occupations specifically classified. In order to assist this system of free general compulsory education which prevails in the colony young persons are not allowed to work in factories until they have passed the fourth standard of the state schools.

To prevent the introduction of "sweating" into commercial centres, articles made in private dwellings or unregistered workshops, have to be labelled when offered for sale, so that goods so manufactured, often in unsanitary premises, may not be placed on the market in competition with the work done in inspected factories. The factory inspectors also exercise supervision over the sleeping accommodation provided for shearers in the country districts.

The Shops and Shop Assistants' Act provides for the closing of all shops in towns and suburbs for one afternoon holiday in each week. A few shops, such as fruiterers, restaurants, etc., are exempted from closing, but assistants in such establishments, in the bars of hotels and in country stores must have half a holiday for some day of the week.

In Christchurch ordinary tradespeople close Thursday afternoons, while the banks and warehouses all close Saturday afternoons. This act stipulates that every young woman employed in a shop must be provided with sitting accommodation so that she may rest occasionally.

The Labor Department has an employment branch with offices in all the principal towns. All those men seeking work are supplied with information as to the condition of labor in any trade in any part of the colony, and at the same time arranges for employment on government work for those who desire it.

STEADY PROGRESS.

The labor laws of New Zealand have not had the demoralizing effect on industry that many predicted. Year by year the country progresses more and more. The hands in the factories have nearly doubled in eight years, and the private wealth of the people rose from $760,000,000 in 1892 to $1,000,000,000 in 1902, a gain of $240,000,000 in ten years. There are no unemployed in New Zealand and the workingman has constant work at high wages.

The New Zealand workingman lives in a six or seven room villa situated in a quarter acre of land with lawn and flower garden in front. Sometimes he rents this property. More often he owns it. The half holiday and the general conditions under which he works gives him opportunity to retain his best health and also to take an active interest in all that is going on in the world. The influence he is able to exert in the politics of the day inspires him to take the keenest interest in the government of the country. In brief, he feels himself to be a man, sees that he is recognized as such, and "lives" his life in the very highest sense.

How to Keep Well

The best efforts of the great physicians are now expending in finding how to keep people well and prevent serious disease. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food was prepared with this object in view. It is not only a cure for diseases of the nerves, but also a restorative to be used when vitality runs low and the weakened condition of the system invites attack by fevers or contagious diseases.

The death of Mr. William Howson, one of the oldest settlers of Otonabee, occurred Thursday morning at the residence of his daughter, Mrs. T. Pue. Mr. Howson was in his eighty-fourth year and only survived his wife by about two months. Mr. Howson leaves to mourn his loss five children; three sons, Mr. Ed. Howson, of Peterborough; Mr. George Howson, of Campbellford; Mr. Thos. Howson, of Keene; and two daughters, Mrs. W. Pue, of Cavan, and Mrs. T. Pue, of Keene. The funeral will be held in the Methodist church Keene, on Friday at two o'clock, and thence to the Pine Grove cemetery for interment.

DISCUSSED MANY SUBJECTS

that the rates were altogether too high even in view of the large fires which have recently occurred in Ottawa, Montreal and Toronto. Many municipalities had the feeling that they were called upon to make up for the losses which occurred in other municipalities by having their rates raised. He was not going to say that the Underwriters were octopuses or bloodsuckers or anything of that sort. He wanted to deal with the matter fairly and squarely. He thought that the executive of the union should make full enquiry into the matter. The amount of fire insurance premiums paid at the present time was fully $15,000,000 per annum. He thought that the wider they could get their risks distributed, the less they would have to pay out. If they got a fair number of municipalities interested in the scheme they would run very little risk of having their funds wiped out by a large fire. There was another thing which had caused a large amount of friction between the municipalities and the Underwriters. The rates were being constantly put up in spite of the improvements in fire-fighting appliances carried out at their request. The Mayor Drake, of Windsor, thought that the proper remedy was to go to the Government and get a measure passed to prevent these men from holding up the people. He did not think that the remedy for this monopoly would be found in the Mayor of Ottawa's scheme. He did not blame him, however, for advocating something of the kind in view of the big fires they had had at Hull and Ottawa.

The ex-Mayor of Galt agreed to a large extent with the Mayor of Windsor. He did not think that the smaller municipalities should assist the larger in matters of this kind. Theoretically, it sounded very nice, but practically it was quite otherwise. They all admitted they were being held up, but were there not other ways of finding a cure than that suggested. Some of the municipalities might go into it for a time and then withdraw and this would be disastrous to those remaining.

Ald. Lattimer, of Winnipeg, said there was a very strong feeling in that city that the underwriters were not dealing fairly with the municipalities. Ten per cent. was the best rate that they could get on some new exhibition buildings, costing about $45,000. These buildings, he remarked, were covered with iron, both roof and walls.

Controller Hubbard of Toronto did not want to commit the convention to the principle involved. He considered that it was a very risky business for a municipality to go into. He did not see any difficulty in each municipality taking their own risks.

The Mayor of Windsor said that a corporation going into this business would have its credit destroyed.

Ald. Leith, of Brantford, as an insurance man, was not in favor of the municipality taking up this scheme; it was the last thing he would advise them to go in for.

Mayor Laporte of Montreal said there were much greater risks in towns like Hull, Ottawa, Montreal and Toronto than there were in small towns and villages and the smaller should not be bled to pay for the larger. He was in favor of any scheme which would come into competition with the underwriters, and so compel them to reduce their rates.

It was finally moved by Controller Hubbard, Toronto, seconded by Ald. Stroud, Ottawa, "that this scheme for the formation of a Dominion Municipal Insurance Corporation the principle of which has received the endorsation of the Ontario Municipal Union, and has been forwarded to this Union by that body, be referred to the executive of this Union with instructions to submit the scheme to the Dominion Superintendent of Insurance and such other experts on the subject as they may deem proper, obtaining full information as to the business done in Canada and the cost thereof, including losses and expenses, and to report to this union at its next annual meeting."

It was moved as an amendment by Mayor Drake, seconded by Mr. Wm. "Cowan, "that this convention does not approve of a co-operative municipal insurance commission."

The motion was carried by a large majority, only the mover and seconder voting for the amendment.

MUNICIPAL TELEPHONES.

The afternoon's proceedings were terminated by the reading of a paper on "Municipal Ownership of Telephones" by Mr. W. Norman Andrews of Brantford. In the course of an able address on the subject Mr. Andrews cited facts proving the success of the scheme in the Old Country and in cities in Canada which had recently adopted it. They were considering a scheme of municipal ownership for Brantford. The idea was being strenuously opposed by the large telephone corporations on both sides of the Atlantic.

ARTISTIC PARKS.

There was a fair attendance in the City Hall in the evening to hear a paper on "Parks and Practical Civic Art," by Frederick G. Todd, landscape architect, of Montreal. Mayor presided and introduced the lecturer.

Mr. Todd divided his paper into two sections, namely, the park system in large cities, and the park system in smaller places. In the course of his remarks which were of an exceedingly practical nature, Mr. Todd advocated the laying out of parks so that the various features might follow nature as closely as possible. He condemned the artificial and geometrical junk so common in many cities. He also recommended the provision of wading pools and public playgrounds for children, saying that the provision of such was a preventive of juvenile crime.

A series of lantern views were then shown, illustrating the use of playgrounds, ponds and public bathing places, mostly in the city of Boston.

A discussion followed, in which several of the delegates participated, and Mr. Todd was cordially thanked for his instructive address.

When He Killed His First Man.

The killing of a brother man, even in battle, is a painful thing to remember. A soldier of the war thus vividly described his first experience:

"My first man I saw but twenty seconds, but I shall remember him forever. I was standing by my gun when a Confederate infantry soldier rushed up. I whipped out my revolver and took him through the breast. He tossed up his arms, gave me the strangest look in the world and fell forward upon his face. He had blue eyes, brown curling hair, a dark mustache and a handsome face. I thought the instant I fired that I should have loved that man if I had known him. I tell you war is terrible business."—Youth's Companion.

DISCUSSED MANY SUBJECTS

MUNICIPAL REPRESENTATIVES AT THE CONVENTION IN LONDON.

Mayor Roger Expresses himself in Regard to Fire-fighting Appliances and System of Electing Aldermen — Municipal Insurance Favored.

(London Free Press)

At the Convention of Canadian Municipalities yesterday, an interesting discussion on fire-fighting appliances was initiated by Mayor Roger, of Peterborough, in the course of which Controller Hubbard, of Toronto, brought out the fact that the recent big fire in Toronto had shown that the use of sprinklers in large buildings was not altogether a success. When these sprinklers came into play on the buildings catching fire, it very much diminished the pressure on the street mains causing great inconvenience to the firemen. They in Toronto asked the underwriters to support a salvage corps, but the answer given was, "We care nothing for what you provide, we insure the risk as we find it." But they did not do this. In London, for example, the underwriters have sustained very little loss, but in spite of this they had put up the rates from time to time.

ELECTION OF ALDERMEN.

Ald. Leitch, of Brantford, said he would like to get the opinion of the delegates on the election of aldermen as a whole and not by wards, as there was a proposal in Brantford to change the present ward system.

Mr. Edwards, City Clerk, of London, said that the citizens were almost unanimously in favor of electing the aldermen by a general vote. This was shown by the fact that they had decided to elect their school trustees in this manner, being the second city in Canada to choose this system. He then gave facts to show how the system worked. The tendency was to get the best men out for municipal work. He thought that the time was not far distant when London would follow the example of Toronto and form a board of control.

The discussion was continued by Mayor Roger, of Peterborough, Mayor O'Halloran, of Brantford, and Ald. Latimer, of Winnipeg, who said that the ward system was in vogue there and was quite satisfactory.

Ald. Stevely said that having sat in the council both under the old and the new systems he thought the general system was decidedly the best. It did away with the house to house canvasing which used to prevail when the elections were made by wards. He also thought that the interests of the city were much better served by it.

Ald. Wyatt pointed out that one advantage of the general system of election was that the money available for city improvements was better distributed.

SPECIAL CIVIC CHARTERS.

Prof. S. Morley Wickett, of Toronto, read a paper on "Special Civic Charters in Canada." In the course of his address Prof. Wickett said that the necessity of amending the Municipal Act was inevitable. No one would deny that the Act at present is in very bad shape. He specially referred to Toronto's application for a special charter.

In the afternoon the financial report was read, showing a balance on hand for 1904 of $37.58, after various expenditures had been made. There still remains $844.72 of unpaid accounts. There should be a surplus, however, of about $1,500, when the special contributions still outstanding are paid.

MUNICIPAL INSURANCE.

Mayor Ellis, of Ottawa, gave some details of his scheme for the establishment of a Dominion Municipal Insurance corporation, the particulars of which have already been published. In doing so he said he did not think that there was any doubt as to the benefits to be derived from municipal insurance. The insurance rates were altogether too high. He was not prepared to say whether or not the Underwriters were exacting exorbitant rates. There was, however, a feeling

SOME UNIQUE ADVERTISING

Plans Proposed by Messrs. Lang & Maher.

Messrs. Lang & Maher, gents' clothiers and furnishers, propose doing some extensive and unique advertising during the fall fair season. Prettily lithographed blotters are being prepared, and neat combs of aluminum, within sheaths of handsome design, are among the souvenirs that will be presented to the people by the enterprising firm. It is also proposed to erect in conspicuous places a number of attractive boards relative to the merits of the Sovereign brand of clothing. It is evident that Messrs. Lang & Maher have an appreciation of the value of well-applied methods in advertising.

YOUNG MEN'S RECEPTION

PLEASING SOCIAL AFFAIR IN GEORGE ST. CHURCH.

Nomination of Officers for Young Men's Guild — Addresses by Rev. Dr. Crothers and Mr. F. H. Dobbin.

Last evening the reception held by the Young Men's Guild of George st. church was not as well attended as it should have been. However those who were present had a very enjoyable social evening. The president, Mr. Warne, occupied the chair. After an opening hymn and prayer there was an address from the chairman. He lucidly gave the history of the Guild and told of the prospects for the future. The objects of the Guild, he explained, were to get the young men of the church acquainted with one another and to encourage them to improve themselves by speaking in public. Mr. J. J. Jeffries then gave a very excellent reading. It was that portion of Ralph Connor's book "Black Rock" which describes the exceedingly exciting horse race. The reading was given with dramatic power and was much enjoyed by the audience.

Mr. F. H. Dobbin was then called on for an address. He threw some humorous side-lights on the St. Louis Exposition, and his impressions as recorded last evening were much appreciated. The fair occupied a plot of ground about the size of Peterborough, and the cost of construction was $50,000,000. Mr. Dobbin told of his visit to the Japanese exhibit, where he was much impressed by what he saw. He also related his visit to the Russian display, where he saw some wonderful furs. The German exhibit was characterized by thoroughness in everything shown. The imitation of Jerusalem was the abode of a numerous band of thieves who wanted to show the wonders of every conceivable place in Palestine. The speaker concluded his remarks with a description of the different locomotives which he saw there, illustrating the revolution made in the construction of the iron horse.

The pastor, Rev. Dr. Crothers, addressed the young men for a few moments. He said he heartily approved of the objects of the Guild, and thought that considerable attention ought to be paid by members of the Guild to athletic sports. "We must have manly games," said Dr. Crothers, "and we will have them."

The nomination of officers then took place. The election will take place two weeks from last night. Following are the nominations for the different offices:

For President—Messrs. Hutchinson and Robertson.

For secretary—Messrs. Mann, Wood, Turner and Craig.

For reporter—Messrs. Moore and Craig.

Hon. President—Dr. Crothers, by acclamation.

Hon. vice-president—Messrs. A. W. Crossman, F. Dobbin, J. J. Jeffries and A. E. Dixon.

Mr. H. R. H. Kenner was elected critic by acclamation.

After disposing of this business refreshments were served and a pleasant social evening was brought to a close.

MILLINERY OPENINGS ON

THE STORES TO-DAY ARE ALL SHOWING THEIR PRETTIEST.

Something About the Handsome Hats and Bonnets which will be the Vogue this Season.

This is a day of great importance to the ladies, and likewise to the several millinery departments of town. All of the latter are exhibiting the pretty fall styles in head-dress, and admiration is being expressed on every hand in regard to the magnificent window displays made by the several stores. There is a wonderful grouping of colors, and luxurious drapings that have been arranged in a manner that strikingly suggests the high standard of the decorator's art in Peterborough. Every department, of course, aims at the acme of perfection in design, coloring and richness of materials, and all bear the indescribable touch of genius.

Models and patterns of this season are all of a very attractive character. Brown and green apparently lead, closely followed by the reds, metal grey, and, of course, the rich black. Several models are shown with costumes, in the windows, and the effect is much better and hints are obtained as to correct combinations in dress and hat wear. Velvet and chenille, combined with silk are decidedly the latest cry. Silk, indeed, is most profusely used in shirrings, narrow pleatings and the innumerable deft touches so peculiarly the art of the milliner. Plumes and everything in feathers are good style also much foliage and some fur. There is a tendency to the large hat, but the small turban or torpedo shape is very popular. Velvet creations are very attractive in the new green tones which are much softer and verge more to the brown than formerly.

Foliage in the richness of the autumn colorings is everywhere and on everything. The Cosque de Roche is the striking new color, but the tones of claret, green and brown bid fair to be almost equally popular. In fact, the colors are unusually bright for autumn wear and are carried out in the richest materials and invariably show a blending of several tones running from deep to pale shades.

Crowns run to the small and high order, with steep effect at the back. Some of the models show the trimming massed on the side and front; rose con dress hats are often placed directly in front and are exceedingly popular as garniture, while Paradise plumes are also much in evidence. Large beads are to have much vogue on the black designs.

A Capital Contract.

The Colonial Ink Co'y of Peterborough has secured an order from the Daily Globe office for the supply of the fast press news ink required by the paper for one year. The contract is a large one, calling for about 10,000 lbs. of ink per month.

Police Court.

At the Police Court this morning a man named Parks was charged with selling tobacco to minors. A young lad swore to having obtained tobacco from Parks, and as a result the latter was fined $10 and costs, amounting in all to $13.50.

Edward Taylor was charged with having stolen from a traveller at the Balmoral, a gold watch, chain, and about $28. It appears that the traveller went on a spree, left the hotel with Taylor, and when he woke up was in his bed in his room at the Balmoral. Upon investigation he found he was missing his watch, chain and about $28 in cash. The case was adjourned until four o'clock this afternoon. Mr. Kerr appeared for the prisoner, and the prosecution was conducted by Mr. R. E. Wood.

ZION'S ANNUAL FESTIVAL

PEOPLE OF ST. MARK'S HELD ENJOYABLE HARVEST THANKSGIVING.

Addresses by Hon. J. R. Stratton and Mr. J. A. Sexsmith — Program of Music and Recitations.

The annual harvest tea and concert under the auspices of St. Mark's church, Otonabee, was held last evening, and proved a great success. The weather was perfect and many people were present from town. They added not a little to the pleasing sociability that existed, for on several other occasions have the people held these harvest festivals, and there has sprung up an appreciated acquaintanceship between the visitors from town and those who do the entertaining. One of the prominent features of the affair last night was the tea served in the basement of the C.O.F. hall, from six until nine o'clock. This did credit to the hospitality of the ladies of St. Mark's, and sustained the reputation which they have so long held for supplying an abundance of good things on occasions of this kind. Though the attendance was very large, the cupboard was inexhaustible in its resources. The tables were renewed several times and the tea greatly relished by all.

A programme of speeches and music was an equally appreciated feature of the evening. Rev. E. A. Langfeldt was chairman, and the opening number was an anthem by St. Luke's choir, "What Shall I Render?" This was given with excellent effect, and hearty applause indicated the pleasure of the audience. An amusing recitation, entitled "When the Minister Comes to Tea," was the very bution by Miss Jennie Weir, of Keene.

Hon. J. R. Stratton was present, and was introduced by the chairman as a gentleman who had shown great interest in the welfare of Peterborough, and one whom it was a great pleasure to have present. Mr. Stratton said he was glad to have the opportunity to attend such a gathering, and be congratulated the Rector and all concerned in what was undoubtedly a successful harvest tea. Many would be disappointed in the remarks he proposed making, because it was not his forte to create fun for boys and girls, although he was glad to see all enjoying themselves. The farmers, business men and manufacturers had a great deal to be thankful for, in the blessings of the past year. He referred to the bountiful harvest in Manitoba and in Ontario. Farmers and business men had their own difficulties and experiences, and very often were affected, sometimes disadvantageously and sometimes favorably, by conditions created by those of other countries. In 1813 the population of Ontario was very small, but after the breaking up of the armies in 1816, at the conclusion of the war, there came an era of rapid settlement, and from that time down to 1860 many families arrived from England, Ireland and Scotland. It was this foundation population which tended to make Ontario the premier Province of the Dominion. Consideration was given to the conditions created across the line, and the prosperity which resulted from the existence there of a ready market for farm products, in the 50's, and at the time of the civil war. There then existed a reciprocity between the two countries, so far as the products of the farm were concerned, and the trade that developed had great proportions. Subsequently the treaty was removed and with it the privileges enjoyed by producers. The McKinley Bill was passed with a view to protecting the people of the United States. It was at this time that the Western States were being opened up, and quite a large number of Canadian farmers, many being from Ontario, went thither to settle, but the passing of the McKinley Bill was a kind act for the good of the business men and the farmers of this country, for while the market in the States, amounting to about eight millions, was lost, there was created another with the Mother Land much more valuable, amounting last year to fifty millions. The people were far better off in having a British market than an American one. Ontario beef, bacon and cheese formed a large part of the total Canadian exports, and there was much to warrant the broad smile on the face of the agriculturist.

Mr. Stratton referred to the visit of the Archbishop of Canterbury as an auspicious indication of the growing prominence of relationship between the Mother Land and Canada, and considered as important the object of his visit—the creation of a closer union between the Protestant clergy of this country.

In conclusion he congratulated the Rev. E. A. Langfeldt upon the work he was undertaking, and the evident high appreciation of his service. He paid also a tribute to former Rectors, Rev. Mr. Bradshaw and Rev. Dr. Symonds. In the thankfulness of the harvest season he hinted that the fact should not be lost sight of that preachers were sometimes not paid enough, nor did school teachers receive proper remuneration for services performed.

Mr. J. A. Sexsmith, of Belmont, who will probably be East Peterborough's next M.P., was also present, and delivered a short address of congratulation. He had dropped in accidentally, he said, and was glad to have the opportunity of meeting the people of St. Mark's. There were, he agreed, a great many things to be thankful for, and he pointed to the pitiful condition of Russia in the throes of war, and with five provinces visited with starvation and famine.

Mr. Jos. Legg was enthusiastically encored in his solo, "The King," as was also Miss Weir, who again gave a pleasing recitation.

In conclusion Rev. E. A. Langfeldt expressed his appreciation for the assistance that had been given by the speakers and other friends, and referring to the large place Peterborough was occupying in the eyes of the world, mentioned the fact that a few days ago he had been called upon to act as interpreter in the visit of Germany's Minister of the Interior, who had been sent here to view the lift lock.

The singing of the National Anthem closed the evening.

The Viava System of treatment, in conjunction with physical culture and hygeine has long been known in Peterborough, but during the last few months, owing to the lectures given, a deeper interest has been aroused in this rational, common sense method of treatment, which has its thousands of adherents, not only on this continent, but in every civilized country of the world. A $40,000 STEAMER

To be Built for the Passenger Traffic on Lakes Simcoe and Couchiching.

The owners of the steamer, Elgin G. Lewis at Orillia, proposes to build a commodious steamer of large size to accommodate from 500 to 900 passengers. The new craft will be of the shallow draft type and a side wheeler. To the Orillia News-letter Mr. Lewis states:

"I will provide a boat that will weather any sea possible to rise on Simcoe, a boat that will provide all the comforts of the steamers on the great lakes and with a speed of fifteen miles an hour." As to what disposition he will make of the Elgin L. Lewis, Mr. Lewis said: "I will put her on the canal, where there will be traffic enough for twenty boats."

"Will the new boat navigate the Trent Canal?" he was asked.

"No, the Elgin L. Lewis is the only passenger boat on these lakes that could navigate the canal. The depth of the water will not only be too shallow, but the lift lock at Peterborough could not handle a boat anything like as large as the one I purpose building." Mr. Lewis thinks it will keep them busy handling the Elgin L. Lewis which is only 70 feet in length.

In answer to the query regarding a site for building Mr. Lewis said: "At the most favorable point on either of the lakes, probably at Jackson's Point, but most likely on this lake. That question I have not yet settled. A boat to answer the purpose I have in view could not be built short of $40,000. It will provide comfort hitherto not experienced on any boat on these lakes."

Burlington, Sept. 23.—A fatal accident occurred here last night when the radial car leaving here at 8.10 ran into an old man, George Knife of this village. The accident happened about three minutes after the car left the station. He died in a few minutes after being struck. The old man was deaf. He was a paperhanger and decorator.

Over the Border

"We'll take care o't, never fear," replied Traquair grimly.

The stalwart Angus dragged the man out, and the door was once more closed.

"I think we may venture to seat ourselves again," said Traquair, suiting the action to the word. "There's nothing more to be done, and pursuit is hopeless."

All sat down with the exception of Armstrong, who remained standing with his back to the door, gazing somewhat scornfully on the conclave.

"You will pardon me, Traquair," began he, "for you know I would be glad to forward anything you had a hand in, short of slipping my neck into a noose, but at that point I draw back. I'll not set foot on English soil now, king or no king. Man, Traquair, I wonder at you! The lot of you remind me of a covey of partridges holding conference in a fox's den."

"I'm not going to defend the covey of partridges, Will. But, after all's said and done, the danger's not so much greater than it was before."

"Do you think I'm fool enough to set face south when there is a spy galloping ahead of me with full particulars of every item in my wallet? Not me! It was bad enough before, as you say; now it's impossible. That is, it is impossible for me, for the flying man knows all about me. No; the proper thing to do is to meet at your castle or some other safe place and choose a man whose name and description are not in the wind ahead of him."

"It's not the danger, Traquair, as much as the folly that holds me back. I've been in many a foolish scramble before now, as you have hinted, but I learn wisdom with age."

"Will nothing change your decision?"

"Nothing—nothing in the world; not anything even you can say, my lord. Any trampling ass may break an egg, but, once broken, the wisest man in the kingdom cannot place it together again. Tonight's egg is smashed, Traquair."

"I cannot blame you; I cannot blame you," said the earl dejectedly, drawing a deep sigh. Then, turning to the others, he continued: "Gentlemen, there's no more to be said. We must convene again. Would tomorrow or the day after be convenient for you?"

It was agreed that the meeting should take place two days from that time.

"You are not angry with me, Traquair?" asked Armstrong.

"Not in the least, Will. I appreciate your point of view, and were I in your place I should have reached exactly the same conclusion."

"Then I must beg a bed from you tonight. I have no wish to stay in this place, and if you are bent for home, as I surmise, I'll just trot my nag alongside o' yours."

"I was this moment going to ask you, for I confess I'll ride the safer that your stout arm is near."

The company left the inn together, and in the middle of the road, before the house, they found Angus, with a torch, standing guard over a shapeless bundle huddled at his feet. The bundle was making faint pleadings to the man at arms, to which that warrior was listening with stolid indifference. The murmurs ceased as the group of men drew near. Traquair extended a cordial invitation to all or any to spend the night at the castle, which was the nearest house, but the others did not accept. Each man got upon his horse, and some went one direction and some another.

"Fling your lighted torch into the loft," said Traquair to Angus. "That will prevent this wolf worrying about his property. When you've done that, throw him across your horse and follow us. Has there been sign of any one else about?"

"No, ma lord," replied Angus, promptly obeying the injunction about the torch. He then tossed the howling human mass in front of his saddle, sprang into his seat and went down the road after the two who preceded him, the flames from the burning bothy already throwing long shadows ahead.

The Earl of Traquair, chagrined at the temporary defeat of his plans, inwardly cursing the stupidity of those with whom he was compelled to act, rode moody and silent, and this reserve the young man at his side made no attempt to interrupt until they had reached a slight eminence, whose the nobleman raised in his horse and looked back down the valley at the blazing steading, which now filled the hollow with its radiance.

"We will wait here till Angus overtakes us," he said. "This bonfire may collect some of the moths, and it's better traveling three than two."

"We've not far to go," said Armstrong, "and that's a blessing, for I'm on a long jaunt in the morning and would be glad of my bed as soon as may be."

"Where are you off to?" asked the earl indifferently, gazing anxiously down the road for a sight of his follower, who was not yet visible.

Armstrong replied with equal nonchalance, "Oh, I'm just away for Oxford to carry a message from Lord Traquair to the king of England."

"What!" cried his lordship, nearly starting from his saddle in amazement.

"Surely my talk before these riddles did not mislead you. I'll take your message through and bring you back an answer, if the thing's possible, but I cannot have these fools pottering and whispering in the matter. They must know nothing of my going. You will meet them two days hence, accept whomsoever they propose and let him blunder along to a rebel gallows. It will be one blockhead out of the way, and then wise folk can do their bit travels unmolested."

"But how can I send papers with him when they'll be in your pouch?"

"Indeed, and that they will not be. This night's work compels one to a change of programme. I shall carry no papers with me. If you let me read them I'll remember every word though they be as long as the Psalms. I'll repeat them to the king with as few slips as any man in the realm. If you have a password or sign, or if you can tell me some incident that only you and the king know of, which will assure him that I am from you, everything else will be plain plodding. It would be folly for me now that Cromwell's spy is on the gallop to carry a line of writing that bears relation to politics. I'll be arrested before I'm a mile beyond the border, so my chance of getting through will depend on the search they make. If they find nothing it is likely they'll let me go, and I must manage to get back as best I can. There's no sense in being hanged for a spy the first day I set out."

"Armstrong, you're a hero," said Traquair. "You shall read the papers tonight and look over them again in the morning. The important matter is to get the king's commission back to us. Ah, here is Angus with his sack, so we'll say no more until we reach the castle."

CHAPTER XI.

THE night after he left Traquair's castle Armstrong slept on Scottish soil, busy with his task of memory. Then he burnt the notes in the fire that cooked his supper. It was scarcely daylight when he faced the clear and rippling Esk, and after crossing the stream to "fell English ground" he halted his horse on the southern shore and cast a long look at the hills of his native country as one who might be taking farewell of them. Then with a sigh he turned to his task and sent no further glance behind.

Arriving at a forking of the road, both branches tending south, he paused and pondered. Which should he take? He knew them equally well. The main road led to Carlisle and in time of peace would have been preferable. The other, less direct, would probably carry him farther in these uncertain times. The country showed no sign of the devastation of civil war unless it was the absence of a population and a deserted condition of the thoroughfares. That he could avoid contact with the parliamentary forces was impossible whichever road he took, and the question now demanding solution was not so much his direction as whether it were well to bring on his inevitable encounter with the Cromwellites sooner or later.

The Carlisle route promised the speedier run into the arms of the enemy, but by the other route he would have more chance of bargaining about cattle and thereby giving color of truth to his statement that he was an innocent Scots drover, anxious to turn an honest penny. When questioned by an officer he could then say he had endeavored to deal with So-and-so, and later investigation would prove the fact. But to an observer he bore the attitude of a stranger who had lost his way. This was evidently the conclusion arrived at by an object hidden in the hedge which had proved his night's lodging. The object sprang out across the ditch with a suddenness that made the horse start and snort in alarm, to be soothed by the gentle pat of its rider's hand, for the imperturbable Armstrong seemed surprised at nothing that took place. The object had the wild, unkempt appearance of one who habitually slept out of doors. His long and matted hair, emaciated face and ragged beard, no less than his tattered clothing, or covering rather, made up of odds and ends of various costumes, formed a combination by no means attractive. He held in his hand, grasped by the middle, a long stick, somewhat taller than himself.

"My gay gentleman," he cried cheerfully, "will you pay the price of a fool's advice?"

"You haven't given me any."

"The advice all depends on what you pay for it. Let me see the coin, then I'll show you my wares. We differ in this, that I'll take whatever you give me, but you can take my advice or not, as you please."

The horseman threw him a coin, which the object clutched in midair with great expertness and examined eagerly.

"Thank you, gay gentleman. The advice is to turn your fine horse end for end and get back among the fools of your own kidney. We are always safer among our own kind."

"Are there any cattle for sale hereabout? I see none in the fields."

"I sometimes sell cattle myself," said the object, with a cunning look.

"It does not seem a very prosperous business, then. Where do you get your stock?"

"Oh, I pick it up on the roads. You'll find no cattle on the way to Carlisle. The country is swept bare in that direction. But I can lead you to a fine herd if you make it worth my while."

"In which direction?"

"Down this way. Come along. Are you after any particular breed?"

"No. Anything there's money in."

"You're just like me," said the vagrant, with a laugh, as he strode off down the unfrequented road. The object walked with incredible speed, laughing to himself now and then, and Armstrong was forced to trot his horse to keep up with him. On arriving at a slight eminence the guide waved his long arm toward a steading in the valleys, which looked like a deserted group of farm buildings, and said:

"I can see no signs of them."

"No, no! They're well stabled. Nothing lasts in the fields nowadays. They're not such fools as that. This herdsman knows when to keep his beasts in shelter." And with this the vagabond raised a shrill about that echoed from the opposite hills.

"What are you crying like that for?" asked Armstrong, without showing any alarm.

"Oh, just to let the farmer know we're coming. Always give friendly warning in these parts, and then you may not get something in your inside that's hard to digest. That's a fool's advice and costs you nothing."

John Tolmie, M.P., Defeated.

Port Elgin, Sept. 23.—The North Bruce Liberal convention yesterday nominated J. E. Campbell of Hepworth as the Liberal candidate for the riding in the House of Commons. Every municipality in the constituency was represented. The contest was between J. E. Campbell and John Tolmie, M.P., the vote of the delegates standing 83 to 79 in favor of the former. Resolutions were passed approving of the legislative and administrative policy of the Liberal Government led by Sir Wilfrid Laurier and Hon. G. W. Ross. The new riding of North Bruce extends from Kincardine to Tobermory. The Conservatives meet at Tara on Oct. 4 to select their standard bearer.

One Charged With Manslaughter.

Melrose, Mass., Sept. 23.—The death list of nine, resulting from Wednesday night's disaster, in which a well-filled car was blown to pieces by dynamite, was not increased yesterday, although six of the injured are regarded as being in a critical condition, and may not survive their wounds. The principal action of the authorities yesterday was the arraignment in court of Roy C. Fenton, the driver of the express wagon, from the tailboard of which the fifty pound box of dynamite dropped to be struck later by the ill-fated car. Fenton was charged with manslaughter.

Killed By a Train.

Huntsville, Sept. 23.—Miles Blundell, a farmer, 60 years of age, who resided in Stisted Township, was struck and killed by an express train at Brenner's crossing Wednesday night. His daughter, a young lady of about 20 years, was with him in the buggy, and is so seriously injured that there is but slight hope of her recovery.

Ontario Man Hurt.

Winnipeg, Sept. 23.—Wm. Doudie, foreman on the steel structure at the new wing of St. Boniface Hospital, fell from the scaffolding to the ground, a distance of 50 feet, yesterday at noon. His recovery is doubtful. Doudie has been here but a short time. His home is at Martintown, near Cornwall, Ont.

NORTH YORK IS VACANT

Hon. E. J. Davis Unseated By Chancellor At Newmarket.

Commissioner of Crown Lands Countenanced the Employment, As Scrutineer, of a Man Previously Reported For Corruption, Thus Ignoring the Law—Libonis Will Appeal, and the Personal Charges Stand For the Present.

Newmarket, Sept. 23.—Premier Ross' majority in the House has vanished. He holds office with the vote of the Speaker.

Chancellor Boyd and Mr. Justice Teetzel decided yesterday that Hon. E. J. Davis was not entitled to the seat he held in the Parliament of Ontario during the last session of the House.

The charge that he personally employed in his bye-election campaign William J. Robinson, a person reported by the judges as having committed a corrupt act in the North Grey election, was proven and the North York seat declared vacant.

An appeal is probable, as this is the first decision of the kind in Canada.

Can't Kill a Dead Man.

Mr. Blackstock asked leave to proceed with the personal charges against Hon. E. J. Davis. Mr. Aylesworth objected "You can't kill a man who is already dead."

On the suggestion of Chancellor Boyd, the petitioner agreed to the remaining charges standing until the appeal is decided. The Conservatives declare the evidence sufficient to disqualify Mr. Davis.

Mr. Davis does not necessarily lose his seat in the Cabinet. Both Hon. John Dryden and Hon. J. M. Gibson have been unseated, but continued in the Cabinet until re-elected.

Question of costs stands till after the appeal.

Chancellor Boyd's Decision.

The Chancellor, in giving judgment said that he and his colleague agreed in the result, though they might not reach it in the same way. This was not a case of disputed facts, but one in which, on the ascertained facts, it was necessary to apply the act to, and if there was an omission of the act. It was quite true that there was no crime or immorality attached to what had been done. Robinson appeared in the riding on the 11th of February, was found taking a prominent part in looking over the voters' lists, engaged in telephone messages, arranged for meetings, and distributed bills. "He was hand and glove with the Chairman of that section," said His Lordship, "doing various kinds of activities, and at work at the time from February 11 or 13 to the day of polling. He was not disturbed, but went on doing work in that conspicuous way, in charge of Sutton.

Charity As An Agent.

"I think that it clearly establishes agency of a prominent character. As I understand the English cases, the personal engagement is not in writing, but where the candidate is in personal touch with the man. The candidate here unquestionably knew Robinson, was introduced to him, knew he was an active man, participated in the benefit of the labors he was engaged in, and, knowing he was in charge of Sutton, and being in conference with him, there was that personal element in it, and seems to show that on the whole case there was a personal engagement of this man as agent."

Davis Had Notice.

Taking up the next question of personal knowledge of Robinson having been reported for corrupt acts, the Chancellor reviewed the evidence, and went on: "On this evidence Mr. Davis had notice, not only notice, but personal knowledge, of the facts which are the main facts here. He knew of the controversy in North Grey, and that the one charge on which the case was decided was this of the hiring of a rig. Mr. Davis is not singular in believing that was an illegal act, but not a corrupt practice. Many lawyers have made that mistake. It is not proven a corrupt act, but the provision of the act is that it shall be deemed to be a corrupt act. It is not to be wondered at that Mr. Davis should make this mistake, but the error [illegible] made, though freeing him from moral culpability, does not free him from legal responsibility. He must have known there was a judgment, and that the act Robinson was guilty of was a corrupt one under the statute, one which the judges were bound to report, and which they did report.

Told By Lennox.

"He might have satisfied himself by inquiry from the proper source which was right, in their recollection. But, getting the confirmation of Mr. Lennox, who, as a lawyer, might be expected to have knowledge, he went on without taking the trouble of making inquiry. On the next day, after he had heard this from Mr. Lennox, he made this appointment of him as his election agent. It seems to me the statute is aimed at this, the employment in an election as an agent by either candidate of persons who have broken the election law. This is one of the punishments attached to the man guilty of corrupt practices, that they are not considered competent to be agents in an election, and that if a candidate employs him, is in personal touch with him, is aware of this incompetency, the consequence is that his election is void. It seems to me that Mr. Davis was aware and had reason to be aware that Robinson was not a proper person to employ. I do not know that a private letter spoken of by Mr. Aylesworth, would be more potent than public notice."

Davis Should Have Investigated.

"No doubt there is much wild speaking at the election meetings, but after Mr. Lennox made his statement at the very place where the man was acting, one would have thought it reasonable that steps should be taken to ascertain the truth of it. Mr. Davis seems to have relied on his own recollection that Robinson's act in North Grey was only an improper act and not a corrupt act, but unfortunately the statute made it so. Still, he was aware of the essential facts, and could easily have satisfied himself of the others.

Responsible For Act.

"Then we have this appointment of Robinson as a scrutineer. I cannot agree with Mr. Aylesworth that this is a matter of blank paper. It seems to me he is responsible for whatever name is put in there in the document he has signed. The signing cannot be passed over as a mere form. The law requires an appointment in writing, and if a candidate fills up an appointment in blank he is responsible for the name put in. According to the very latter of the statute, there was a very personal engagement of this man Robinson as an agent in the election. To my mind there was more than that; there was personal knowledge of the agency of Robinson preceding and a retention of him in that position, as agent in charge of Sutton, and the adding to his duties by this appointment of the 19th of February to act as scrutineer.

Regrets Result.

There is no doubt that the personal engagement preceded knowledge of the incompetency, but the moment knowledge of incompetency came to the notice of Mr. Davis the personal engagement attached with the meaning of the statute. I regret the result that in a constituency where there was so large a majority as 449 the election should be affected by a transaction of this kind in which there is not any moral culpability. It was an insiderate act, but I see no way or escape from the consequences of the action my opinion the result is that the election is void because of that."

SUPREME COURT TO SAY.

Does the Net Income of the C.P.R. Exceed 10 Per Cent?

Ottawa, Sept. 23.—(Globe Special.)—The Supreme Court at its coming term will hear argument as to whether the net income of the C.P.R. Company exceeds 10 per cent. per annum of profit upon the capital actually expended in the construction of the line. Upon the determination of this question rests the issue as to whether or not there shall be Government control of rates. Under its charter the company is freed from Government control of rates until its net increase reaches the amount stated. As to whether his stage has been reached in the company's finances there is a difference of opinion between the Minister of Justice and the officers of the company, and it was thought that a judicial determination of the questions involved would materially assist in arriving at an understanding of the mutual rights of the Government and the company and the obligations or liabilities of the company in this behalf.

Northwest Legislature Opens.

Winnipeg, Man., Sept. 23.—At the opening of the Northwest Legislature yesterday the speech from the throne was of a formal nature. It expressed thankfulness for the continuance of prosperity, declared that throughout the greater part of the territories the harvest is bountiful and referred in eulogistic terms to the visit of Lord and Lady Minto. The Government did not propose to introduce legislation on any large public question, and it was a matter of gratification that the private bills to be promoted indicated the forward march of the territories. Regret was expressed that the movement for their establishment on a provincial basis had not been materially forwarded during the past year.

TORONTO LIVE STOCK.

Receipts of live stock at the city market from all sources since Tuesday were the largest of the season, amounting to 152 car loads, consisting of [illegible] cattle, 1217 hogs, 1000 sheep and lambs, with 160 veal calves.

The general opinion amongst the leading butchers expressed on the market was that they never at any time saw as fine good to choice cattle for sale, considering the [illegible] season. Many of them were of the [illegible] order, there were short-legged [illegible] that were not half fat to be [illegible], while others were as plentiful. George Rowntree, buyer for the Harris Abattoir Company, reported having bought 250 cattle and out of the number there were only 20 that he classed as good to choice, for which he paid from $4.60 to $4.80 per cwt. This shows that choice butchers' were not any lower in price. The bulk of the butchers' cattle sold from $3.25 to $4.70 per cwt. Choice picked lots of butchers' cattle, weighing from 1050 to 1150 lbs. each, sold at $4.60 to $4.80 per cwt.; loads of fair to good at $3.90 to $4.20; medium at $3.50 to $3.80; common butcher cows, at $3 to $3.40; inferior rough lots, at $2.50 to $3, and canner bulls and old worn-out cows at $1.35 to $1.60 per cwt. It will be seen by the many sales quoted that there were comparatively few loads or lots that sold at $4 per cwt. and over.

The export trade and exporter wants is in full swing and there was a good demand for choice cattle. The leading exporters [illegible] for export cattle have commenced to [illegible] the scarcity of the leading [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

FRIDAY, SEPT. 23, 1904.

REVIEW OF THE MARKETS

The following review of to-day's market was received by Messrs. W. F. Dever & Co., 'phone 416:—

Chicago, Ill., Sept. 23—Wheat opened steady about last night's close. Spencer Denniston and Valentine were best sellers. A. J. White, Logan and Pringle lead the buying. There was considerable backing and filling during the day. The problem now is whether or not the process of liquidation has gone far enough to warrant buying in confident expectation of an upward turn. There are some reasons for thinking that the upward turning point is not far off, if it be not here now. It will not take long for the trade to realize that a good crop outturn in numerous spots in the N.W. is not inconsistent with the report sent in by the crop experts who have examined the situation and reported on it as a whole, that the crop is very nearly on the non-export basis, deficiency or surplus of a few millions being about equally probable, so far as can be ascertained at this writing, and that the importing countries, altogether, have a far greater aggregate of deficiency than they had a year ago. When these conditions are once understood by the traders, they will immediately seize a favorable opportunity to put wheat up. Its good buying on all breaks as has been proven this past week.

Oats, firm about last night's prices. J. H. Wrenn was a fair buyer. Sealpers were best sellers. Volume of trade small. Provisions are quiet but firm. There seems to be a pause in speculative demand, with the cash trade excellent. Cash lard 65 cts. over Oct., and loose lard Oct. price. This shows a remarkably bullish situation. Local stocks of lard, in fact stocks everywhere, are being reduced.

Brevities

—The Bobcaygeon team came nearly missing their train yesterday. They had to sprint to the station in their baseball uniforms, carrying their everyday clothes.

—The track on the Jamison Park route is nearly finished. Both extremities are completed, but a portion in the middle is yet to be laid, the putting in of a sewer on Park st. hindering the work.

—The Toronto News says: "The Mayor of Peterborough says the election of aldermen by a general vote has produced better representatives in the Council. That has been the experience in nearly every place where it has been tried. The larger the constituency the more difficult it is for the small man and the clique to succeed."

—The following report comes from Gardon Hill: The surveyors are now here and will be in this region for some time. There will be very little excavating to do if the usual curves by Gardon Hill, because there is a gradual fall nearly all the way from Rice Lake and it will pay for itself by being well fed by streams and the fact that it is in touch with a wealthy country around Gardon Hill and also near Bilmbatbville.

—Kennedy's meat market will, commencing on Saturday, and until further notice, give with every cash purchase to the amount of 50c or over, at their store, free, one adult or two children's street car tickets. The purchasers to deliver their own goods. This is a distinct advantage to shoppers, as the free trip down town can be devoted to general business as well, and the fatigue of walking avoided. Kennedy's are the first to inaugurate this idea and deserve credit for the enterprise shown.

T.A.S. BEAT 'CAYGEONITES

A CLOSELY CONTESTED GAME IN WHICH THE SCORE WAS 6-3.

Another Win for Total Abstainers Which Gives them Championship —The Season's Record.

The T.A.S. ball team won the championship of the Kawartha League by a 6—3 victory over Bobcaygeon yesterday afternoon. The game was fairly well attended, and was a good exhibition of ball, the fielding on both sides being pretty clean. Callaghan had a very busy time on third, but managed to attend to pretty nearly everything that came his way. Quinlan pitched fine ball, and the team from the north could do little with his offerings. Fitzgerald gave him good support behind the bat, and gathered in a couple of nice fouls. For Boycaygeon, Kelly, at short, was undoubtedly the star. He captured several difficult flies, and made some nice pick-ups of hard grounders. Derocher and Latremouille carried off the batting honors. The former was four times to bat, got three hits and made four runs. He has batted well all season but excelled himself yesterday. Latremouille contributed a beautiful three-bagger to right field.

Following is the game by innings:

First Innings.— Bobcaygeon went first to bat. Welsh's grounder to third was taken care of by Callaghan. Lacombe fanned, but got to first on Fitzgerald's miss of the third strike. He stole second and third. Cameron made three successive outs in the ozone. Kelly singled, and Lacombe crossed the rubber with the first run. Johnson struck out.

For the locals, Callaghan's fly to left was fatal; Sheehan gathered in Trainor's pop-fly. Fitzpatrick bunted along the third base line, and romped around to third on Cameron's high throw to first. Grady's best was a fly to second. Score 1—0.

Second Innings—Sheehan went out on a hit to Callaghan. Trainor made a nice pick-up of McIntyre's grounder, and Junkin couldn't make connections with the ball.

Derocher was safe on a slow hit to Kelly and stole first and second. Latremouille couldn't furnish the goods; Quinlan's single to right field brought Derocher in. Fitzpatrick went out, Lacombe to Johnson; Craig's grounder to the pitcher was fatal. Score 1—1.

Third Innings—Wright's foul fly to Callaghan was in the well. Welsh's grounder to third was also disposed of by Callaghan and Lacombe could not see Quinlan's curves.

For the T.A.S. Callaghan was out, hit by a batted ball. Trainor singled, stole second and third, but was left there as Fitzpatrick's attempt to bunt resulted in a foul to the catcher, and Grady went out on a grounder to the pitcher. Score 1—1.

Fourth Innings—Callaghan made a nice stop of Cameron's grounder; Kelly went out on a hit to Trainor; Johnson was presented with a complimentary to first, and stole second and remained there. Sheehan striking out.

Derocher reached first on an error of the short stop's and made the circuit on Latremouille's nice drive to right for three sacks. Quinlan sacrificed, scoring Latremouille. Fitzgerald and Craig went out on flies to second and first respectively. Score 1—3.

Fifth Innings— Fitzgerald made a nice catch of McIntyre's foul; Junkin cakewalked, but was caught at second on Fitzgerald's perfect throw. Wright fouled to Fitzgerald, and it was certainly Fitzgerald's innings.

Callaghan went out on a grounder to Johnson; Trainor missed three, and Fitzpatrick's fly to left field was captured. Score 1—3.

Sixth Innings—Welsh got a pretty single to centre; Quinlan threw to first to catch him off the cushion, but the throw was wild and the runner made the grade to second. Trainor's error gave Lacombe a life. Cameron fanned; Kelly sacrificed, scoring Welsh; Johnson's hit scored Lacombe, tying the score. Callaghan gathered in Sheehan's fly.

For the T.A.S. Grady flew out to Lacomb; Derocher singled to right field, stole second, and scored on a passed ball; Latremouille and Quinlan were easy outs. Score 3—4.

Seventh Innings—McIntyre fell a victim to Quinlin's headers; Callaghan gathered in Junkin's pop-fly; Latremouille dropped Wright's drive, after a good attempt; Welsh beat out a slow one to Callaghan; Wright started to walk in his sleep, and woke up half way between home and third. He was easily cornered and put out by Fitzgerald.

For the T.A.S. Craig hit out to third and was safe. Johnson dropping the throw, and the runner advanced to second on Johnson's low throw to first cushion; Callaghan sacrificed, moving Craig to third; Trainor's fly was gathered in by Kelly, and in an attempt to make a double the latter threw low to third, Craig scoring on the play; Fitzpatrick made first on a grounder, but Grady went out on a hit to the pitcher. Score 3—5.

Derocher made a nice single over second; Latremouille's sacrifice to second advanced Derocher; Quinlan's fly was captured by Kelly; Fitzgerald's hit to the pitcher was fumbled and Derocher scored. Fitzgerald was caught at second. Score 3—6.

Ninth Innings—Johnson was an easy victim; Sheehan and McIntyre angled to centre and right respectively. It looked as if there would be something doing, but Junkin popflied to Grady and Wright's fly to Callaghan ended the game. Score, 3—6.

The T.A.S. have played good ball all season, and won the pennant on their merits. They have won five and lost one in actual playing, and have won 2 by default, making their league standing won 7 and lost one, giving them a percentage of .878. They defeated the Auburns by 6—3 in the first game on the Oval, then journeying to Fenelon Falls, trimming the team of that place by 6—4. Following this they defeated Lindsay here be a score of 20—6 and did up the Auburns on July 9 by 5—4. Lindsay and Fenelon Falls defaulted, giving the T.A.S. two more games. Then the team met with their only defeat in a league game this season, being turned down at Boycaygeon by 6—4. Yesterday's victory made their seventh and won them the pennant. Of the team six players figured in the Shamrock's runners in last year's City League. These were Quinlan p, Fitzgerald c, Trainor 1b, Craig ss, Callaghan 3b and Derocher right field. Fitzpatrick, centre fielder of the team, last year played with the Y.M.C.A. team, champions of the City League. A. Latremouille, left field, and H. Latremouille, catcher, figured on Toronto teams last season, while Grady, manager and second baseman, has been a prominent local baseball player for many seasons. A complimentary banquet will be tendered by the T.A.S. to the lacrosse and baseball teams, as a mark of appreciation for their gathering in of the Trent Valley and Kawartha League championships.

Mr. Dan McCabe umpired to the satisfaction of all concerned..

BASEBALL.

"Yebbie" Flaherty, the former local twirler, seems to have struck a soft snap for next season. He has signed with Winnipeg, for three years champions of the Northwestern League, composed of teams from Kansas City, Duluth, St. Paul and other western cities. The local fans will wish him success in his debut into professional baseball. The Galt Reformer has the following to say about the matter:—

J. M. Lamb, president and owner of the Winnipeg baseball team, who has been in Galt for some days, last night secured "Yebbie" Flaherty's and "Butt" Saunders' signature to contracts to play in Winnipeg next season. The stipends which these players will receive is stated in the contract, $125 per month, all railway and boarding expenses while on tour to be paid by the club.

While the signing of Flaherty and Saunders in such good berths for next season will be a subject for congratulation, it will also be one for regret.

Flaherty, while not a local boy, has made many friends during the baseball season in Galt, and he and Saunders have in no small degree attributed to the landing of the pennant of the Canadian League by Galt. Saunders will not be new in the West. Two years ago he played for Brandon. He is by long odds the best second baseman in Ontario to-day.

Manager Lamb claims that the Winnipeg team next year will be composed entirely of Canadians. His trip east has also taken him to London, where he secured a short stop in a youngster named Fleming.

Mr. Lamb expected to see Flaherty and Saunders work out in Waterloo Saturday, but Galt is not likely to play the two remaining games there.

RUGBY.

A meeting of the Executive Committee of the O.R.F.U. will be held in Toronto on Saturday night to adjust the senior series, as to give the Victorias a date in Toronto, without any clash with the Inter-Collegiate or the other O.R.F.U. teams.

The locals will have a big practice to-morrow afternoon and Captain Crowley wants to see every player out in uniform. There is nothing else on in the sporting line to-morrow and there is no reason why a rattling good practice shouldn't be had. Mr. A. W. McPherson, formerly of the local team, but who figured on the Varsity team last season, will be down from Toronto to-morrow to coach the players. Two teams will be chosen and a game played. There is a lot of work to be done yet before the season opens, so the men are not in any too good condition. The other senior teams are practising faithfully and the locals can't afford to be backward in this respect. Let to-morrow's practice be a good one.

Mrs. Rosa Adams, niece of the late General Roger Hanson, C. S. A., wants every woman to know of the wonders accomplished by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—I cannot tell you with pen and ink what good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did for me, suffering from the ills peculiar to the sex, extreme lassitude and that all gone feeling. I would rise from my bed in the morning feeling more tired than when I went to bed, but before I had used two bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, I began to feel the buoyancy of my younger days returning, became regular, could do more work and not feel tired than I had ever been able to do before, so I continued to use it until I was restored to perfect health. It is indeed a boon to sick women and I heartily recommend it. Yours very truly, Mrs. Rosa Adams, 819 12th St., Louisville, Ky."

Any women who are troubled with irregular or painful menstruation, weakness, leucorrhœa, displacement or ulceration of the womb, that bearing-down feeling, inflammation of the ovaries, backache, general debility, and nervous prostration, should know there is one tried and true remedy, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. No other medicine for women has received such wide-spread and unqualified indorsement. No other medicine has such a record of female cures.

"Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—I am very pleased to recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for womb and ovarian difficulties from which I have been a sufferer for years. It was the only medicine which was at all beneficial, and within a week after I started to use it, there was a great change in my feelings and looks. I used it for a little over three months, and at the end of that time I suffered no pain at the menstrual period, nor was I troubled with those distressing pains which compelled me to go to bed, and I have not had a headache since. This is nearly a year ago. I always keep a bottle on hand, and take a few doses every week, for I find that it tones up the system and keeps me feeling strong, and I never have that tired out feeling any more.

"I certainly think that every woman ought to try this grand medicine, for it would prove its worth. Yours very truly, Miss Elsie Danforth, 308 De Soto St., Memphis, Tenn."

FREE MEDICAL ADVICE TO WOMEN.

JAPS PRESS TOWARDS MUKDEN

A Big Battle is Imminent Between the Forces in the Field.

JAPANESE HAVE FOUR ARMIES ON MARCH

Military and Chinese Differ as to the Date Of the Battle—Japs Moving Towards Fu Pass Where, if They Gain a Position, They Will Render Patkin's Position at Mukden Insecure.

Mukden, Sept. 24.—Military authorities here continue to express the belief that a battle will be fought near Mukden within a few days, but, on the other hand, the Chinese profess confidence that active hostilities are remote. The war balloon was sent up yesterday southeast of Mukden, which seems to indicate that the Japanese are expected to appear in that direction.

How Japs Move.

St. Petersburg, Sept. 24.—A despatch received here yesterday from Mukden gives details of the Japanese positions as follows:

Gen. Kuroki has concentrated one army, with Bentsiaputse and Benzihu as its radius, and his advance is pushing forward along the road leading to Fushin and Fu Pass.

The advance forces of the other two armies occupy the Yentai Mines, the Village of Yentai and Sandaou.

The front of the three armies is protected by an outpost screen which Chinese are not allowed to pass.

A small Japanese detachment is moving along the left bank of the Liao River in order to protect junks.

The weather at Mukden is rainy and windy and cold has prematurely set in.

Nearing Mukden.

St. Petersburg, Sept. 24.—Gen. Sukhareff reports that the Japanese army is moving from Bentziapuse towards Fu Pass, six miles northeast of Mukden. The Hun River at this point is shallow and probably for this reason the locality has been selected by the Japanese for crossing. If the Japanese gain a foothold at Fu Pass, Gen. Kuropatkin's position at Mukden will be insecure as the Japanese will from thence be able to threaten the Russian line of communications. Fu Pass is only twenty miles north of Bentziapuse, but at the present rate of progress the Japanese will probably occupy four or five days in traversing it.

The Russian force south of Mukden is believed to consist of only one army corps, which is acting as a rear-guard and is not intended to offer a serious resistance to the Japanese advance.

When Resistance Last 19.

Tokio, Sept. 24.—An official telegram reports that fights have taken place at the towns of Tieling and Santungku, sixty miles northeast of Liaoyang, on Sept. 20. The despatch says:

"Our detachment advanced through Heimiuchang on Sept. 20 and attacked the enemy, consisting of one company of infantry, some cavalry and a machine gun stationed at Tieling, and a battalion of infantry, 500 cavalry, six quick-firing guns and one machine gun, stationed at Santungku, which lies eight miles north of Tieling. The Russians, who were driven off to the northward, left nineteen dead behind them. We captured some spoils. Our losses were very slight."

Final Struggle at Port Arthur.

Paris, Sept. 24.—The Matin's St. Petersburg correspondent telegraphs as follows: Telegrams, of which the general staff have as yet no knowledge, reached the Emperor at four o'clock this morning. I can affirm that they concern Port Arthur, regarding which place the greatest anxiety prevails at court. The Japanese are now engaged in a general assault, which is more furious than its predecessors, attacking the town on three sides simultaneously, and employing their whole forces, being determined to finish the business. Russian mines blew up whole battalions. General Fock especially distinguished himself, directing the fire from the wall, which the Japanese reached after indescribable massacre.

The Jap Fleets Aiding.

The whole of Admiral Togo's and Vice-Admiral Kamimura's squadrons are aiding the struggle, which, it is feared here, will be final. The besieged forces are fighting as in a furnace. A perfect storm of shells is falling on the town, port and fortress, from the whole hill and roadstead. General Stoessel is going from fort to fort encouraging the men.

CANTERBURY IN WRECK

Party Was Shaken Up But None of Them Were Injured.

Special Train Crashed Into Vagrant Engine While Going 60 Miles An Hour Near East Brookfield, Mass.—Archbishop's Engine Struck the Other One With a Terrific Crash and Demolished It—Four Hours Delay.

East Brookfield, Mass., Sept. 24.—A special train conveying the Archbishop of Canterbury from Bar Harbor, Maine, to Washington, was wrecked on the Boston and Albany Division of the New York Central Railroad, near the station here, yesterday morning. The Archbishop was not injured, although considerably shaken up. J. Pierpont Morgan of New York, who was also on the train accompanying the Archbishop, was also shaken up but not hurt.

The special, running at the rate of 60 miles an hour, was just passing the station when a detached locomotive, which had been drawing a train on the North Brookfield branch, ran on to the main line. The engineer of the special sighted a danger signal, but owing to the high speed of the train and the slippery rails due to the mist of early morning he found it impossible to more than slightly reduce the speed of his locomotive. The engineer of the branch engine heard the on-rush of the special, but he had not time to move out of the way.

Terrific Crash.

The Archbishop's train struck the North Brookfield engine with a terrific crash and demolished it. The locomotive of the special was thrown from the rails and landed across the eastbound track near the wreck of the North Brookfield engine. The cars did not leave the rails.

Rev. J. Ellison, the Archbishop's secretary, answered for those in the Archbishop's private car, including Mrs. Davidson, that no one was injured.

With the Archbishop, besides Mrs. Davidson and Mr. Morgan, were Rev. Hyla Holden and Rev. J. Ellison and attendants. It was rumored that a maid was hurt, but her injuries were not held to be serious. Traffic on the road was blocked for some time.

Canterbury At Albany.

Albany, N. Y., Sept. 24.—His Grace the Archbishop of Canterbury arrived here at 1.20 o'clock yesterday afternoon, four hours later than the time he was expected. After spending an hour here, the English Primate and his party left over the West Shore Railroad for Washington.

NINE CHILDREN DIE.

Outbreak of a School Turned Into a Vault.

Cincinnati, O., Sept. 24.—During the morning recess yesterday of the public school at Pleasant Ridge, about 20 miles north of this city, a number of children lost their lives. When school recessed there was a playful rush into the out-house, which gave way, precipitating about 20 children into the vault. Nine dead bodies have been recovered. After nine dead bodies had been recovered and 12 children had been rescued alive, the vault was thoroughly dredged and drenched, the rescuers abandoned the search. Of the twelve who were rescued covered with the filth of the vault, half of them will die of poisoning. Several of the rescued have limbs broken.

Train Hit Dynamite.

Cumberland, Md., Sept. 24.—A wagon loaded with 19 cases of dynamite was struck by a Baltimore and Ohio fast freight train at a road crossing at North Branch, W. Va., near here, yesterday, and an explosion followed. The engine and nine cars were wrecked, and the track torn up for a distance of one hundred feet. Two men were killed, and several others injured, two seriously. Several residences in the neighborhood were demolished, no building for a considerable distance escaping damage.

Drove to His Death.

Toronto, Sept. 24.—Regardless of the warning cries of the watchman and a spectator, young Marcus Perryman, of 44 St. Clarens avenue, drove to his death at the Dunn avenue railway crossing yesterday afternoon. The victim was the 16-year-old son of T. Perryman, grocer, and has for the past month been delivery boy for James N. Caesar, grocer, 1410 West Queen street. As the front wheels of the light wagon touched the rails the train was upon it. The young fellow realized his position and with a shriek leaped toward the engine, vainly throwing up his arms, as though to ward off a blow. The boy, with his skull fractured, and right arm broken, lay limply on the lodge of the cow-catcher, and in this position was carried to the South Parkdale Station. In less than 15 minutes the victim was dead.

A Trolley Accident.

Toronto, Sept. 22.—The sudden grasp of a fellow passenger upon his arm caused Henry J. Hummel, 20 Foxley street, to lose his balance and fall over the back platform rail of a crowded street car last night. Hummel fell under the trailer and the axle striking his back, forced him along the pavement for a considerable distance before the car could be stopped. It was found that the left hip was fractured and that one of his ribs was broken. There were other internal injuries that render Hummel's condition critical. He Peculiar Mill Accident.

Woodstock, Sept. 24.—An accident occurred at the saw mill owned by F. C. Avey of Norwich Thursday. The governors on the engine driving the machinery of the mill refused to work and in an instant the fly wheel of the engine gained an unusual rate of speed, increasing the momentum of the machines with such force that cog wheels and shafts were smashed, and the pieces flew in all directions. Parts of the iron work twenty pounds in weight were driven through the roof of the building, and carried many feet. Blocks of iron were thrown as far as the Swarts Hotel, 200 feet distant.

Fireman Injured.

Toronto, Sept. 24.—Falling glass at a fire in the Goederham & Worts building, Corner and Front streets, yesterday, injured several firemen. Fortelius Appatnam of Bay street chemical, while descending a ladder, was struck on the head and sustained a scalp wound necessitating six stitches; Fireman Beasley of aerial No. 2 had one of his fingers painfully cut, part of the knuckle bone being cut away, and Fireman Dixon of the same truck had his arm cut, while several others received minor cuts.

Blew Out the Gas.

Guelph, Sept. 24.—About half-past one yesterday afternoon it was found that Thomas Crane, a farmer, of Puslinch township, about 50 years of age, had been asphyxiated in the Commercial Hotel. He blew out the gas.

Only An Accident.

Huntsville, Sept. 24.—At the inquest held on the body of Miles Rundell, who was killed at the railway crossing, near Huntsville, on the 20th inst., the verdict of the jury was that the deceased came to his death by being struck by a G. T. R. engine attached to an express train. No blame to attached to the Grand Trunk Railway Company or any of its employes.

Mechanics, Allied Mechanics and Blacksmiths of C.P.R. Involved.

Winnipeg, Sept. 24.—The whole question of increases in wages to mechanics employed on the western lines of the C.P.R. seems to have reached a crisis. In addition to the ultimatum presented by the machinists Thursday morning to the company, the allied mechanics and the blacksmiths have taken a similar stand and notified the Canadian Pacific Railroad that unless some definite result is reached in their negotiations by this morning at twelve o'clock, they will go out on strike. There are about 10,000 men altogether involved in the agitation.

Tools Trays of Diamond Rings.

Ottawa, Sept. 24.—S. McMillan's jewelry establishment on Sparks street was robbed Thursday of $10,000 worth of diamond rings, pendants, etc. The firm believes that the theft was perpetrated while one of the clerks left the diamond counter to get a purse out of the window. The enterprising thief lifted the diamond tray out of the show case, and, after settling for the purse, walked off with both the purse and gem. The fifty diamond rings stolen were all engraved with the firm's name, and the police are on the lookout for a man about 40 year old, five feet eight inches in height, of ruddy complexion, and clean shaven, as the suspected thief.

—Don't miss the men's meeting at the Y.M.C.A. on Sunday at 4 p.m.

—It is usual on a wet day, there are two inches of mud on the crossings. Why they put it on at all, and why they do not take it off when it becomes a nuisance, are among the municipal problems.

That is about the ratio. About seven times as many persons are injured as die from all causes yearly.

Twice as many people are accidently killed as die of old age. Does it not seem reasonable to you as a business man that it would be to your interest to carry an accident policy?

ELECTORAL OFFENCES

In finding Pegg guilty of bribery in several cases in North York the judges took a position which we are sure reason as plainly stated before. Mr. Justice Teetzel who delivered the judgment said:

"As to the Hinson case we do not think taking it by itself as an isolated case, as we are bound to do, and not bearing in mind the other cases, we see that it is a case of oath against oath, and we hold that the charge has not been supported and must be dismissed."

Chancellor Boyd in agreeing with the judgment of his brother said:

"As to Hinson, I think, as Mr. Aylesworth argues, that you cannot cumulate this charge. To my mind it comes up here as if there was only one charge. Pegg does not vary from what he said the other day. It is simply a case of oath against oath, with nothing to bear down the scale one way or the other."

Now is this in accordance with the law or with the practice of the courts? If so the sooner the law and the practice are changed the better. Is a judge to be debarred from using his common sense, to be compelled to ignore the evidence in the case, or to act at naught the real purpose of the enquiry which is to ascertain whether the respondent is really the representative of the electors chosen freely by them? It should not be the case of a corrupt man like Pegg being shielded from conviction of one of his crimes by the safeguard of criminal procedure, but an investigation as to the extent in which he corruptly vitiated the election. With due respect to the learned judges their contention that it was a case of oath against oath is utter nonsense. They were giving their judgment that Pegg was a briber and perjurer in several undoubted cases, yet acting on this conclusive evidence they say that his oath is as good as that of an unimpeached witness. Was it an isolated case to be treated as if there was only one charge? The evidence showed that it was part of a system of extensive corruption. Besides the three instances in which they were compelled to hold him guilty, there was evidence that he had paid or offered money to several others, that he had visited other electors evidently with this object in view, and that he was in charge of a district for this purpose, with another operator in the adjoining field. And all this cumulative evidence of organized corruption is to be negatived by his false oath which the judges held to be valueless in other instances. It is a flagrant absurdity.

Another result of this preposterous procedure is that they could not hold him to be an agent. Here is a man condemned by the judges as a scoundrel, a briber and a perjurer, a man who had no such command of funds of his own for corruption, a man who was vitiating the election by wholesale and on a systematic plan, yet the judges held that he was doing this "off his own bat." No one can doubt that he was acting as an agent for some one in his disreputable campaign. Do the judges think he was an agent of the Conservatives or of the candidate whom they have unseated for employing another election crook, holding his evidence in the matter to be false. If Pegg was the agent of the Ross machine had not Mr Davis confessed that he accepted the assistance of these outsiders, shutting his eyes to their doings as much as possible, with deliberate guilty ignorance?

If this is the law and the recognised practice there should be some more sensible method of ascertaining whether a candidate is duly elected as the representative of a constituency.

Lord Dundonald suggested that lads should drill half an hour a week for four years. The organs of Sir Frederick Borden say that this is militarism, conscription and all sorts of dreadful things.

A correspondent of the Toronto News signing himself "Independent Elector" maintains that both parties are equally corrupt, and that a new clean party should be formed. As a specimen of the method of implicating Conservatives he charges that they are responsible for the Sullivan gang from Buffalo.

Trinity College School must be careful or it will get into trouble. A report says: "A valuable addition to the staff of the school this term is Sergeant Southend to take the position of drill sergeant and gymnasium instructor." Ernest Campbell who has come from Here we have a foreigner imported to promote militarism and to lead away impressible youth. It is awful.

According to the Globe Mr. Davis has only been vaccated on a technicality. Is it only a technical offence to employ an outside election crook to run his election? He swore that he had no knowledge of this machine employed, the Globe didn't believe his oath. He is aware to half an knowledge of the rest of the machine upon whom he relied. Only two cases were investigated and in both corruption was proved Mr Aylesworth being very anxious, as in North Perth, to close the inquiry for fear of further revelations.

The independent Hamilton Herald says:

"Cap Sullivan and his promising son Frank naturally feel deeply hurt at the Globe's denunciation of "workers of the unsavory Sullivan species." "If what the Conservatives allege be true, then we have saved the Liberal party from defeat," says Frank. And that's the kernel of the whole matter. It is rather ungrateful of the 'fence' to denounce the thief as a rascal unfit for the society of respectable people. The Sullivans are no worse than the politicians who employ them, whoever they may be."

Some of the curiosities of the election trials are as startling as they are unsatisfactory. One of the most extraordinary is the treatment of the machine chief Sutherland. After reviewing the evidence and properly characterising the Minnie M. outrage Chancellor Boyd said: "It is very plain Sutherland was the organizer of the trip. The whole campaign was in his hands." And then the judges refused to report him for his crime, so that he will still be free at any further elections to repeat his nefarious work for Mr. Ross. If he had been reported his usefulness would have been destroyed.

UNFAIR TO CENTRE BRUCE

A Vile and Slanderous Insinuation by a Ross Lawyer.

The people of Centre Bruce as well as Hugh Clark have a right to resent the insinuation of Hartley Dewart, K.C., that the petitioner owed his election to corrupt practices. Mr. Dewart evidently assumed that no candidate is above taking advantage of corrupt agencies and that no constituency can rise superior to the appeals of corruption. The climax of the petition against Mr. Clark's election and the comments of the trial judges showed that corruption cannot always prevail over an honest candidate in a constituency which is determined to do its duty.

Hugh Clark conducted an honest campaign and the people gave an honest expression of opinion on the issues he raised. If, as is charged, considerable money was spent on behalf of the government candidate, all the more credit is due to the constituency which rewarded honesty in the face of corrupt appeals.

Centre Bruce is one of the bright spots in a province which has been shamelessly debauched to keep a discredited government in power. Hartley Dewart cannot by grossly misrepresenting the character of the by-election, detract from the praise which is the constituency's honest due. If there was corruption, it was Mr. Dewart's duty to reveal it whether he was able to prove the agency or not. In view of Mr. Clark's small majority of 40, a very few cases of bribery, though unsupported by proof of agency, would have justified the voiding of the election.

Mr. Dewart's insinuations are in line with the bill of particulars, which contained no less than 45 charges and implicated twice as many prominent men in the County of Bruce. These men were slandered by charges which counsel for the petitioner did not attempt to prove. A similar injustice was done to the people of Centre Bruce and their member, by Mr. Dewart's totally unwarranted reflections on what appears to have been a singularly honest popular verdict at the polls.—Toronto World.

How to Keep Well

The best efforts of the great physicians are now expending in finding how to keep people well and prevent serious disease. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food was prepared with this object in view. It is not only a cure for diseases of the nerves, but also a restorative to be used when vitality runs low and the weakened condition of the system invites attack by fevers or contagious diseases.

TRINITY COLLEGE SCHOOL

Although Number Attending is Large, there is Room for More.

The Port Hope Times says: A report was published in the Toronto papers last week to the effect that Trinity College School is now over-crowded, and that, in consequence, some of the boys cannot be accommodated in the school buildings and have to be boarded out. This is not the case. The attendance at the school is this term larger than it has been for many years, but there is plenty of room in the building for all the boys and there is still room for more.

Last term there were 168 boys at the school. Many of these have left and are now at the university, but this term there are nearly 60 new boys and the total number at the school has increased to over 130.

The prosperity which the school enjoyed under Dr. Symonds is under Dr. Rigby, continued and augmented, and the prospects for the future are extremely bright. The reputation of the school to-day stands at least as high as in its palmiest days, and the continuous and substantial increase in the number of boys is most gratifying.

A valuable addition to the staff of the school this term is Sergeant Campbell, who has come from Scotland to take the position of drill sergeant and gymnasium instructor.

FARMERS IGNORE ACCOUNTS

Not Inclined to Keep Books Recording their Profits and Losses.

Drovers' Journal: It is almost proverbial that farmers and stockmen pay very little attention to accounts that might inform them of their profits and losses in their crop and feeding undertakings. Were we to make a close investigation it is not probable that one man in a hundred would be found who could tell in detail the cost of a field of corn or the expense incurred in fitting a load of cattle for market. The only reason that we can see for this condition of affairs is the fact that the average farmer has a marked antipathy against the slight inconvenience that might be incurred in keeping useful records.

It is interesting to note that one of the most serious complaints made by the representatives of the department of commerce and labor in their investigations of meat conditions, both in Chicago and at the feeding establishments of meat producers, is that there is practically no means of getting accurate information of the feeders' expense in producing marketable live stock. That this is true is due entirely to the fact that farmers and feeders, as a class, keep no account of their operations, so that from a standpoint of accuracy they have but a faint idea whether the work has netted them profit or loss.

While this custom may be satisfactory to the mass of farmers and feeders, the plan does not meet the expectations of the man who is feeding and wants to know definitely his profits or losses. Knowing the cost it is a comparatively easy matter to eliminate features that are not paying.

The business methods of the producer and the packer should be along the same lines as far as it is possible to make them. The latter can tell within a few cents what his profit or loss has been on a given load of live stock, but probably the farmer could not come within a hundred dollars of what that feeding cost him, and even then his information might be scarcely better than a guess.

For a year or more there have been loud complaints of feeding stock at a loss. Not long ago a leading breeder and feeder stated that feeding in general had been done at a loss for upward of a score of years, but that now feeders were awakening to the real condition of things. Be this as it may there is but a very small per cent. of farmers or feeders who can tell how much a certain crop or load of cattle had actually netted them. Business methods and principles should be employed in conducting the farm and feeding operations.

The day of operations for piles is past for all who know of the efficiency of Dr. Chase's Ointment as a cure for this horrible ailment. It doesn't matter what form of piles you have, so long as you use Dr. Chase's Ointment carefully and plentifully, it will soon bring relief and cure. LAWYERS' LICENSE

How they Exceed it by Abusing and Slandering Witnesses.

Mr. Aylesworth forgot when he was working his batteries in an unprotected position, that he could not carry his sacred privileged with him outside the courthouse, and that once beyond the protection of judges he must fight in the open like any other man, trusting rather to his own ability and the strength of his cause than to ancient privileges and conventions. Whatever be the merits of the argument between Mr. Aylesworth and Mr. Wright, public sympathy will be with the latter. He was violently attacked when he had not the right to defend himself. His reputation was assailed, where, apparently he had not the right to reply. In coming to his own defence in a field where all are equal he can appeal to the sense of fair play, which is so strong a factor of civilized citizenship. He not only defends himself to some purpose, but he assumes the aggressive and finds several openings in the armor of his powerful antagonist, through which he draws the blood.

It is quite easy to understand why popular sympathy is with Mr. Wright; apart altogether from the merits of the quarrel. Lawyers are altogether too ready to abuse the privileges which custom and convention have given them in courts of law; judges are not always as considerate as they might be of the rights and feelings of private citizens. There is no good reason why a lawyer should be allowed more free play for his tongue in a court of law than any other citizen. Judges and juries are provided to deal with the wrong-doing. The courts are for the benefit of the public; they are maintained by the public for the distribution of equal justice to all. When Mr. Aylesworth or any other lawyer, great or small, is allowed to abuse his privileges in a court of justice, and to indulge in liberties of speech and action denied to other citizens equally as worthy, and as respectable, public opinion is liable to resent it.—Woodstock Express, Indep.

FARMERS PASSED RESOLUTIONS

They Will Also Pledge Future Candidates for Parliament.

At the afternoon session of the Dominion Farmers' Association recently in Toronto, the government was congratulated on the effective work accomplished by the Railway Commission. The resolution on the tariff declared that the association was unalterably opposed to any increases in the present tariff rates and that it considered the present rates unreasonably high. Being tolerant, however, it would not demand an immediate reduction, but would urge upon the government and parliament that when the time for a change did come it should be in a downward direction.

Resolutions were also adopted:

Favoring reciprocity along commercial lines with any people who may be so inclined.

Asking that the jurisdiction of the Division Court be raised to cover cases involving $500.

Reaffirming opposition to the granting of subsidies and bounties to railways and other private companies.

Commending the Crown Lands department for the forestry policy.

Regretting that Mr. Pettypiece, the member for East Lambton, failed to carry out his ante-election pledges regarding the equalisation of taxes.

Favoring the retention of all waterpowers as the property of the people.

That legislation be passed giving the farmer control and ownership of dairy and other farm products after shipment until they are paid for.

Granting local telephone companies the right to enter railway stations.

QUERIES TO CANDIDATES.

The following questions were adopted and recommended to local associations as proper to be asked all candidates for Parliament:

1—Are you in favor of the application by the Government of the initiative and referendum to cases involving large expenditure of public money?

2—Will you oppose or favor the granting by the Government of portions of the public domain or public money in the form of bonuses, bounties, subsidies, rebates, etc., to private parties or companies.

3—Do you approve of members of Parliament accepting free passes and then collecting mileage allowed from the Government? Will you accept a pass yourself and collect mileage?

4—Are you in favor of or opposed to an equitable reciprocity arrangement between Canada and the United States?

5—Are you satisfied with the tariff as it now stands, or do you wish an increase or a reduction of the same? Which?

6—Are you in favor of the Senate as it now is, or its reform, or abolition? Which?

7—Are you opposed to the giving or selling of public lands to any parties except actual bona fide settlers, and especially to the granting of large sections or blocks to private individuals or companies or syndicates for speculative purposes?

8—Are you in favor of the public ownership of public utilities?

9.—If elected, will you regard yourself as a representative of the people and the country or of the party that has put you forward.

10—Will you absolutely refuse to accept the assistance of any campaign fund secured from sources outside your constituency?

ADMIT CANADIAN WHEAT

MAY GO TO UNITED STATES FREE TO BE MILLED FOR EXPORT.

An Effort Being Made at Washington With that Object in View.—What is Proposed.

According to Washington advices, an effort will again be made at the coming session of Congress to admit wheat from Canada in bond, to be milled in the United States for export. It is pointed out that if the United States wheat crop for the present season does not exceed some of the current estimates, the milling interests will feel more than ever the restrictions which the Dingley tariff law puts in the way of their drawing on the wheat fields of Canada for their raw material to be manufactured into flour. It is at present possible for the millers of the United States to mill foreign wheat under the provision of Section 16 of the Dingley law for manufacturing in bonded warehouses, but that section is taken advantage of to only a limited extent owing to the burdens which it imposes upon the miller. He must either grind foreign wheat exclusively for at least part of the year or he must run practically two establishments, keeping his foreign wheat separate from the domestic wheat and keeping the flour made from it separate from the flour made from wheat grown in the United States. Further than this none of the flour and none of the bran or other by-products can be sold in the United States and the requirement that the by-products must be exported is particularly complained of, as it is often impossible to ship them in good condition to a remunerative foreign market. Two bills were pending before the House Committee on Ways and means in the last session of Congress that would give considerable relief to the miller if enacted into laws. One of these measures is the Lovering Drawback bill, which proposes to amend the existing law under which ninety-nine per cent. of the duties paid on imported raw materials may be refunded on the exportation of articles manufactured from the identical materials imported. This bill proposes to provide that an American manufacturer importing raw materials and exporting a finished product may obtain a drawback equal to the full amount of the duties paid on the imported material upon proving that he has imported and used a sufficient quantity of raw material to produce the quantity and quality of finished product exported. It would relieve him of the identification of the identical imported raw material in the exported goods. Under it the American miller would be relieved of the necessity of milling in bond and keeping his Canadian wheat and its product separate from his domestic wheat and its product. Upon exporting a carload of flour, in order to obtain a drawback of the duty paid on Canadian wheat, he would only have to prove that he had imported and used a sufficient quantity of raw material to produce the quantity of finished product exported. If a carload of the grade exported.

THE SEASON'S MILLINERY

THE VARIETY IS BEWILDERING AND THERE IS GREAT INGENUITY IN SHAPES.

What Will be the Vogue in Head-Dress this Season -- The New Colors Form Charming Combinations.

(Baltimore Sun October.)

One is bewildered by the variety of the present season's hats, and in the shapes particularly is ingenuity displayed. Often it is merely the odd form of the brim that gives distinction to a model, which may be simply trimmed. Orders are receiving their share of attention this season, and the newest hints show them extremely high, a decided change from the flat-topped hats that have been in favor recently. The Louis XVI and Directoire shapes are the season's novelties and they are fitting accompaniments to the gowns of the period. The effect of the high crown is considerably modified in some models by folds and bands of ribbon or tulle puffings or ruchings, a trimming that will undoubtedly have great popularity. With some of these picturesque hats broad ribbon or tulle strings are tied beneath the chin at a little to the left side as in stage-coach days; to the youthful wearer the effect is quite becoming.

A huge bird of paradise with plumage shading through brown to orange adorns a Directoire model of "cachou" brown velvet. Around the high crown are folds of taffeta in the same shade, and the brim is faced with shirred taffeta. At the left side sweeping towards back is the paradise bird. This hat is intended to accompany a gown of velvet in the same shade and the same orange tone should appear in the trimming.

A favorite shape is the medium-sized capaline with slightly drooping brim and high crown, and its smartest trimming is a puffing of taffeta or velvet around the crown, and perhaps a paradise feather at the left side. The paradise, by the way, is this season's most fashionable hat trimming, but its popularity is lessened by its cost, which will not permit its general use.

A modified Louis XVI hat is of champagne velvet, with three bands of dull green velvet wound about the high crown and a garland of exquisitely shaded pink velvet roses and foliage arranged on the wide brim. At the left side, where the brim flares high, is a huge rosette of the green velvet having a jewelled centre, and tiny buds hanging from tendrils fall over on the hair from beneath the rosette. In shades of green this model would be equally effective, with pink blossoms as a relief. Note, and additional beauty might be achieved by softly draping the wide brim with a veil of green gauze having a lace edge and arranging it in cascade fashion at the back.

Vivid colors and rather startling blends have been the striking feature in fashionable headgear during the summer, and many of the early autumn modes carry out this idea. Framboise (a raspberry pink), coq de roche (reddish orange), Victorian or "battle" green, mauve, "cashou" brown and purple in all its tones are the colors used in the most successful creations.

Brown is perhaps enjoying the greatest popularity, and is a good background for lighter tints. An attractive bronze-brown velvet hat is trimmed around the high crown with a turnade of tulle made of several breadths of the material in different shades of brown, and at the left side a natural-tinted paradise bird sweeps gracefully over the crown and flared brim.

A charming hat of similar shape was of black velvet and around the crown there were two plaitings of taffeta in odd runs, while a touch of rose in dull-toned pinks was arranged at the left side, apparently mingling the end of an ostrich plume in shaded pink that fell over the flared brim on the hair. This suggestion would be extremely modish carried out in brown and coq de roche or in dark and light green.

The new turbans show the crown quite distinct from the brim and in some instances they suggest the modified walking hat. Velvet, both draped and shirred, is used to fashion these models, and breasts, quills, rosettes and veq plumes provide the trimming.

The trimmed model of velvet with the brim of shirred silk is smart for the walking costume. To be correct, it must match the costume in color, or at least form a harmonizing contrast. An novelty in the trimming is made of changeable taffeta shirred over the frame; a huge rosette of the silk or of velvet in the predominating shade shows an enameled or metal button coming at the left side, holding up the edge of the brim. Another example may have two rosettes one at each indentation of the brim, and a wide bow arranged against the rolled-up brim at the back would add an attractive note. These silk hats will be smart in shaded reds, browns, bluish and greens.

The fur hats of last season have given way to those of soft silky appearance which so much resemble velvet, and they lend themselves admirably to the new shapes. Chenille braids, tabs, etc., are used in hats for general wear, and some pleasing mixtures are shown.

The flat, oval and circular crowns of the picture hats are this season higher than they were, and ostrich tips arranged all around and against the crown is a favorite mode of trimming. A long plume or the nodding Prince of Wales tips are sometimes at the left side, where the wide brim is turned up straight against the crown.

Nursery Windows.

Correct ventilation should be had from the top of the windows either by means of a wheel introduced into the upper window pane or by the construction of a transom, say six inches or more deep, which shall extend quite across the window and which may be let down from the top, making a V shaped opening, and not opened from the bottom like an inverted V. The latter would direct a current of air upon the heads of the occupants; the former would make an injurious draft impossible. The windows, where the position of these may be selected, should be at least four feet from the floor. Where lower they should be provided with bars or strong wire lattice or screens.—Harper's.

Care of the Mouth.

To keep the mouth cleansed and free from injurious acids and bad tastes rinse several times a day with a mouthful or two of baking soda dissolved in water. This should not be a strong solution. A teaspoonful dissolved in a pint of water is the correct proportion. This may be kept in a closed vessel and used as occasion requires. A conscientious use of this excellent cure will not only keep the teeth from decaying so rapidly, but will tend to harden the gums and prevent irritation around defective teeth.

Parisian Mothers.

"Parisian mothers take their children about with them to a far greater extent than did English parents until quite recently," said an observant woman, "and the result seems to be wholly satisfactory. The little girls grow up as perfect little women of the world and are not plunged into an unknown sea when they come 'out.' Thus they do not have to waste one or two seasons in learning how to enjoy themselves and hold their own in the fashionable swim."

Thin Women.

Lean and lanky ladies should avoid pickles and very salty foods. They should take a dessertspoonful of olive oil before each meal and should sip a big tumblerful of hot milk at night. A raw egg taken in a little wine before breakfast is also good. Plenty of bread and butter, cereals, potatoes. Moderate exercise, plenty of sleep, no fretting—this is a great trio for making adipose tissue.

Rest For Kettles.

I once had burned a nice white porcelain lined kettle so badly that it seemed ruined, and after washing it was set away. Two weeks later I investigated and found that all the burned layer came off in washing without the least difficulty. Since then I rest all granite as well as porcelain ware when burned, with good results. —Exchange.

MR. HILL HAS PROVED IT

Toronto Man Explains How he Gained Thirty Pounds in a Few Weeks. Remarkable Statement.

At 39 Fuller Street, Toronto, lives a man who claims to have proven beyond the shadow of a doubt that Dr. Leonhardt's Anti-Pill is the most wonderful remedy ever introduced. His name is W. A. Hill, and he makes the following statement:

"I was very much run down and had a constant pain in my side, which made life a drag to me. I fully believed my days were numbered but I was induced to try a treatment of Dr. Leonhardt's Anti-Pill and the results were marvellous.

"After a short time I found myself restored to perfect health and strength, which I am thankful to say I have enjoyed ever since.

"I have gained thirty pounds in weight since I commenced to use Anti-Pill."

Mr. Hill's statement is only one of many. No one has ever used Dr. Leonhardt's Anti-Pill without benefit

The Newest Card Cases

One of the latest decrees of fashion is that the card case shall match in color the costume of "milady." These can be easily and quickly made from velvet leather, and when lined with silk of the same or a contrasting shade, they look very pretty. The Review Stationery Department has a full line of velvet leather in the regular shades of brown, green, grey and red. The leather for the cases costs but a trifle, and it may have a design fastened upon it, or a pretty silver initial fastened on to make it more elaborate.—The Review Stationery Department. 3t

LATEST BEADWORK.

A NEW AND EASY KIND WORKED ON SINGLE THREAD CANVAS.

Many High Class Bead Bags and Cases Are Not Knitted, but Sewed on a Foundation—Special Design Paper—The Stitch—Pretty Designs.

Just now when bead bags and chains—in fact, anything made of beads—are so fashionable, it is gratifying to learn that all the elaborate bags and purses shown in the high class shops are not knitted, as is usually believed, but sewed, and, what is more, sewed in such a simple manner that it will no longer be necessary for us to gasp at the exorbitant prices charged for them. It is a very simple matter to knit a pattern in steel beads on a silk purse or even to string several colors on the silk and knit them as they fall, but who ever supposed that even a novice at fancy work could make a bag with shaded pink roses, green leaves and borders, all on the same six inches, and still remain sane? Nevertheless, it is a fact that it can be done, and, what is more, done easily, if the right materials are procured and a good pattern secured as a guide for the work.

The designs are all worked on the same canvas, cream colored or ecru, having single threads instead of the double ones used in cross stitch. This can be bought for 75 cents a yard and is a yard wide. The designs are always made on regular design paper, which is very simple to work from, each square representing one bead.

The design should all be worked in first, and then it is easy to fill in the beads forming the background, for these new bags and card cases are all solid bead—not a particle of canvas must show when the article is finished.

The design for the small bag is a good one for a beginner or one who has not much patience, being made up entirely of straight lines, with no shading. Three sets of beads are necessary for this pattern, the black being worked in green, the gray, broken bands on the edges in steel and the remainder filled in with white. Never cut the canvas the exact size to be finished, for in some design paper the squares are quite large, which will of course make a difference in the size of the bag if the pattern is arranged as on the paper. And after the bag is all worked half an inch margin at least should be allowed all round for the making up.

The beads are sewed on with a heavy sewing silk, and a short, fine needle is the best to work with. Take several stitches through the canvas to fasten the thread securely and, taking a stitch beneath two threads of the canvas, string a bead on the needle and draw the thread through; slip the bead down and take the second stitch exactly above where the needle came out and two threads beyond. This stitch must also be under two threads and, threading a bead on, take the third stitch as before, only below the second one and on a line with the first. This will make a perfectly straight line, with all the beads in a diagonal line. If the canvas is at all coarse, the stitch should be beneath one thread only each time.

This seems like a lengthy direction for a simple stitch, but if any one tries to work it out alone she will soon find the difficulties that beset her path. In the designs the colors for the pattern alone are shown, the ground being filled in any desired color.—Designer.

FOR PRESERVING TIME.

Formulas of Various Delightful Concoctions For Winter Use.

Spiced Plums.—For seven pounds of plums take three and one-half pounds of brown sugar, one pint of vinegar, one ounce each of cloves, allspice and mace and two ounces of cinnamon, putting the spice in a thin muslin bag. Cook slowly until the juice is a thick sirup.

Old Fashioned Tomato Preserves.—Take six pounds of fruit, five pounds of sugar, a bag containing two large tablespoons of ground ginger and cook till quite thick. Allow one lemon, sliced, to every quart can of preserves. It can be cooked with the tomato or sliced into the can as it is being filled.

Sweet Pickled Watermelon.—Cut the outside green as thin as possible, place pieces in a granite pan and sprinkle with salt. Let stand a few hours or overnight, then put in weak vinegar, or vinegar and water. Let stand until you can pierce it with a fork. Remove and drain. To seven pounds of fruit take three and one-half pounds of sugar, one quart of vinegar, cloves, cinnamon bark, a few mustard seeds and a little horseradish. Simmer to a sirup and turn over the melon.

Canned Tomatoes.—Scald ripe tomatoes and remove the skins. Place them in a large porcelain lined baking pan, as you would biscuits, and set in a moderate oven. Heat glass jars by filling with water hot as they will bear. When the juice begins to boil and bubble up between the tomatoes remove them from the oven, fill the jars and seal immediately. Turn the jars top downward overnight, tighten the covers in the morning if possible and keep in a dark place.

Green Tomato Mince Meat.—Chop fine four quarts of green tomatoes, drain off all juice, cover with cold water, let come to a boil and scald for thirty minutes, then drain well. Repeat till parboiled three times. Add two pounds of brown sugar, one pound of seeded raisins, one-half pound of chopped citron, one large half cup of finely chopped meat, one tablespoon of salt and one-half cup of strong cider vinegar. Stir well together and cook till thick. When cold add one teaspoon each of ground cianamon and cloves and one tablespoon of grated nutmeg. Stir thoroughly and keep (while it lasts) in a stone jar.—Cor. Good Housekeeping.

Serving Cucumber Salad.

To retain the proper crispness in a cucumber salad serve the cucumbers, thoroughly crisped in ice water before drying and dressing, on a glass dish set into a second dish filled with crushed ice. Or fill a salad bowl with crushed ice, make a depression in the center and line this carefully with the outer leaves of a head of lettuce, thus making a bowl that will hold the most of the dressing, and into this put the dressed cucumbers, as shown in the illustration from the Boston Cooking School Magazine.

Cucumber Pickles.

Two hundred small cucumbers, two pounds of sugar, three tablespoonfuls of white mustard, three teaspoonfuls of black mustard, three teaspoonfuls of juniper berries, four or five green peppers according to the size, and a pint of small white onions. Let the cucumbers stand overnight in salt water, then drain. Heat enough vinegar to cover the pickles, then put in the cucumbers and scald them, but do not let them boil. Drain off the vinegar and put the pickles in stone jars. Prepare a fresh vinegar, add the sugar, mustard, juniper berries, peppers chopped fine and whole onions. When scalding hot pour over the pickles. Cut up pieces of horseradish root fine and add to every jar of pickles. Cover with young horseradish leaves and invert a plate over the top of each crock, then tie up with old white muslin.

Corn Croquettes.

To one can of sweet corn add two and one-half tablespoonfuls of butter and one-quarter cupful of rich milk or cream; sift into the above mixture one-third cupful of flour, one-half teaspoonful of sugar, salt and white pepper to taste; add one egg slightly beaten. Cook, stirring constantly until thick. Turn the mixture on a plate, cool, mold into cork shaped croquettes, dip in egg and breadcrumbs and fry in deep fat and drain on brown paper.

A Simple Remedy For Sunburn.

A successful remedy for summer sunburn in mild cases where the burn is not painful is boracic acid, one dram; distilled witch hazel, two ounces; rose water, two ounces. Apply before bathing.

CLOTHES MANAGEMENT.

The Plan One Girl Follows to Insure Economical Dressing.

Perhaps my plan to manage my clothes on next to nothing a year may interest you and help some other girls. To begin with, let me tell you how one dress lasted me for three years at an average cost of $4 a year. I bought a soft dark india silk in the spring for a best street dress, for church and to wear now and then when I paid friendly calls. I made it very simply with tucks and a few stitched bands of taffeta, and then I were with it separate stock collars of imitation Irish crochet lace and a fancy high girdle belt of taffeta. The next year, when the folds had lost their first luster, I covered the worn edges with very narrow black gimp braid, and I used this remodeled dress for a business suit. Of course I had to shorten the skirt. That was the only alteration I made. For my evening dresses I buy each year two new ones, one of lawn and one of silk muslin, using them in the summer for my best dresses, and I easily make them do for two years. I put all my capital into the material and not into extra trimmings, as these are not necessary on a simple dress, the task of trimming them being accomplished by the effective way in which they are put together and the arrangement of the tucks. I spend about $16 for these dresses. This includes the dressmaker's bill. In a case where a girl can make her own dresses it would bring the cost to about $5 for each dress.—Exchange.

WEDDING PRESENTS.

Linen Is Something That Is Always Sure to Be Appreciated.

A writer in the House Beautiful has many sensible things to say on the subject of wedding presents. Every married woman remembers a number of absolutely useless or worse than useless presents sent her by her well meaning friends. One bride recently received no less than eight clocks. Her modest little apartment boasting only six rooms, kitchen included, she had to put away some of them, and this is embarrassing when the donors call. In the articles mentioned it is wisely suggested that some account be taken of the plans of the prospective bride. If she is not going to keep house refrain from sending her cut glass and china. Furniture will be a nuisance in a boarding house. Make the gift a personal one. A bit of old jewelry, a piece of lace, books, etc.; Russian brass jars, candlesticks or a samovar is sure to be appreciated. There are many delightful bits of porcelain to be had. If silver is sent, better let it be knives and forks, for the simple reason that nearly every one else will send spoons. Best of all, choose odd pieces, little pitchers and sugar bowls, tea caddies, strainers, nut and bonbon dishes. Avoid sending pictures unless you know the taste of the recipients. Linen is sure to be appreciated. No bride ever has too much.

An Ironing Hint.

When necessary to iron a rough dry garment at once try this method: Dampen, roll tight, wrap in a cloth and then in paper and put into the oven while the irons are heating. Evaporation will cause it to be thoroughly dampened in time, but care must be taken that the oven is not hot enough to burn the goods.

To Can Tomatoes.

Have a large kettle of rapidly boiling water on the stove. Wipe the tomatoes, fill a wire basket with them and plunge it into the boiling water until the skins begin to crack. Then plunge into cold water and remove the skins and the hard part under the stem. Mash thoroughly and let them boil quickly until soft, but not enough to evaporate all the liquid. Then season as for the table; to every quart allow one teaspoonful of salt, one saltspoonful of pepper and half a cup of sugar. Cook five minutes longer, then fill the jars almost full. Have ready some butter, melted, strained and hot, in the proportion of one tablespoonful to every jar. Fill to brim with hot butter and seal at once.

Whole Tomatoes For Winter.—Fill a large stone jar with ripe and sound whole tomatoes, adding a few cloves and a sprinkling of sugar between each layer. Cover well with one-half cold vinegar and one-half water. Place a piece of thick flannel over the jars, letting it fall well down into the vinegar, then tie down with a cover of brown paper. This will keep all winter and is not harmed even if the flannel collects mold.

Corn Soup.

Three cupfuls of finely grated corn, one quart of water, one quart of rich milk, the yolks of two eggs, one teaspoonful each of salt and sugar, one-half saltspoonful of pepper, one tablespoonful each of butter and flour. Boil the cobs in the water one-half hour, strain and pour over the corn, cook twelve minutes, add the milk, the seasoning and the flour and butter well rubbed together, cook for three minutes longer, watching well that it does not burn. Now remove the saucepan from the stove and add the egg yolks well beaten.

AN INSPIRING SERVICE

WAS THE HARVEST THANKSGIVING IN ALL SAINTS'.

Church was Beautifully Decorated and Music Added to the Pleasure of a Bright Appropriate Service.

Beautiful flowers, golden grain, rosy fruit and fat vegetables constituted the altogether effective decorations of All Saints' church last evening when the annual Harvest Thanksgiving service was held. The grain depended in festoons from side to side of the church and it swathed the uprights of a screen at the entrance to the choir surmounted by a cross and bearing the following words which peeped from an evergreen border, "Thou crownest the year with thy goodness." The fruit and vegetables and red berries had attractive place in the recesses of the windows, the flowers adorned the altar and the pulpit ,and the scene was indeed one most pleasing to the eye. The rector, Rev. Wm. Major, expressed his appreciation of the efforts which had produced this artistic arrangement.

The service was of a very bright character ,the choir contributing in great measure to that result. The rector was assisted by Rev. J. C. Davidson and Rev. E. A. Langfeldt. It was a very able sermon and withal most appropriate and containing many beautiful thoughts which was delivered by the Rev. Wm. Major. His text was Acts 14-17, "Nevertheless, he left not himself without witness, in that he did good, and gave us rain from heaven, and fruitful seasons ,filling our hearts with food and gladness."

In His great mercy and goodness, said the speaker, God has permitted us once more to publicly assemble and worship Him for His beautiful harvest. So plentiful is this blessing that we should endeavor this next year to manifest appreciation not only by our life but by our lives. Such a season as this demands our highest appreciation and thankfulness for God's faithfulness in the gracious promise, While the earth remaineth seed time nor harvest shall not cease. A thanksgiving service was indeed of the highest benefit to all participating and the speaker pointed to the fitness of a day which might be set apart annually for national praise to God for his great blessings. The regular Thanksgiving Day fell about of the object which its name suggested, it being largely given over to pleasure and selfish purposes. God's providences were so indissolably mixed with our daily lives that none would afford to ignore him in the slightest degree. In spite of this the question was often asked, why it was the Church of England spent so much time and money for just a few brief moments of expressions of thanksgiving. The speaker considered two or three reasons why a harvest thanksgiving service was always helpful. First, it tended to create a larger interest and appreciation of the works of nature. There were some people upon whom the manifestation of power, wisdom and beauty of the creation were lost. The Book of Job and the Psalms want to show that the highest state of Religious mind was that in which existed the loving, spiritual significance of national things. No whole-souled man could afford to be ignorant of nature's great works. The speaker explained the wonderful process of the growth of a grain of wheat, as an instance of nature's wonderful plan, and stated that an acre of soil, three inches deep, stirred and lifted by those tiny fibres weighed something like 500 tons. And all this process went on that humanity might have bread. The order, power, goodness and love so evident in nature, could not but depend upon the manifold goodness, love and omnipotence of God.

Again, a thanksgiving service was of benefit because it was a public confession of God as a living God, and anything which deepened their confidence in Him was of inestimable value to a community. True it was that there were those who were inclined to give all of the credit to those hardy men, who, it was claimed, had by their labor and suffering subdued an unfriendly world, but God had given the children of men this earth, and in order to win it they must work. All power, and the wonderful work of reproduction was, however, of God. The earth was full of miracles, and one of these was the seed which was self-productive—something beyond the power of man. are perfectly willing to thank our fellow men for what they have done for us, but we must not be unmindful of God who commands everyone, and is the eternal source of all things, said the speaker.

The harvest thanksgiving service should remind us also of the autumn of our lives, when we should have something ready to give to our fellow men. Will God find no wheat when he comes to reap the years of your life? We should be able to rejoice when we look at a man who has reached the autumn of his life having a wealth of the fruits of the spirit, rich in that confidence and faith, which characterizes him who walks with God. We should be so scattering the seeds of kindness that when the harvest comes it should result in the blessing and uplifting of our fellow men.

We should also remember, said the speaker, that while there is a season of production, it is also one of preparation. The harvest is past, it is true, but it is also time to plow and sow. The fall grain has been already sown, the miracle of the seed has already commenced, and the preparation made for a new harvest. Let us, in our beginnign, be actuated by the same spirit which moved our blessed Lord—who ,being made in fashion as a man humbled himself and became obedient even unto death. Let the sowing be such that when the springtime of God's paradise shall come we shall find nothing but the summer's fullness growing there. Let us strive to sow in such a manner that God may reap the benefit of the harvest from our lives to the greatest benefit of our fellow men who may be lifted up, strengthened and encouraged of God all through their life's journey; such a life that shall redound to the praise and glory of the great triune God in the heavenly harvest home.

The anthem by the choir, given in excellent manner was "Ye shall dwell in the land." Mrs. Reid sang the soprano solo very sweetly and Rev. Mr. Major also took a solo part effectively.

AMES—FRALICK

A Toronto Wedding of Interest to Peterboro Friends.

The following account of a wedding which appears in to-day's issue of the Globe will be of interest to the many friends of the contracting parties in town ,who will extend their hearty congratulations. Miss Ames has until recently been connected with the teaching staff of the Public Schools here.

"The marriage of Miss Adeline, Victoria Ames, only daughter of Mr. J. H. Ames of Peterborough to Mr. Obas Herbert Fralick of Peterborough took place very quietly at Brodway Tabernacle on Wednesday afternoon, the Rev. E. N. Baker officiating. The bride, in a simple grey travelling dress and carrying white roses, was given away by her father, and attended by Mrs. A. E. Watts, as matron of honor in cream and carrying pink roses, while Dr. A. E. Watts supported the groom. After the ceremony the party repaired to the residence of Dr. and Mrs. Watts, 560 Bathurst st., where, amid the fragrance of flowers, the bride received the hearty congratulations of her friends. A sumptuous dejeuner was served. Mr. and Mrs. Fralick left on an extended tour east."

HIGH COURT OF JUSTICE

HENRY CALCUTT IS AFTER $1000 DAMAGES FROM A CAPTAIN.

Lumber Lost from the Str. Water Lily — Dickson Company Makes Claim Against Contractor O'Toole —A Case Settled.

The autumn sittings of the High Court of Justice will open on Monday next before the Hon. Chief Justice Falconbridge. There are two cases, Calcutt vs. Cartwright, and Dickson Company vs. O'Toole. A third case, Moloney vs. Ryan has been settled between the parties. Following are synopses from the statements of claim:

MOLONEY vs. RYAN.

Elizabeth Moloney and Daniel Moloney, the plaintiffs, and Patrick Ryan and Michael Ryan, the defendants, all reside in Duoro. By indenture of 22nd of March, 1902, the plaintiffs demised and leased to defendant Patrick Ryan, west half of lot 10, Concession 7, Douro. He entered into possession for the term of one year from October 22, 1901, and covenanted to, before its expiration, clear up all swamps on the demised land and also on the east half of lot 10, Concession 8 Douro, and to carefully preserve all timber available for fence rails. Michael Ryan was also party to the lease and executed the same for the purpose of giving effect to a guarantee of payment of $150 in rent. The defendants had made default in the performance of the covenant wholly, and the plaintiffs' land sustained much injury and damage, having had to pay a large sum for the purpose of having the swamps cleaned up and the timber put in a safe place. The sum of $212.75 is claimed, and costs of action. The defendants state that of any portion of the clearing up had not been performed by Patrick Ryan, which they do not admit, the same occurred by reason of the unlawful entry on the said lands and the interference of the plaintiffs, their agents, or workmen, with the defendant in his farming operations and in the work of clearing up. They further state that after this Patrick Ryan offered to complete the clearing up as alleged, but the plaintiffs altogether refused to permit him to remain or enter on the lands. The extraordinary rainfall of the summer of 1902 made it impossible to clear up the lands as completely as desired. By way of counter claim Patrick Ryan states that during the currency of the lease, the plaintiffs' agents and workmen entered on the lands and plowed up crops growing thereon and broke open and entered the dwelling house, where he lost the crops and was excluded from the house, losing certain of his goods therein. He further claims that they broke and threw down fences and allowed their cattle and other animals to run over the property and to consume the crops. He claims $100 in respect of trespass, loss and damage.

D. O'Connell for plaintiffs. W. H. Moore for defendants.

This case has been settled between the parties.

CALCUTT VS. CARTWRIGHT.

Henry Calcutt, owner of a line of steamers and barges on the Otonabee in the plaintiff and Anson Cartwright a duly qualified captain or master, is the defendant.

In the spring of 1904 the plaintiff engaged the defendant as captain and placed him in command of the Water Lily. On or about the 18th of May last the plaintiff directed Cartwright to take with him all necessary assistance and to proceed with the steamer to Hall's Bridge, to tow from that point a scow laden with lumber, the property of the plaintiff, and to deliver same at Peterborough wharf. Defendant proceeded to carry out the instructions but conducted himself in such a grossly negligent manner that the scow was wrecked and the lumber lost. The plaintiff claims $1000 damages.

The defendant states that the towing of the scow and lumber was done under the orders and instructions of the plaintiff when the river Otonabee was in flood, and when the glance booms usually maintained for the protection of shipping at the locks dam were not in place, involving special risks well known to the plaintiff. The damage to the scow and lumber and the loss, if any, was the result of such conditions and not of negligence on the part of defendant who exercised every possible care. He denies any liability and by way of counter claim says he entered employ of plaintiff for the navigation season from May 1st to Oct 31st for $240, payable monthly, and board, as master. The plaintiff continued in such employ until a short time after the accident, when he was wrongfully dismissed ,thereby losing the wages and advantages which he would have derived from said service and deprived of opportunity for other similar employment. Defendant claims $200.

The Dickson Company are plaintiffs and John O'Toole, contractor, who during 1902 to 1904 was engaged in the erection of a concrete dam here, is defendant. Between November 1902 and June 1904 plaintiffs supplied defendant with certain lumber and timber and finished from time to time with each delivery invoices containing particulars of quantities, dimensions and prices. Payments were made at different times but on May 30th last there remained unpaid $362.47, which sum defendant, declined to pay, or any part thereof. Plaintiffs claim $367 and interest from August 23rd, 1904. Defendant admits that he purchased the timber refferred to and that he agreed to pay $20 a thousand for the same, which is 20 feet long. In plaintiffs' account the timber was charged at $28 a thousand, contrary to bargain, and the difference amounts to $367. Defendant claims he has paid plaintiff in full.

OUR TOWN COUNCIL

Has the Present mode of Election Given us Better Aldermen.

To the Editor of the Review.

Sir,—Mayor Roger made a speech the other day in which he said that the new way of electing Councillors gave people a finer Council than the old way, when wards elected them. Now, I deny this, for there is more dissatisfaction with the present Council than almost any I can call to mind. They have raised the assessment, and will find at the next election what the people think about it. Anyway, it is not a nice thing for the Mayor to praise the present Council when better men than any of them, and a credit to the town have been there. I have talked to a good many who think that Mayor Roger's statement for Peterborough is far from true. Why weren't the by-laws passed? It was because the people have no faith in the Council. It has not worked out well. The defeat of the by-laws should be "a vote of want of confidence" if they only knew it, but they have taken to praising themselves instead.

Yours,
CITIZEN.

FAIR'S OFFICIAL PROGRAM

THE VARIOUS EVENTS FOR TUESDAY AND WEDNESDAY

Events will be Summoned by a Bugle Call and Programme must be Strictly Adhered to.

Next week is fair week. The three first days, Fair days, and it is hoped they will be three days of fair weather.

The work of putting on the fair is accomplished. It is now in the hands of the exhibitors and the public to make it a success. Generous exhibits will do much. A liberal attendance will do more. A large attendance will put heart in the directors and make the fair a financial success.

It is the duty of every one to go to the fair, to support it to at least the cost of an admission ticket; to support it because it is your local fair and the men pushing it local men. For those who are making the fair there is nothing in it but the satisfaction of doing a public duty in an energetic way. If the town and county wants this fair it can say so, and in a way that is never misunderstood—by getting on the grounds and encouraging the enterprise with approving words and a contribution of twenty-five cents per afternoon, for fairs cannot exist on words alone.

Three or four men are doing all the work and taking all the financial risk. For what? To make the fair a success. They have no other idea to serve, and live in hope that their anticipations will be realized.

Now, it won't do for the public to find fault, and for various reasons shy at going down to the grounds and paying money. The fair has been in the past, and will be in the future, just what the people make it; not the people who are directing, but the general public. Nothing will make a success to equal the success that comes from a big attendance. There is a shilling's worth there for all to see.

For several years a stumbling block in going to see the fair was the lack of transportation to the grounds. Buses were crowded, walking was bad, and a lot of other excuses. Now the street railway is putting up a service for speed and promptness that is not equalled in the big cities. Nice, clean, bright, new cars, and plenty of them, so that all can go to and from the grounds in a few minutes.

On the success of this fair depends the success of others. Not a merchant or citizen at large has been asked for a dollar to help it on. Everything is being risked on the attendance, and if that is of decent proportions the risk will be covered, so it is a public duty to attend the fair and encourage it.

Then the matter of the visit of the Black Watch Band; while not a part of the general arrangement of the fair, it is a side enterprise of the directors. It was a success last year, and should be equally so now. The band deserves to be heard by all, and the hearing paid for. It is the band of the most famous of the most famous of the British fighting regiments, "The Thin Red line" of history. Go and hear the band and encourage the fair directors.

The official programme of the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition has been completed and is published below. All events in the different rings will be summoned by bugle call, as will also the speeding events, and those entering must be promptly on time, as the programme will be strictly adhered to. The complete programme for the exhibition grounds on both days, Tuesday and Wednesday, is given. Everything is now in readiness for the fair, and it would appear that the weather man is shedding his tears early as if he, too, were going to be present in happiest mood:—

TO CONSIDER NEW ACT.

Council Will Meet to Discuss Reduction of Board of Education.

A meeting of the Town Council will be held on Monday night for the purpose of considering the advisability of the method of ejection of the Board of Education as provided by the statute 4 Ed. VII, Chap. 23, and for other business. It will be remembered that representation having been made by the Education Board to have a reduction in membership, special legislation was proposed, but as several other municipalities were considering similar action, a general Act was passed which, it is considered by some, made the reduction too great. In towns such as Peterborough seven members are to be elected and one member to be appointed by the Separate School Board. This would practically cut the present Board of Education in two, and the recent request of the Board to have no reduction made until some very important business was completed, can well be understood.

The new act provides that the members shall be elected by general vote of the persons qualified to vote for Public School trustees in any city, town or village, and the election shall be conducted in the same manner as that for mayor, but no person shall vote more than once for members of the Board. At the first election under the new act the full ed, where the number of elected members is an even number, and the next number of elected members higher that one-half where the number of elected members is an odd number, who receive the highest number of votes, shall continue in office for two years thereafter and until their successors have been elected under this Act, and the new Board organised and the remaining members shall continue in office for one year until their successors have been elected under this Act, and the new Board organized. At each election after the first, a sufficient number shall be elected to fill the places of members retiring; the latter shall bee eligible for re-election.

The Council will also transact other business on Monday evening.

FOR COOL CURED CHEESE

AN INTERESTING DEMAND BEING MADE BY OLD COUNTRY MERCHANTS

System Adopted at Government Cooling Rooms Worked Admirably —Combination Sale at Port Perry

Judging from the greater demand for cool cured cheese which exists this season, the Old Country merchants are beginning to realize more fully the advantage there is in handling cheese which have not been exposed during the process of curing to a temperature higher than sixty degrees. Cheese factories that are able to offer strictly cool cured cheese are deriving so much benefit that it may be only a question of time, a short time in fact, until all factories are equipped with proper cool curing rooms.

The experience gained at the Government cool curing rooms has demonstrated that, while the first requisite is to control the temperature, it is also necessary to provide for some circulation of the air to carry off the moisture which escapes from the cheese, and which comes from the increased relative humidity, due to the reduction of temperature. If the relative humidity is too high the cheese will have soft skins, and develop a tendency to mould badly.

The system adopted at the Government curing rooms was worked admirably, and it can be employed without difficulty and at a moderate cost in connection with any cheese factory. Indeed, a large number of factory curing rooms have already been remodeled on this system. The necessary alterations and additions involve the putting in of a cement concrete floor, some extra insulation, and the erection of an ice chamber. Mr. J. A. Ruddick, Chief of the Dairy Division, Ottawa, who has this work in hand, points out that many of the existing curing rooms are large enough to allow of an ice chamber being constructed in one end, and still leave sufficient room for cheese. This applies more particularly to the older factories in Western Ontario.

Where improvements are proposed for next season, the work should be undertaken this fall, in order to have the ice chamber ready for filling during the winter. Mr. Ruddick has prepared plans showing his system of cooling for all classes of cheese factory and creamery buildings, and he invites those who contemplate improving old buildings or erecting new ones to communicate with him, if they desire to have the benefit of his experience in these matters.

The question of the cool curing of cheese is one in which the patrons of cheese factories should take the keenest interest, because they will gain more through its adoption than any other section of the trade. They should be willing to bear a share at least of the expense of refitting the factory. The present mode of charges for manufacturing cheese is based on the old plan, and is far too low to secure good service. Cheese of the factories with cool curing rooms have during the present season been getting one-fourth of a cent above the highest price paid for the ordinary cured article, and there is not the slightest doubt but the difference will be greater, as cool cured cheese becomes better known. In addition to the increased price there is a saving in shrinkage of about one and a half per cent.

BULLETIN ON WEED SEEDS.

The Seed Division of the Department of Agriculture, Ottawa, has just issued an illustrated bulletin on the "Weed Seeds commonly found in Timothy, Alsike and Red Clover Seeds." It is well known that large quantities of seeds of many noxious weeds are each year unwittingly sown with grass and clover seed. The resemblance of many weed seeds to the commercial seeds with which they are found makes their detection difficult to an untrained eye, even if they be present to the extent of several hundred per pound. It is therefore of great importance to be able to identify at least the seeds of those weeds which are seriously injurious in agriculture. The text and illustrations of this bulletin, (No. 16, New Series) are published with a view to assist farmers to identify the more dangerous weeds common to grass and clover seed. The illustrations of seeds are from drawings by J. H. Faull, lecturer in Botany, University of Toronto, and the descriptions are by G. H. Clarke, Chief of the Seed Division, Ottawa, to whom applications for copies of the bulletin should be addressed. As the edition is limited, it will be sent only to those who apply for it.

THE COMBINATION SALE AT PORT PERRY.

The combination auction sale of pure bred live stock in Port Perry, October 13th (not Oct. 18th as previously announced,) there will be offered ten Shorthorn bulls, twenty Shorthorn females, ten of them cows or heifers in calf, five Yorkshire boars, twelve Yorkshire sows in pig, ten Shropshire rams and twelve Shropshire ewes. This is one of the district sales under the auspices of the Dominion Cattle, Sheep and Swine Breeders' Associations, and those who may wish to contribute stock can obtain full particulars from the Secretary, Mr. J. H. Brown, Port Perry.—Department of Agriculture, Ottawa.

HYGIENE FOR THE FARM

REMARKABLE DISCLOSURE MADE AS THE RESULT OF ANALYSES.

Farmhouses Should not be a Menace to Public Health—A State of Affairs that is Utterly Inexcusable

THE DRY EARTH SYSTEM.

Attention was recently called to the fact that out of some 100 to 200 samples of water from farm wells analysed annually by Prof. Shutt, Chemist of the Dominion Experimental Farms, not one-fifth are found safe and wholesome. By far the greater number have to be utterly condemned, and it seems very evident that a great improvement in our water supplies is necessary. This dangerous condition of many farm wells is undoubtedly due to pollution by unsanitary closets. There is no reason why we should have our farm houses to-day in the semi-barbaric condition in which so many of them are, with their closets and privies a menace to public health. We may talk about bacteriology, sanitation, and so on, but all that and a great deal more is included in what we understand by "cleanliness." The lack of cleanliness is primarily a matter of ignorance, and, secondarily, a matter of laziness.

An Ontario editor, who is a member of the Board of Health in his town and familiar with sanitary conditions in his section, says in effect:—Perhaps the farmers of this district are worse than elsewhere, but of all the Farms I have visited during the past few years, I have yet to learn of one closet kept with a regard to common decency, not to speak of hygienic laws. This state of affairs is utterly inexcusable. In the towns the closets are inspected by order of the Boards of Health, and the people are gradually being persuaded to adopt the dry earth system. Very few pits are left and so now cans are being dug. Inspection by county and township Boards of Health may be impracticable, but the self-respect of farmers and their families ought to mean something in this respect, if regard for health means nothing.

Ordinary shallow wells in the vicinity of the old-fashioned privy pits are almost certain to become contaminated by seepage. The soil is an excellent filtering and cleansing agent, oxidizing organic matter very rapidly, and tending to check the development to fmany of the common putrefactive bacteria. But the soil is only able to dispose of a certain amount of contaminating material, and such disposal takes time, so that by heavy rains the contaminating matter may be carried far into the earth below the true purifying layer, and thus soak unchanged into the wells. An old pit which has been closed and covered with earth is almost equally dangerous, as the decomposition of the large mass of excreta contained therein is a matter of years, unless hastened by the proximity of trees whose roots reach the pit. The contents should be removed and spread upon a field, and the pit left open long enough to permit the decomposition of any organic matter remaining.

If farmers once took time to think of these matters there would undoubtedly be a great improvement. Window nails are now both cheap and common, and there is no reason why well-to-do farmers should not have a water system in their houses, with all the conveniences and advantages which residents in the cities enjoy from the waterworks systems there established.

Though not quite so convenient, the dry earth closet is so cheap and so satisfactory from the sanitary point of view that no farmer can discover a reasonable excuse for refusing to adopt it. A well laid cement concrete floor will be found by far the easiest to keep in a clean and wholesome condition. A stout box of suitable size, mounted on runners, and with a strong hook at one end to which a horse may be attached, makes a receptacle that can be conveniently drawn to the field or barnyard to be emptied. This box may be made wholly or in part of sheet iron, and if the bottom be semi-circular in form of a bottle of hot water will be found sufficient to loosen the frozen contents in winter. Galvanized iron buckets, larger at the top than at the bottom, are also easy to empty in winter. The nature of the receptacle is largely a matter of convenience; the essential features of the system are the storing and use of a plentiful supply of dry earth and the emptying of the receptacle regularly. If the contents be spread thinly over the surface of a field, they will be decomposed in a very few days, with no danger to the public health.

Ashes should not be used as a substitute for earth, and road dust is very little better. The surface soil of a field or garden that has been frequently cultivated will be found just the thing. If a little coarse or lumpy it may be run through a gravel screen. It is always advisable to keep a good supply on hand, as it becomes drier and better with age when stored in a bin.

If the man who has hitherto been careless in this particular will adopt and maintain a proper sanitary system in connection with his closet, he find himself gaining largely, not only in self-respect, but in the respect of his family and of the strangers within his gates. Furthermore, he may thereby escape the ravages of such diseases as typhoid fever, which are so frequently traced to the use of contaminated water.

Yours very truly,

Over the Border

By... ROBERT BARR,

Author of "Jennie Baxter, Journalist," Etc.

Copyright, 1903, by Frederick A. Stokes Co.

"Your cry meets with no response," said Armstrong, laughing at the shallow cunning of his treacherous guide, for his keen eyes noted crouching figures making way along the other side of a hedge, and he knew that if he went down the lane, at whose junction with the road the beggar stood with repressed eagerness, he would find himself surrounded. Nevertheless he followed without betraying any knowledge of the trap he was entering.

As they neared the farmhouse a voice cried sharply "Halt!" and an armed man sprang up from behind the hedge, cutting off retreat, if such had been attempted. While the others made through the hedge to the lane, the tattered man as nimbly put the hedge between himself and his victim, as if fearing a reprisal, laughing boisterously, but rather nervously.

"Brave captain, I've brought you a fine horse and a gay gentleman, and the two are for sale."

The man who had cried "Halt!" stepped forth from the shelter of the nearest outbuilding, a drawn sword in his hand, followed by two others with primed matchlocks, stolidly ready for any emergency. Four others closed up the rear coming down the lane. There was no mistaking the fact that the man with the drawn sword was an officer, even if the object had not addressed him as captain, a salutation to which he paid no attention, for, although his uniform showed little difference from that of his men, he had in his stern face the look of one accustomed to obedience. The horseman had drawn up at the word and sat quite nonchalantly on his steed, as if this were an affair of no particular concern to himself.

"Who are you?" asked the captain.

"My name is William Armstrong," replied the rider simply. In spite of himself, the stolid face of the leader showed some surprise at this announcement, as if he knew the name and had not expected to hear it so frankly acknowledged.

"Where are you from?"

"I came across the border this morning. I am a Scotsman."

"Why are you here?"

"I am a cattle dealer, and as there is little doing in my own country I thought I would just see if business was better on this side of the line. This amusing lunatic said there was cattle for sale in the valley and led me hither, for which service I paid him a trifle."

"And so there is, and so there is," cried the lunatic, "but the price was for my advice, not for the leading hither. I must get my pay for that yet. Aye, there's cattle for sale here, and I'm the marksman."

"Peace to your folly," said the captain, scowling, then curtly to the horseman, "Dismount."

Armstrong sprang to the ground.

"Your sword," demanded the officer. The weapon was handed to him.

"Do cattle dealers in your country carry arms?"

"To tell you the truth," said the young man, with a laugh, "if they did not they would carry little money home with them. I not only carry arms, but know how to use them on occasion."

"I ask to see your papers giving you permission to travel in England."

"I have none. Scotland is at peace with England, and a citizen of my country should not require papers in visiting England any more than an Englishman would need the same to go from one end of Scotland to the other."

"Humph," growled the captain, "you are well versed in the law. I hope you are engaged in no enterprise that is contrary to it."

"I hope not, captain. If you are king's men you maintain that you are upholding the law. If you are parliamentary you swear the same thing."

"We swear not at all."

"Then I surmise you are no king's man. But in any case, until one or other of you have declared war against Scotland or until Scotland has declared war against either of you, or both, you meddle with a free citizen of Scotland at your peril."

"It is perhaps wisest to indulge in no threats."

"I am not indulging in any. I am stating a plain, uncontrovertible fact that would be held by none so stoutly as by General Cromwell himself."

"Then keep your dissertations on law until you see the general, which is like to happen before we are done with you."

"Nothing would give me greater pleasure than to have a discourse with that distinguished man. He is a fighter after my own heart, and I understand he is equally powerful in controversy."

"Search him."

To this order Armstrong not only made no objection, but assisted in its fulfillment. He took off his doublet and threw it to one of the men who approached him, then held his arms outstretched that another might with greater ease conduct his examination. A third paid minute attention to the saddle bags, and a fourth took the saddle itself off the horse. The search brought to light some papers which the officer scanned, gaining thereby much information regarding the price of cattle.

The captain gave the papers to a subordinate and directed them to be tied together. He now took from his belt a folded sheet, opened it, and read its contents with care, glancing now and then at the man before him. Apparently the comparison was to his satisfaction, and he restored the document to its place with a grunt of approval.

"Is Bates ready? Tell him to come here," he said to the subordinate, who instantly disappeared, emerging from among the outhouses shortly with a young man on a fine horse, evidently a racer before that sport was abolished. The animal was impatient to be off, but the young fellow on his back curbed its eagerness with a master hand as one born to the saddle. The captain had employed the interval in writing a brief dispatch, which he now handed to the young horseman.

"Ride hard and give that to General Cromwell as soon as you can. In case you should lose it tell him we have got our man, who crossed the border this morning. Say we are bringing him to Corbiton Manor, as directed, and expect to reach there before dusk."

The youth, without reply or salute, pocketed the paper, shook out the reins and was off like the wind.

At a word from the captain a bugle call rang out, and its effect was soon apparent. An accoutred horse was led to the captain, who sprang into his place with the ease of one accustomed to the feat, and from the buildings appeared something like a score of mounted troopers.

"I'LL TAKE YOUR MESSAGE"

"Get into your saddle, Armstrong," commanded the captain.

The latter drew up the buckling strap a point, then, with his foot in the stirrup, turned and asked:

"Am I to consider myself a prisoner, sir?"

"Whatever questions you wish to put will be answered presently by one higher in authority than I."

"I must protest against this detention, sir."

"Your protest will doubtless be considered by the officer I referred to."

"General Cromwell, I surmise?"

"Or one delegated by him. Mount! We have far to go."

Armstrong leaped into the saddle, and the troop set off, with the captain at the head and himself in the midst of it. There was no chance of escape, even if he meditated such an attempt, which apparently he did not. The direction tended south and east, and as the sun was setting they came to Corbiton Manor, a large country house, which was seemingly the headquarters of a considerable section of the army encamped in the neighborhood. Into a room in this mansion Armstrong was conducted and left under guard, and he was pleased to see by the spread table that there was at least no design on the part of his captors to starve him.

CHAPTER XII.

THE mansion of Corbiton was a large and rambling structure, two stories in height for the most part, although in some places it rose to three, as in others it subsided into one. It was built partly of stone, partly of brick and partly of timber and plaster, with many gables and picturesque windows in the wide, extending roof. Each of its owners had added to it as his needs required or his taste dictated, and now it was composed of many styles of architecture, but the jumble, as a whole, was beautiful rather than incongruous, as might have been expected.

As evening drew on the thin crescent of a new moon shed a faint, mysterious light over the scene, as if it were a white sickle hung up in the sky, useless because there was no harvest in England to reap save that of death. The dim luster outlined the mansion, and the aspect was one of peace, scarcely troubled by the footfall of a sentinel slouching along the grass in front, carelessly trailing his pike, with nothing of alert military manner about him.

The sentinel stopped in his walk and stood for a moment by the battered sundial, listening. Faintly in the still night air came to him across the fields the beating of horses' hoofs on the hard road. Striding athwart the broken lawn to an oaken door, he smote it with the butt of his pike, crying:

"Peace within there. The general is coming."

There was an instant hushing of the coarse song, then a laugh, and when some one in nasal tones raised the slow tune of a hymn the laughter became more uproarious, subsiding gradually, however, as voice after voice joined the drone. The sentinel now walked over to the main entrance and said to some one within the hall:

"I think the general is coming."

The watchman now resumed his promenade, but he shouldered his weapon and marched more like a man on guard. Several officers came out of the hall and stood listening on the broken sward. From the darkness emerged three horsemen, two following a leader, a thickset man, who came somewhat stiffly to the ground, as if fatigued with hard riding. To the one who sprang to the bridle he said curtly, "See the horse well rubbed down, and in half an hour feed him with corn." Then to his two followers: "Look to your horses first, and to yourselves afterward. Be ready in an hour."

The chief officer now stepped forward and said:

"You will surely stop the night, excellency? Everything is prepared."

"No. Did my order to stay the execution of Wentworth reach you in time, Colonel Pocock?"

"Yes, excellency. I would not have ventured to execute him without your sanction, although the death sentence was the unanimous finding of the court martial."

"The sentence was just. It may yet be carried out, or it may prove that the Lord has other use for him. Lead the way within."

General Cromwell gave no greeting to the different groups as he passed them, his heavy riding boots swishswashing against each other as he followed Colonel Pocock into the hall. He strode awkwardly, like a man more accustomed to a horse's back than a tiled floor. The colonel led him into the great dining room, one end of which was occupied by a shattered window, while the other was crossed by a gallery, and above all, very dim in the feeble illumination of two candles and some smoky torches, could be distinguished the knobs and projections of a timbered roof.

The vast room was almost completely bare of furniture, with the exception of a high backed carved chair, which doubtless belonged to it, and a stout oaken table taken from some other part of the house, replacing the long hospitable board that had witnessed many a festive gathering, but which had been used for firewood by the troopers. The general gazed about the ample apartment for a moment, as one who had never seen it before, estimating his bearings with the shrewd eye of a practiced soldier; then he pushed the table until it stood lengthwise with the room, instead of across, as before; glanced at the gallery and table, as if making some computation regarding their relative positions, drew up the chair and seated himself, setting the two candles by the edge farthest from him.

CHOQUETTE AND DEVLIN

Some Foreshadowed Changes in the Federal Cabinet.

Judge Choquette to Be Called to the Leadership in Quebec District—Charles Devlin, M.P. For Galway, Ireland, to Succeed the Hon. R. W. Scott—Mr. Fitzpatrick to Quit For Seat on the Supreme Court.

Montreal, Sept. 24.—Judge Choquette's decision to resign his judgeship and run in the next general election has created a great stir in the political situation here. Judge Choquette will become the French leader of the Quebec district in place of Mr. Laporte of Kamouraska, who will be appointed to the Senate instead of Sir A. P. Pelletier, who will take Choquette's seat on the bench.

Hon. Charles A. Fitzpatrick returned to Ottawa and saw Sir Wilfrid Laurier before his departure yesterday for the manufacturers' banquet. Mr. Fitzpatrick intimated that he would leave the Cabinet if Philip Choquette were to have the political management of the Quebec district. Everything goes to indicate the early retirement of Mr. Fitzpatrick from the Cabinet. He will probably take a seat on the Supreme Court.

Charles Devlin, M.P., for Galway and ex-M.P. for the County of Wright, Canada, intends to resign his seat in the English House of Commons and come back to Canada and contest his old constituency, in place of L. N. Champagne, the present member, who will be appointed judge of Three Rivers in place of the late Judge Desmarais, with a promise to be removed to Pontaic when the new seat will be filled.

ECONOMICAL INSURANCE

Munyon's Cold Cure Makes Good Life Insurance.

IT PREVENTS

Grippe, Bronchitis, Pneumonia and Other Diseases Having Their Origin in Colds.

I regard my Cold Cure as being better than Life Insurance. Now often we hear the statement following the loss of a precious life "that it was only a simple cold at first." Did you ever stop to consider, though, that a cold is the beginning of most diseases? It is the starting point for pneumonia, consumption, catarrh, kidney troubles and numerous other diseases. Speak of a cold and this should be the expression: colds, catarrh, coughs, consumption, grippe, pneumonia and possibly pneumonia. The periods of sickness can be prevented by paying attention to a cold and the cure of any Cold Cure.—MUNYON.

Munyon's Headache Cure is a positive cure for any kind of headache, especially Sick, or Nervous. For sale at all druggists.

Munyon's Witch Hazel Soap. The best soap ever made. Makes the skin soft as velvet.

BLAME AND PRAISE.

Board of Steamboat Inspectors Report On Slocum Disaster.

New York, Sept. 24.—The Board of Steamboat Inspectors who have been investigating the General Slocum disaster recommend that the licenses of William H. Van Schaick, master and pilot; Edward Van Wart, pilot, and Benj. F. Conklin, chief engineer, be revoked, and specially commends the unselfish heroism displayed on this occasion by Mr. Everett Brandow, second engineer of the steamer, in the performance of his duty, who remained at the throttle of his engine answering all bells promptly until his services were no longer required, this notwithstanding the commotion, and panic on the steamer at the time and without means of knowing from personal observation from his post in the engine room what chances must be of saving his own life."

The report also commends the captains and crews of the Franklin, the Massasoit, the Walter Tracy, the Wade, the Director and the Golden Rod for saving lives from the Slocum.

Better Than in 1903.

Montreal, Sept. 24.—The following telegram was received Thursday at the general offices of the Ogilvie Milling Co. from F. W. Thompson, vice-president and general manager, Winnipeg: "Threshing returns reported from 70 out of 100 of our elevators where threshing is in progress show an average yield of 18 bushels, so our estimate of 50,000,000 bushels, or 5,000,000 bushels more than last year, appears to have been very conservative. Weather is cloudy. I am pleased with the milling quality of the new wheat."

TALK IT OVER

You talk over the question of the best food to give your baby with every one who can help you. Especially talk it over with your doctor. You may have been fortunate during the past Summer, but you know of very many mothers who have had serious trouble with their children because the right food could not be found for them. You remember the experiments they made, the constant change from milk to one food or another, and the struggle and danger which it all meant.

We will send you, free of charge, a trial package of Reville's Food sufficient for eight meals.

Send us a postal card.

A PAIN ACROSS THE STOMACH

Can Always be Relieved by a Few Doses of Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets

"I could not take the simplest food without a pain across my stomach." That was the miserable condition Marie Ann Bujold, of Maria Cap, Bonaventure County, Que., was in. Thousands of Canadians could sympathize with her. For they know just how miserable she was. They are that way themselves. But listen to the rest of Miss Bujold's experience:—

"I finally consulted the doctors, but they did me no good. Then an advertisement led me to try Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets. One box completely cured me."

No one can appreciate the amount of condensed happiness contained in a box of Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets till they have suffered as Marie Ann Bujold did, and found the relief that came to her. That relief can always be found in Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets.

SHOOTING PAINS THROUGH THE BACK

Not a Day Without Suffering Until Cured by Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

Mr. C. Noyes, for many years section foreman, and now flagman for the G.T.R. at Peterboro, Ont., states: "For twenty-one years I was section foreman on the C.P.R. and was exposed to all sorts of weather. As a result my kidneys became effected and there was scarcely a day that I was not troubled more or less. At times I would have sharp shooting pains through my back and would get so used up that I felt like giving up work. During this time I was also a great sufferer from constipation. As I had heard so much about Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills for kidney disease and constipation I began using them, and can say that I was entirely cured of my old troubles in a short time. I cannot say anything too good about Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills and never lose an opportunity of recommending them."

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, 50 cents a box, six boxes for $2.50 at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto.

"Fruit-a-tives" are fruit juices in tablet form. They are the laxative, tonic and curative principles of fruit—combined into pleasant tasting pellets. They contain all the virtues of fruit—but by the secret process of making them, their action on the human system is many times intensified.

What "Fruit-a-tives" are for "Fruit-a-tives" are the natural and logical cure for all Stomach, Liver and Kidney troubles. Their action is that of fresh fruit, only very much surer and more effective. Then too, they are free of fruit acids, sugar and woody fibre which often prevent fresh fruit being beneficial.

REVIEW OF THE MARKETS

The following review of to-day's market was received by Messrs. W. F. Dever & Co., 'phone 416:—

At opening market was irregular with indications of fair supply of stocks in places, but good deal of strength shown in some active stocks. Traders were only moderately bullish at best and in some cases were selling on early bulge. Commission house business very light. U. S. Q. made very wide opening and showed good deal of strength. In spite of reappearance of Pittsburg houses as sellers of stock, the trading sentiment seems bullish. Atchison strong on reported transfer of 40,000 shares from Kuhn Loeb and Co. to Standard Oil interest; considerable demand for stock in keen crowd. The rumors of control of Atch. having been acquired, may be modified in some degree by suggestions that full control is not sought as a more powerful voice in the management. Suggestions that 250,000 shares have been accumulated by Union Pacific interests may be approximately correct. The annual meeting of Atch. takes place Oct. 27, and it is stated that the exact position in relation to Union Pacific and S. P. will be made.

Chicago, Ill., Sept. 24— There is some sharp fighting going on in wheat. It looks like very strong interests making great efforts to get control of December wheat.

GOD SAVE THE KING.

A DANGEROUS CHARACTER.

Discovered Ransacking a House in Ashburnham.

It appears that in the arrest of Joseph Thompson the police haven't yet gathered in all the dangerous characters working in this neighborhood. Yesterday afternoon Mr John Weir of the fifth ward had occasion to go to his house about 4 o'clock. He saw a boy of about fifteen dressed in a brownish suit and soft hat, outside. On entering the house he noticed an open window, and was very much surprised to find a man ransacking the house. The man was the first to recover from his surprise and dashed out of the front door, pursued by Mr. Weir. He chased them for some time but they made their escape. The police were not notified until 5 o'clock. Chief Reed and P. C. McGinty mounted their wheels and made a diligent search, but could not discover the pair. It is said they were seen on the Keene road, but this rumor has not been verified. The man was apparently about twenty-three years of age, was dark complexioned, had a dark moustache and wore dark clothes. The chief wants the public generally to be on the lookout for the pair, and to arrest them if possible and

The committee appointed to consider the matter of dormatories made a report, and it is earnestly hoped that they will shortly be erected.

A statement was made regarding the finances, and it is the intention to finish the canvas at once and close the books as soon after the 1st of October as possible. About $800 is still required in gifts from friends of the work in order to meet the needs provided by the budget.

The opening of a dressing room for boys was decided upon, and the contract for seventy-five new lockers to equip the same.

SPECIALISM

The tailor who tells you vaguely and generally that he is an expert in making each part of a suit is stating an impossibility.

He will not be as expert as he who makes coats alone.

And he who tailors coats cannot in a given time produce as good a collar as he who works on collars alone.

Because the tailor on collars has all his time for collars—to concentrate on the making—to study the fibre of the cloth—the effective way to stitch—so that the collar will be properly shaped and properly made.

Semi-ready is tailored by specialists who concentrate on each part—the maximum skill is obtained—the maximum results achieved.

Semi-ready bears the impress of the very best class of high-grade tailoring.

JAPANESE CAPTURE POSITIONS

JAPANESE COIL TIGHTENING

Mikado's Forces now Practically Command the Water Supply of the Russian Garrison--Czar Creates a Second Manchurian Army with 600 Guns--A Titanic Struggle.

Che Foo, Sept. 26.—As a result of the battle before Port Arthur, which began on Sept. 19, the Japanese succeeded in capturing several important positions, and yesterday the Russian tenure of the big forts guarding the north, northeast and northwest sides of the town is seriously threatened. Chinese information places the Japanese losses under 3,000 for the three days' fighting, and this comparatively small casualty list is due to the excessive care used by the Japanese in making their preparations for the advance.

Russian sources, however, claim to have information that the Japanese losses were unusually severe, amounting to fully three times the number mentioned above.

Possibly the most important capture during the three days' fighting was that of Fort Kuropatkin, which, while of minor value with regard to preventing the entrance into the town of the Japanese, had been constructed for the purpose of protecting the source of the garrison's water supply.

The control of the water supply is now in the hands of the Japanese.

Military experts here are of the opinion that if the Japanese capture either Rihlung or Kikwan Forts, or the Its and Anshu Forts, the doom of Port Arthur is sealed, and for this reason the importance of the results obtained by the Japanese in their latest assaults upon the Russian positions is obvious.

Russians Fought Fiercely.

At 5 o'clock of the afternoon of Sept. 20, the Japanese captured a supplementary fort which from the lower ground threatens the fort on Its Mountain. This ended the heavy fighting for that day, although the Japanese were compelled to resist several sorties.

During the night the heavy bombardment of the Russian positions continued, the Japanese fire being directed with particular vigor against another supplementary fort, 3,000 yards from the fort on Its Mountain, and regarded as highly important because of its bearings on the Its and Anshu Mountain forts. The next day, after having pounded this position unmercifully, and until its fire had slackened visibly, the Japanese delivered their assault. They met with a stubborn resistance. They were exposed to the fire of machine guns and rifles and they made frantic efforts to reach the crest of the slope. They leaped over trenches and embankments and tore down the entanglements in their path, until at length they entered the fort. The Russian troops there refused to desert their positions, even in the face of the superior numbers which confronted them, and desperate hand-to-hand fighting occurred outside of the fort. Eventually almost the entire Russian garrison was either killed or wounded.

A steamer which has arrived here from Port Dalny confirms previous reports that there was heavy fighting at Port Arthur on Sept. 24.

Japs Capture 6 Forts.

Tokio, Sept. 26, 11 a.m.—It is believed that the Japanese have captured six forts in the second line of defence at Port Arthur since September 19. The hope of a speedy reduction of the fortress is running higher.

200,000 More Men—600 Guns.

St. Petersburg, Sept. 26.—The division and re-organization of the Manchurian army was officially announced yesterday in an Imperial rescript appointing Gen. Grippenberg, commander of the third army corps in the Province of Vilna, as commander of the second army now being mobilized for immediate despatch to the Far East, leaving Gen. Kuropatkin in command of the first army.

Probably 200,000 additional men will be placed in the field. Five corps—the third, fourth, fifth, eighth and sixteenth—are already destined for the front, and the talk is that five more corps will be sent forward. Eventually, the creation of this second army involves the selection of a commander-in-chief. It is the best opinion that Grand Duke Nicholas Nikolaievitch, Inspector-General of Cavalry, will attain the high command, occupying in the war with Japan the position held by his father in the war with Turkey.

In the reorganization special steps have been made to overcome the deficiency in guns under which the Russians have been laboring. Over 600 additional field and rapid fire guns are to be sent to the front. The great struggle for the mastery in the Far East now seems destined to assume Titanic proportions.

Grieff Dismissed.

St. Petersburg, Sept. 26.—Major-General Grieff, who has been held responsible for the retreat of the Russian forces from Liaoyang, has been dismissed from the army.

Uncertain At Mukden.

Mukden, Sept. 26.—The situation here cannot be definitely stated, as each day brings forth conflicting reports. According to a Chinese report received, the Japanese are actively engaged in fortifying Liaoyang.

No Change in Situation.

St. Petersburg, Sept. 26.—General Kuropatkin has sent the following despatch to Emperor Nicholas, dated Sept. 24: "There is no change in the situation to-day. Cold set in a few days ago, the temperature falling to one degree. It has become slightly warmer since yesterday. The health of the troops is good."

Hohenzollern Has Arrived.

Tokio, Sept. 26.—Prince Charles of Hohenzollern arrived here yesterday and was given an official welcome. He will meet certain high Japanese officials to-day, after which he will join the Japanese army forces in the field without loss of time.

Told to Move On.

Port Said, Sept. 26.—The Russian auxiliary cruisers St. Petersburg and Smolensk are here awaiting permission to take on board enough coal and provisions to carry them to Bizerta, Tunis. They asked for sufficient supplies to enable them to reach Libau, but their request was refused, and they must proceed within 24 hours. Yesterday afternoon the captains of the Russia vessels exchanged visits with the officers of the British cruiser Furious.

Circum-Baikal Railway Opens.

Irkutsk, Sept. 26.—The Circum-Baikal Railway was opened yesterday.

How to Keep Well

The best efforts of the great physicians are now expending in finding how to keep people well and prevent serious disease. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food was prepared with this object in view. It is not only a cure for diseases of the nerves, but also a restorative to be used when vitality runs low and the weakened condition of the system invites attack by fevers or contagious diseases.

THE STORE THAT NEVER DISAPPOINTS

The Enthusiasm of Bigger Business

Ladies' Winter Coats to be absolutely correct this season must have leg-o'-mutton sleeves. That is positive. The pouch sleeve is gone. It may be that some stores where purchases were made too early are showing the old sleeve. Being on the spot when the change was made we contracted with the German makers to have this new feature on all our coats, and guarantee it to be strictly correct. Moderately priced because imported direct. Range runs easily from $4.75 to $25.

DAWSON CITY A SUFFERER.

Seattle, Wash., Sept. 26.—A special despatch from Dawson to The Seattle Times and Puget Sound American says: "The largest fire since 1899 occurred here Friday night. The loss is estimated at a quarter of a million dollars, with no insurance. Seven to One

That is about the ratio. About seven times as many persons are injured as die from all causes yearly.

Accidents are a more prolific cause of death than any disease except lung diseases.

Twice as many people are accidently killed as die of old age. Does it not seem reasonable to you as a business man that it would be to your interest to carry an accident policy?

YOU are subject to over two hundred Accidents, and liable to accidents without number.

Official figures prove that One Man in Five carrying an Accident and Sickness Policy makes a claim for indemnity each year.

SHAM TEMPERANCE

The prohibition and Ross organ, the Pioneer, says:—

"All right-thinking citizens are humiliated and indignant over the disgraceful revelation made in a recent election trial, of wholesale attempts at election frauds."

There is no special mention of the Minnie M., and its cargo of liquor, though a matter interesting to a temperance advocate; that would be bringing the thing too close to the Ross Government. But the Pioneer makes up for this by asserting that political crime is attributable to liquor. It says:—"The conspiracies of political evil-doers are generally worked out in whisky dens." Was the conspiracy by which Mr. Ross closed the courts to prevent the present exposures and to keep his bogus majority for a session, worked out in a whisky den? Was the attempt to seduce Mr. Gamey worked out in a whisky den or in the offices of Ministers and King's Counsel? Was the conspiracy of Mr. Ross and his Attorney-General to corrupt the Sault officials, till they worked as we have seen, devised in a whisky den? Was it in a whisky den that the Attorney-General received notice of the cruise of the Minnie M. and threw his shield over it? Was it in a whisky den that Jackson, K.C., went to consult, as he says, with Mr. Ross? Do Mr. Ross and his colleagues choose whisky dens in which to organize their corruption machine, that regular branch of the public service? More of this hideous mass of political corruption, prevalent under the Ross Administration, has seen the light in the private rooms of pretended temperance men than in all the whisky dens in the Province.

The fact is that another attempt is being made by the clique of leaders who put Mr. Ross first and temperance afterwards, to bear the Premier harmless, in spite of his having deluded them so repeatedly. In view of an approaching batch of bye-elections or of a general election, they are endeavoring once more to fool the electors by urging them to vote for candidates who will pledge themselves to temperance, while having a Minnie M. full of liquor for bogus voters. It is just this stripe of man who supports Mr. Ross and whom the Pioneer admires. If it wishes to attack intemperance, why not speak out in this flagrant case?

Now it is Saturday Night which is pretending that Capt. Sullivan brought over the Buffalo pluggers to aid the Conservatives.

We see no rebuke in the so-called religious papers of the terrible political corruption that has been exposed recently. Yet it would be a very proper theme for an editorial or a sermon.

It is to be hoped that the Toronto World is wrong in its surmise that there will be a saw-off in North Norfolk and North Renfrew. The country wants no more of these corrupt bargains.

The Dominion Farmers' Association has by resolution condemned Mr. Pettypiece, M.L.A., for violating his pledges regarding railway taxation. He was one of those patriots only waiting to be bought.

Under the new law if a writ is not issued to fill a vacancy within three months, the Clerk of the Crown must issue it forthwith, so there can be no long delay and no repetition of the North Renfrew outrage.

The Lieutenant-Governor says it is an impertinence for newspapers to criticise him. The impertinence was when he helped Mr. Ross to close the courts to prevent the proof of the Premier's confession that he was a mere creature of corruption, not a constitutional adviser.

The Independent Woodstock Express says:—

"When and where have the Liberals refused to accept the results of the work done by the parasites, grafters and camp-followers? Whence come these grafters, parasites and camp-followers? Who employs them? Who pays them for their work? Who directs their operations? Does anybody imagine that these workers of evil spring up spontaneously, and that they work simply for glory and exercise? In the Sault Ste. Marie case the campaign was directed by George Sutherland, who was employed as organizer by James Vance, who is employed by the Liberal party."

Mr. John Brown, who threw up the sponge that the corruption of his ejection in North Perth might not be exposed, has been chosen again as the Ross candidate with compliments to

The Revolutionizing of the Cracker

Mooney revolutionized the cracker. He made folk admit that they never knew how good crackers could be, by making such delicious crackers as they had never tasted before. Then he set folk to eating Mooney's crackers who'd never eaten crackers before. In a year he had all Canada eating his honesty. Mr. Brown confessed that his seat was stolen by availing himself of the optional privilege of remaining in the Legislature for a session without a trial. He accepted cheerfully the corrupt services of the Ross machine men, and tried to hide their guilt. Mr. Brown is an honest man in the eyes of those who consider such conduct honest. For ourselves we still hold that there should be no different code of morals in politics and in other affairs.

A GLORIOUS BAND

The Battles of the Black Watch — The Band and Pipers Have Had their Share.

The Black Watch has the finest Band as well as the most splendid record of all the splendid records of the Scottish regiments in the British army. The Band now in Canada has served with the fighting men of the first battalion wherever they have gone, and its members are remarkable for their long service. The Black Watch Pipers have been heard on every continent, and their skirl has inspired not merely the grim warriors of their own corps, but the soldiers of every other regiment within hearing distance.

The history of the regiment began in 1725 when a number of Highland gentlemen volunteered to help the Crown put down the Jacobite rebellion. So well did they accomplish this self-appointed task that in 1729 the Government decided that these gallant Loyalists might well serve as the nucleus of a permanent regiment. Its members, at this time, were not enrolled for service in foreign lands, and so the regiment attracted large numbers of the superior yeoman class of men of substance who had no desire to travel across the seas to fight. From the very first, therefore, the 42nd was conspicuous for the superior qualities of its members. In the six companies there were 525 men, and each officer was a Highland Chieftain. Their uniforms consisted of tartans of dark colors, hence the name "Black Watch," to distinguish them from the regulars, known as the "Red Soldiers." The arms of the men were distinctively Scottish, and consisted of claymore and dirk, in addition to the more common musket and bayonet. Their sergeants carried the Lochaber axe, famed in song and story.

In 1743 the regiment first went on foreign service, and in 1745 took part in the Battle of Fontenoy. Of its part in this famous conflict an historian has said: "The gallantry of Sir Robert Munro and his Highlanders was the theme of admiration through out all Britain." The valor of the Scots, however, although it did not turn a defeat into a victory, was sufficient to win an orderly retirement from the single great European battle where the British arms suffered a reverse. It is comforting to know that the day was won for the French by Count Lally's Irish Brigade. In the same year Prestonpans was fought, and in the following year the regiment sailed for America, where it did garrison duty for a year begore again returning to Flanders. In 1756 the Black Watch came back again to the new continent, and in 1758 saw service at Ticonderoga. Two years later it was in the army which captured Montreal. For the next thirty years the regiment was fighting on American soil almost continually, being stationed in Nova Scotia from 1762 to 1789. The following year saw the band organized, and then came another campaign in Flanders.

It was in this campaign that the Forty-Second won the "Red Heckle" in other words the feather which is such a conspicuous part of the regimental headgear. The episode occurred on the banks of the Waal River, at the village of Gildermuisen. The 11th Light Dragoons had been posted to cover the retreat of the British pickets, but in the face of a determined charge by the French it fell back in disorder, abandoning its guns. At this the Black Watch rushed forward, dashed through the victorious French and recaptured the field pieces. The reward of the Highlanders for this feat was, unhappily, achieved at the expense of the Dragoons, for George III. ordered that the Red Heckle of the 11th should be transferred to the Black Watch, and that the Dragoons should wear instead a white feather with a yellow [illegible]

A FIRE INSURANCE PLAN

ADOPTED BY CANADIAN MANUFACTURERS IN CONVENTION.

They Felt the Necessity of Manufacturers Having Some Plan of Mutual Insurance.

At the meeting of the Canadian Manufacturers in Montreal considerable interest was centred in the fire insurance plan and when submitted it met with general approval. The matter was brought up by the report of the special Fire Insurance Committee. The report, after giving the reason for the necessity of the manufacturers having some system of mutual insurance owing to the excessive rates charged by companies recommended a system organized as follows:

"The department shall be controlled by a standing committee of the association to be known as the Insurance committee, which shall report monthly to the executive council and annually to the annual meeting. The committee shall be composed of twenty-one members. Seven members of the committee shall be elected at each annual meeting and hold office for three years, and shall be eligible for re-election. In centres where there are eight or more members of this association advisory committees shall be organized at the discretion of the insurance committee.

"The department shall be organized to carry on the business (a) of mutual fire insurance and (b) of insurance brokers.

"In order to increase the desirability of the policies issued by the department as many risks as can be obtained (provided they are satisfactory to the department) will be accepted. No manufacturing risks will be accepted unless the manufacturers are members of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association. All warehouse, dwelling and non-manufacturing property, irrespective of ownership, will be insured under the same conditions as manufacturing risks.

"Every risk before being insured by or with the insurance department, must be approved of by the insurance committee.

"To avoid the necessity at the outset of an expensive inspection department the rate of premium charged will be the same rate as is charged at the time the insurance is effected by any company that if acceptable to the committee and the usual conditions regarding co-insurance will also be adopted.

"The department will claim, among other things to encourage the insuring public to protect their own property, and as an inducement sprinklered and properly protected risks will receive special consideration.

"In addition to the insurance carried by the department arrangements are expected to be made with several first class Canadian, English and United States companies whereby an insurance amounting to several times the amount carried by the department may be placed. The commission on this instance will be credited to the department to increase the fund available for the losses.

SCHEME OUTLINED.

"In addition to the cash premium paid to the department, the policyholders shall also bind themselves by the acceptance of a policy to be responsible for all losses suffered by the department over and above the amount of premiums collected, to an amount sufficient to make the policies absolutely safe.

"No agents will be employed by the department. The insurance will be secured through the head and branch offices of the association and through the individual efforts of the interested members.

"The department will, at the end of each year, set aside a percentage for profits to be decided upon for a reserve fund to increase the security and lessen the guarantee of policyholders.

"The department will begin business just as soon as it has insurance contracted for to the amount of $1,000,000 provided that legal authority has been obtained by that time. An effort will be made to have in addition to this $1,000,000 a large amount of insurance to place in other companies on which the department will receive a commission."

The committee submitted an estimated statement figured on the basis of $5000 on each risk, the department carrying half and returning half. The result gives a balance of $7000 in favor of the department out of $40,000 earned on policies of $2,000,000, half being re-insured. This $7,000, it is claimed, is straight excess over the amount at the disposal of the line companies for the same losses on the same business.

The following resolution in connection with the report was adopted:

"Your committee recommend that the executive council of the association be authorized to consult the branches of the association and to appoint a fire insurance committee, as outlined herein; to prepare a plan for fire insurance, and submit the same to the executive council of the association for approval or plan to be considered which in any way affects the funds of the association."

DOING PRACTICAL WORK

HOW SCHOOL OF SCIENCE MEN SPENT HOLIDAYS.

The Attendance at the School this Summer Will be Very Large — Demand for Men who can do Things

Students of the School of Practical Science in this vicinity will be interested in the following from the Toronto Star:—

The School of Practical Science is well named. It is left to the Arts men to search out the why and wherefor of things, while the School men go ahead and learn how to do things. Both the seeker and the doer are necessary nowadays, but the latter appeals more to the popular sympathies. There were four hundred of them last year, and the term, which will open in a few months promises to be a record breaker in the point of attendance. Applications for admission have been coming in for some time, and the men of last year are beginning to come in from their summer's work.

This means that most of the three hundred and fifty men, or so, who have been scattered over the country for the last few months, acquiring practical experience in their several branches of work, are commencing to jump their jobs, and come home to devote themselves once more to the survey of the questions from the more theoretical point of view.

AS SURVEYORS.

Of the 400 men at college last year, about ninety per cent. have been employed during the summer at some form of practical work in connection with the course of work which they are pursuing at the school. More are engaged in surveying parties, it is safe to say, than in any other form of work. In this work they rank all the way from chain and axe men up to men in charge of instruments, or even in charge of a party. The rank depends partly on the man's standing in the school, that is whether he is a first, second, or third year man, but chiefly on his former experience, for experience counts even with the student of the School of Practical Science, or the Practical School of Science, as it might be called. Of course a first year man may have had more practical experience than a third year man, as a great many of the men have done considerable field work before entering the college at all. The work is obtained with the Government survey parties and those sent out by the different railway parties.

The student of electrical engineering finds work in some electrical industry. The man who is working to be able to attach the letters M.E. (mining engineer) to his name, makes his way out to the mining centers, where he may secure a position as assayer or general handy man. Professor Walker, the head of the department of mineralogy, has been out in British Columbia this summer, making a survey of the mineral resources of that country, and a probable result of his visit will be that a party will be sent out there from the university next summer, as the country affords exceptional opportunities for the study of geology and mineralogy.

BUILDING RAILWAYS.

Others have been assisting in construction work on the different railways being built in this country. Some are working as draftsmen in various kinds of offices. But whatever the man's branch may be, he can usually secure work, if he wants it.

Not all the men at the school need to work for the money that is in it, but to a good many it affords a means of paying their way through college. Many who have means take the work for the practical experience alone. The men earn anywhere from $40 to $125 a month.

The positions are obtained partly through the individual initiative of the student. Requests for men are also sent to the offices of the school, and these are sent on to the men whom the officials think will fill the position. School men are very clannish. They are noted in university circles for the way they hold together during their undergraduate days, and after they get away from the school the same spirit holds. Couple this with the fact that there are a good many graduates of the school in responsible positions, where they often have to engage men, and you will be able to understand how many of the positions are secured. Such men usually send for men from their own alma mater. By such a process as this a considerable colony of school men has been built up in Pittsburg, where the graduates of the school are employed in the electrical works there. In all about 25 per cent. of the graduates of the school are employed in the United States, and it looks very much as if an export duty would have to be imposed, as the men seem rather to be in demand there. This is because of the good reputation earned by former graduates of the school who have crossed the line before.

EXPERIENCE MEETINGS.

Each student has the advantage of the experience of the other students. The Engineering Society is an association of the students for the advancement of scientific study. This association has what it calls experience meetings, at which the members give the experience gained in the summer's work, either in a specially prepared paper, or short verbal accounts.

This picture of student enterprise has its darker side. This year three of the men who went out were drowned in the north country. They were engaged with surveying parties there. Two graduates of the school who were engaged in railroad construction work were killed this summer one near Sharbot Lake, and the other a little west of Winnipeg.

RUGBY.

E. W. Hamber has again been secured as captain of the Senior Argonauts this season.

Wilfrid Stolling has been elected captain of the Senior Vics.

The Hamilton team, according to a gentleman from that city, will be strong faster for the senior championship. They are practicing faithfully and will be in the best of shape when the season opens. The locals should follow their example and get into shape as quickly as possible.

BASEBALL.

The Bobcaygeon Independent hands out the following bequest:—

The game last Friday between the T.A.S., of Peterborough, and Bobcaygeon was splendid from start to finish. Not the slightest bit of dispute, both teams taking the umpire's decisions without question. The T.A.S. team is a gentlemanly lot of young fellows. They are not the noisy, disorderly combination of yelling vulgarity that is too frequently the case with teams away from home. They conduct themselves as gentlemen both on and off the field, and do nothing either on the play grounds or the streets offensive to good manners. The young men of the Peterborough Total Abstinence Society are a credit to their Society, their town and themselves, and are justly entitled to the heartiest support in their games. It was a Kawartha League game and drew a fair crowd, the play being exceptionally good on both sides, and was anyone's game till the last innings was played. After the T.A.S. had their ninth innings the score was 6—4 in Bobcaygeon's favor, and one innings to spare. It was the first defeat for the T.A.S. The spectators joined in cheering for the visiting team and everyone was pleased with the exhibition of good ball.

Our citizens will be glad to know that the management are trying to get the Bowmanville-Lindsay game played off on our diamond. They have made the Bowmanville boys a good, healthy and substantial offer.—Lindsay Post.

The wide-awake sporting editor of the Post seems to forget that both Bowmanville and Lindsay have games here which will have to be played before the tie between the two is played off.

The secretary of the Lindsay baseball team takes pleasure in announcing that the letter we longed for has come at last, and the famous sudden death ball game for the red flag takes place on Lindsay's diamond between Bowmanville and Lindsay on Thursday next. The great ball game takes place just twenty-three miles from 'Maggie's' home on Lindsay's green diamond.—Lindsay Post. It would give the local fans great pleasure to see Bowmanville repeat their exploit of defeating Lindsay right in Cougogville.

HOCKEY.

The Belleville Intelligencer has the following items in regard to hockey:

"A story comes from Picton to the effect that hockey will again boom in that town this winter, and that it is confidently hoped to have an O. H. A. team which will make the other septettes in this district hustle. We are told, however, that Mr. Boulter, will not, next winter, be connected with the team; he had his fill of glory last winter."

"Outside towns are all anxious to know if Belleville will have a team next winter. To be sure we will, though perhaps not as strong as in the last couple of seasons. There are several young players in the city who, with proper coaching and looking after, would develop into intermediate material. Percy Allan, "Bob" Hamilton, Hough, Weller, Brennan, Williamson, Conley, Burrows and many others should show up on the ice next winter, better than ever before. They are "home brews" too, and a team selected from them would be popular in the city."

"It is time to begin thinking of the matter if we are to have a team this winter. A 'home brew' septette, with the right people at the head of it, is just what we need in our business. Who will make the first move? There is little time to spare."

RESOLUTION OF CONDOLENCE

Otonabee, Sept. 6th, 1904.

To Mr. Robert J. Mitchell, Peterborough, Ont.:

Dear Sir and Brother,—We, the officers and members of Colonel Saunders L.O.L., No. 321, have heard with deep and sincere regret of the death of your beloved wife, and we desire to place on record our deepest sympathy with you and your family in this deep sorrow.

It is needless for us to say that this vicinity has lost in her a good, kind friend, and many of our families will miss her most sympathetic, kind, motherly hand when affliction visits our homes.

We pray that you may be strengthened by the Lord of all Grace to bear up beneath the trial He has been pleased to send you, remembering that whom the Lord loveth He chasteneth and scourgeth every son whom He receiveth. There is but a step between us and the grave, and sooner or later death shall call us hence. But there is a home where death can never enter, where pain and sickness can never come. May God grant each of us an entrance to that home, when our life's journey is ended and His purpose accomplished with us here below.

Dear brother, we ask you to kindly receive this, our message of condolence, in the spirit of brotherly kindness in which we now send it; also convey our deep sympathy to the other members of the family.

Signed on behalf of the lodge.

C. F. KITNEY, R.S.

Rosthern, Sask., N. W. T., Sept. 3, 1904.

Dear Sir,—When home for vacation several people requested me to write a letter to The Register describing Rosthern and its surroundings, so with your kind permission I shall endeavor to do so.

Rosthern is a town of little over eight hundred inhabitants, situated two hundred miles north of Regina and fifty miles south of Prince Albert. We have a daily mail. The train comes up from Regina every evening at nine o'clock and returns from Prince Albert at five o'clock in the morning. The town is about six years old, but not until four years ago can we say that the town started properly.

There are seven churches; English, Presbyterian, Mennonite, Evangelical, Lutheran, Swedenborgian and Roman Catholic. The services in the two former ones are conducted in English, but in the others in German. There are three banks, the Imperial and the British North America, both chartered institutions, and a private one called the Canada Territories. We have several general stores, a china hall, two butcher shops and one bakery.

It is impossible almost to get a private boarding place in the town for the houses are nearly all small. However, the majority of the people who work here room in a private building and take their meals at a hotel. There are two good hotels in the place and two inferior ones. The principal reason that the houses are small is because building material is so expensive. Lumber ranges from twenty-five to fifty dollars a thousand. At the present time there is not a brick residence in Rosthern. Two of the banks, a large hardware store, and the school are built of white brick. All of the other buildings are frame. Although the residences appear diminutive to an Easterner, yet the interior of them is very comfortable. A great number of them have furnaces and a few have fireplaces.

There are at present seven grain elevators and another one is in course of erection. It is simply wonderful how quickly buildings are erected in the west. This new elevator is to contain thirty-five thousand bushels of wheat.

The carpenters just commenced to build it on Aug. 29th and it is now more than half finished. The largest elevator holds seventy thousand bushels of wheat. They expect to market eight hundred and fifty thousand bushels of wheat at Rosthern this year. It is the second largest shipping station in the Territories. Besides the above mentioned elevators there is a large grist mill with a capacity of one hundred barrels per day.

Just here I shall describe our school. It is a large white brick building. There are four bright airy rooms. It is heated by a furnace and contains all the modern equipments, an organ included. W. J. Guggisburg, B. A., of Hamilton, Ont., is principal. He teaches third, fourth and fifth book work. Mrs. Thompson, a resident in town, but formerly of Burk's Falls, Ont., is first assistant. My sister has charge of the second department, and I have the Primary. There is an enrollment of two hundred and twenty-five pupils.

We have a weekly paper called "The Easterprise." A considerable number of the Norwood people know the editor—Aaron Mann, B.A., of Peterborough. He was a former student of our Norwood Model School. He was principal of Rosthern school until June, when he became proprietor of the printing office.

The town is very cosmopolitan, having representatives of nearly every tongue. There are ten languages spoken—English, German, Hungarian, Doukhobor, Galician, Slav, Roumanian, French, Danish and Scandinavian. There is a Hungarian Count in town. He is a Dominion land agent. Last year there was a Belgian Baron acting in the same capacity, but he died of appendicitis this last July.

The Germans are fast becoming like the English, both in dress and habits, but the other nations do not adopt English dress nor our language so rapidly. The Hungarian women wear short, bright colored print skirts, and a loose waist also of print, but usually a different color from the skirt. Over their heads they tie a flashy scarf. The foreigners are all very fond of gay colors. The Hungarians live in rather peculiar mud huts across the railway track. These huts are arch shaped and from eight to twelve feet high. I have been into several of them. They have a bed and often two beds in one corner, a stove in one corner, a little table in another and a bag of flour in the fourth. Under the beds you see the little chickens running about. Some of the huts have a little annex attached in which the cow is tied. The majority of the huts are kept scrupulously clean. The earth floors are hard and they often pin bright pictures on the sides of the hut. They bake their bread outside in rather peculiar little fire places. They usually bake two large round loaf at a time. These loaves are between two and three feet across. The Galicians are all living on farms and all we see of them is when they come into town to do their shopping. People drive into Rosthern to shop from one hundred miles in the country. In winter the dress of the Galicians is quite quaint. The women and men dress alike. Their boots are always high and they are very long and turned up at the toes. Their coats are tight to the waist and then they have a long skirt on them. They are made of sheep skin with the wool turned in towards the body. They have a sash at their waist sometimes flashy red in color. They all wear large hoods coming to a peak at the top. They are very saving people. They bring in about two dollars worth of eggs and about two dollars and a half worth of butter to the stores. They will just buy about five cents worth of tea, ten cents worth of sugar and five cents worth of candles. The rest they leave to their credit on the books. The Doukhobors live in villages about fifty miles from Rosthern, but I have never been out to see any of the villages yet. They, too, come into town to do their shopping.

The majority of the people in the West are very friendly. They lack the cliques in society of the East. They go in as one family for a good time. There is a good skating rink here. In winter a great number of the people skate and the men are enthusiastic curlers. Last Friday there was a bowling alley opened in town, and it seems to be well patronized. Then they also play tennis, cricket, and baseball.

Everything up to the present time points to a real good crop this year. The wheat is splendid. One farmer right near town has four hundred acres. The farmers do not fence their fields as we do down east. It is quite interesting to drive through the country and see vast stretches of wheat not bounded by any fence.

Great anxiety was felt last week concerning the frost. On Aug. 27, there was 6 degrees of frost, but it is not thought that any damage will be done to the standing crops, for the wheat is fairly well advanced in most parts.

The duck shooting opened on the 22rd of August. People are very enthusiastic over this sport. At three o'clock in the morning ladies as well as men started out the first day of the season. They each brought back a goodly number of the winged fowl. Some parties shot as high as eighty ducks. There is a large sand hill crane in this country which they call wild turkey. It is very good when properly cooked.

A word might be said about the rivers of the west. Unlike our Ontario rivers they are very muddy and dirty in color. The prairie is dotted with sloughs. These are little lakes. Some are quite shallow while others are quite deep in places. I have seen the battle grounds of the North-West Rebellion. Fish Creek is eight miles from Rosthern and Batoche is ten miles from Fish Creek. There at it remains a large barracks. General French was shot in one of the rooms in this barracks. The Indians concealed themselves in a bluff and shot him through one of the windows. A policeman belonging to the North-West mounted police occupies the barracks.

Oxen are used a great deal in this country, especially in the rural districts. We often see the Galicians drive into town with a yoke of oxen. On our return from Ontario, when we were coming through Manitoba we saw six oxen hitched to one plough. We witnessed quite a comical sight not long ago. A Galician sat up in his wagon, enjoying a smoke from a long curly pipe. In the bottom of the wagon we could see six little children all dressed in bright colored clothes each having a bright scarf tied around its head. The wagon was drawn by a yoke of oxen, and about eight feet in front the woman walked. A rope was attached to the horns of the oxen and the wee man was pulling on the rope. We often see sights that would appear very comical to the people down east, but the Westerners become accustomed to them and it is surprising how soon it becomes as an old story.

Rosthern has a representative of the mounted police force. He resides in town with his family and rides out on horseback to the different villages near, where he has jurisdiction. There are two lawyers, one dentist, and three medical doctors also in the town. The weather here and through out the west in general is always quite pleasant. The nights are always very cool and the air seems to be dryer than in Ontario. Everybody is healthy, and they can eat and sleep well.

There are a great number of things which I have not written which might be interesting to readers of the Register, but fearing to monopolise too much space, and thanking you for the space I have already occupied, I remain,

Yours sincerely,
ANNIE E. HOWSON.

FAREWELL TO MISS DICKSON

Former Secretary of Y.W.C.A. Here Given a Send-off.

(Fenelon Falls Gazette.)

On Wednesday evening a farewell service was tendered Miss Agnes I. Dickson, B.A., who leaves shortly for China, by the congregation and "Young People's Society of St. Andrew's church. The service was very interesting and impressive and was largely attended. Rev. Mr. Cameron of Toronto gave a very able address, and Miss Isabella Little, M. D., of Simcoe County, who goes to China in company with Miss Dickson, spoke briefly. Excellent music was supplied by the choir. During the evening Miss Dickson was made the recipient of a purse and the following address, which was read by Miss Fanny Brandon, and to which Miss Dickson replied feelingly, the presentation being made by Mrs. Chambers:

Dear Miss Dickson:

We, the congregation and Young People's Society of St. Andrew's church, feel that we cannot allow you to leave Fenelon Falls without endeavoring to express the deep love and esteem which we bear towards you. Your departure causes us both pain and pleasure; pain because your bright presence and willing assistance in our church work will be missing, and pleasure because you have been chosen and have been deemed worthy to serve the Master in the Foreign Mission Field. A great honor has fallen upon Fenelon Falls, but more particularly upon St. Andrew's church in being able to supply one willing to take up this most noble work and the feeling of gratitude and pleasure in the course you have taken is universal throughout the village. Your path will not be easy; many trials must beset it, but the strong arm of Him in whose service you are enlisting will never fail you. Your career will be watched by us with anxious, loving eyes, and we feel sure of not being disappointed in the great things which we expect of you.

We ask you in parting to accept this little gift as a slight token of our deep esteem, and to remember when in that distant land that you are being followed by the earnest prayers of the congregation of St. Andrew's, Fenelon Falls.

September 21st, 1904.

Miss Dickson and Miss Little were designated as missionaries at Erskine church, Montreal, last Friday night. Their destination is the Mission of Moukden, in South China, and they will sail from Vancouver by the steamer Empress of China on October 21st. They go as the representatives of the Women's Missionary Society of the Presbyterian church of Montreal, and hold their appointments from the Foreign Mission Board of the Presbyterian church in Canada.

AN OLD RESIDENT GONE

LATE WM. HOWSON CAME TO CANADA WHEN ONLY ABOUT EIGHT YEARS OLD.

Family Settled First in Virginia — The Close of an Eventful Life — Joined Loyalists in Suppressing MacKenzie Rebellion.

By the death of Mr. Wm. Howson, which occurred on the 21st inst. the country lost another of its earliest settlers and ablest residents. Mr. Howson was born in Yorkshire, England, on the 12th of May, 1816, and had, therefore, at the time of his death, reached the advanced age of 88 years and four months. When he was four years of age, his parents, having decided to emigrate to America, the family settled in Virginia, at what was then the village of Wheeling. Since they did not like some of the customs and laws in force in Virginia, particularly those which related to slavery, after a sojourn there of three years, they again emigrated to Canada. As an uncle of the late Mr. G. Howson had already settled in Otonabee, the family came to this township. They made the journey by wagon, entering Canada at Niagara, and skirting the northern shore of Lake Ontario as far as Cobourg. The journey was very difficult as well as tedious, as the roads in any part of Ontario 80 years ago were rough at the best, and in many parts there were no roads at all. The family located on the farm now owned by Mr. J. H. McIntyre where Mr. Howson resided with his parents until 1839.

Otonabee, when Mr. Howson first saw it, was an almost unbroken forest; there were only a few small clearings in the whole township, no roads, schools, churches or mills, and consequently the pressing need of the day was to clear the land of its heavy timber. In 1837, at the age of 21 years, Mr. Howson joined the loyalist forces, then engaged in suppressing the Mackenzie rebellion. In company with several of his neighbors, all of whom have passed away, with the exception of Mr. Joseph Wasson, ofTown, he marched to Toronto, and after a few weeks of service, the rebel forces having been dispersed, the company disbanded.

In 1839 the late Mr. Howson married Miss Julia Poole, a sister of the late Lt.-Col. Poole, of Peterborough, with whom he lived happily for more than 65 years, and who predeceased him by only two months. Immediately after his marriage, he took up his residence on lot No. 10, in the 9th concession of Otonabee, where he had lived ever since. In politics the late Mr. Howson was a staunch Liberal and voted at the last Provincial election, when over eighty years of age. He was a man respected by all who knew him for his sterling integrity and charitable disposition. He was buried in Keene cemetery on the 23rd inst., the funeral service being held in the Methodist church, of which he had been a consistent member and officebearer for upwards of 70 years.

The service was conducted by the Rev. M. Secombe, assisted by the Rev. Mr. McDonald, of the Presbyterian church. At the commencement of the service, the "Dead March in Saul" was played by Mrs. Dr. Harrison, and during the service Miss Mabel Harrison sang, "Some day the Silver Cord will Break." The pall bearers were the four sons and two sons-in-law of the deceased.

His family all survive him with the exception of his eldest daughter, Mary—the late Mrs. John Throop. The four sons are Messrs. John W., of Campbellford; Thos. P., of Otonabee; Geo. H. and Edwin C., of Iowa, and the two daughters are Mrs. W. A. Pugh, of Fraserville, and Mrs. Thos. Pugh, of Keene. There are also thirty-five grandchildren and seven great grandchildren.

DEATH OF MRS. GEORGE MAY

A Lady who Lived Here for Over 40 Years.

The death occurred in Toronto yesterday of Jessie Fair, daughter of the late George Fair, and wife of Mr. George May, of Toronto. Mrs. May came from Scotland to Peterborough 55 years ago, and lived here until 1891, when she moved to Toronto. She leaves a daughter, Miss Hattie May, of Toronto, and two sons, Harry, of Toronto, and George, of Dawson City. Two grandchildren also mourn her death, Madeline and Harry May, of Toronto. The deceased and her family were well-known in Peterborough. While here she was a member of St. Andrew's church. The funeral will take place to-morrow to Little Lake cemetery, from the residence of her sister, Mrs. J. Isbister, 200 London-st.

Street Railway Notice

On account of the Exhibition the cars on Tuesday afternoon will be run as follows:—

Taking the corner of Charlotte and George-sts. as a centre, one car will run north to the G.T.R. crossing on Water-st., one car will run to the Canadian General Electric Works, and all other cars will run to the Exhibition grounds. A five minute service will be given between Charlotte-st. and the Exhibition grounds, and the public are asked to kindly assist the Railway Company to handle the traffic on that day, as everything is new and not yet in perfect running order. 2d

DIED.

MAY—At 606 Spadina avenue, Toronto, on Sept. 24th, 1904, Mrs. Jessie May, widow of the late Henry May, aged 71.

The funeral will leave the residence of her brother-in-law, Mr. J. Isbister, 200 London street, Peterborough, on Tuesday afternoon, Sept. 27th, at 2 o'clock, and proceed to the Little Lake cemetery. Friends and acquaintances will kindly accept this invitation.

21ST. MARK'S HARVEST FESTIVAL

Thankful and Reverent Congregation Took Part.

Large congregations were present at both services. At the evening service the rector preached a strong and pointed sermon on "Gossip," the evil of using the tongue recklessly and thoughtlessly. The music was an enjoyable feature of the evening service. The choir sang the Dana Misericatur," by Mammatti, and two anthems, "He watereth the Hills," by Cabel Simpter, and "What shall I render unto the Lord," by C. Simper, Messrs. J. Legg and A. O. Sawyer taking the solos. The vegetables used at St. Luke's church for the Harvest decorations were given to the Protestant Home.

DID CHIEF USE GOOD JUDGEMENT

IN TAKING LATE GEORGE COWLING TO POLICE STATION.

Court Chemong I.O.F. Will Inquire into Matter To-night — The Chief's Statement — Court's Full Investigation as to his Course.

Did Chief Roisel exercise reasonable care and good judgment in taking the late George Cowling to the police cells on Thursday last?

This is the question which the executive committee of Court Chemong No. 530, Independent Order of Foresters will decide at a special meeting to be held this evening.

It will be remembered that the deceased Chief Ranger of the court, who was injured by falling from the top of a part of Meldrum's new mill, toppled off the sidewalk in front of Cavanagh's hotel on Simcoe street, on his way to consult a doctor.

The man was not riding a wheel at the time, as reported, and lay in the ditch in a helpless condition. Chief Roisel was summoned and took Mr. Cowling to the police station. It being discovered that he was ill he was promptly removed to the Nicholls Hospital, where he died shortly after.

THE CHIEF'S STORY.

"Yes; I believe the executive committee of the court is going to hold an investigation into the matter of my taking Mr. Cowling to the police station," remarked Chief Roisel this morning.

"Well, I am a member of the Court, but have not been asked to attend. I invite the fullest inquiry into my conduct and the committee is at perfect liberty to take any steps desired. Some members called on me Saturday night. I gave them my version of the affair and I challenge any one to prove that it is not true in every particular. I received a telephone message from Ted Cavanaugh that a man had fallen off the walk in front of his hotel twice and was in an awful state. I went down and found Mr. Cowling, whom I did not know, lying in the ditch. He had evidently been subject to spasms and had vomited over his coat and vest. I could not tell at first glance whether the man was suffering from a fit or was intoxicated. I put my hand in his pocket and drew out a letter addressed to George Cowling. I said to those standing around, 'Does anyone know George Cowling?' Receiving no reply I stopped a dray as it was passing and, with the assistance of another gentleman, lifted the helpless man on the vehicle. At the police station we gently carried him in and laid him on the floor of a cell. I then went out for Dr. Bingham and told him he had better come down and examine the man. I was returning to the station when one or two of deceased's fellow workmen ran up and told me that he had met with an accident. I then called up several doctors and telephoned for the ambulance. The man was taken to the hospital. Although I am a brother Forester I was not acquainted with Mr. Cowling, who only held office a short while and my night duties prevented me from attending lodge.

OTHER SIDE OF THE CASE.

A member of the committee stated to the Review to-day that Chief Roisel had consulted with Dr. Gray, coroner, and County Crown Attorney Wood, and that neither had favored an inquest, deeming it unnecessary. He added, "It is to receive the report of the committee that waited upon the Chief and to ascertain if certain street rumors are correct that this inquiry is being held. There has been a great deal of talk about our late Chief Ranger, who was a total abstainer, being taken into the police cells and we feel the whole circumstances should be investigated. It is only fair to Chief Roisel, to the friends of our late brother, and to the members of the Court."

STRANGERS' DAY

Large Number of Young Men at the Y.M.C.A.

Yesterady was Strangers' Day at the Y.M.C.A. and among the large number of men who attended the Men's Meeting at 4 o'clock were a goodly number of young men who have recently come to town.

The Male Choir led the live song service, which preceded the excellent address given by the President of the Fellowship Club, Mr. Harding. His Message was an impressive one, the subject being "Pardon."

Mr. Frank Turner, of Toronto, sang a sacred solo in his usual good voice, and Messrs. Herd and Shay a well rendered duett, "Jesus Savior Pilot Me."

The Strangers' Tea was held at the close of the meeting, there being men present from the following points: South Shields, Eng.; Lechlin; Orbowe, Breesbridge, Cardiff, Wales; Buffalo, Trenton, Campbellford, Collingwood, St. Johns, Newfoundland; Barrie, Femelon Falls, Baltimore, Maryland; Sherbrooke, and Newcastle-on-Tyne, England.

A FIVE MINUTE SERVICE

Will be Given by Street Railway During the Fair.

The Street Railway Company will give the best possible service during Tuesday and Wednesday, when the Fair will be in full swing. The following information has been given out for the enlightenment of the public:

Taking the corner of Charlotte st. and George st. as a centre one car will run to the Canadian General Electric Works, and all other cars will run to the Exhibition grounds. A five minute service will be given between Charlotte st. and the Exhibition grounds, and the public are asked to assist the Company to handle the traffic on that day, as everything is new and not in perfect running order.

EVERYTHING IS LOVELY

FOR OPENING DAY OF PETERBORO FAIR.

Entries Are Being Placed and List of Exhibitors is a Bulky One—Completion of All Arrangements

The weather has undoubtedly made up its mind to dish up a good article of pleasing conditions for the fair, which will be on in good shape to-morrow the big event of course being the official opening by the Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario at 2 o'clock.

There was nothing of any great interest to the public doing at the grounds to-day. Exhibitors were busy placing their stock and already it is quite evident that the list of entries will be considerably beyond last year's number. The exhibit in the main building promises to be away ahead of anything yet shown, and there will be a big improvement in the fine arts exhibit. The ladies are this year showing particular attention to this department.

The directors of the Exhibition have perfected excellent arrangements for the accommodation of the exhibits of the various departments. A plan adopted last year, and one that meets with great approval, is the showing of the horses and cattle, sheep and swine in different rings. This not only gives the judges a better opportunity but likewise is appreciated by the public and the exhibitor himself.

A fairly good string of horses will be entered for the speeding events, and thus the horse races will be a big feature. Some of the fastest horse flesh in this district will come up to the wire in the various trials of speed and the public may be sure of a good programme.

The probs for to-morrow are—Light to moderate winds, a few local showers, but mostly fair and moderately warm. A few local showers of course will not dismay any crowd that may gather in Peterborough, as many previous occasions have demonstrated, and on the whole it may be considered that the weather man will endeavor to ingratiate himself.

The Street Railway Company will put on a five minute service between Charlotte st. and the grounds and this will be a very great accommodation. Altogether things are shaping in fine style for the occasion of Peterborough Fair.

The big feature for to-morrow night is the band concert by the Black Watch in Brook st. rink. Tickets are going fast at Madill's. The band returns from the west with a grand record of enthusiastic receptions. Doors will be open at 7.15 to-morrow evening.

Take some of Hooper's fresh taffy and candy with you to the band concert to-morrow night. Corner of George and Brock sts.

GETTING READY FOR THE FRAY

EAST PETERBOROUGH CONSERVATIVES TO NOMINATE CANDIDATE.

Meeting Will be Held at Norwood on Monday Next — Mr. Stratton Says Ross Government Will Stave off Matters for Some Time Yet.

The Conservatives of East Peterborough, in view of the strong possibility of an early Provincial election, by reason of the Ross majority having been wiped out, do not intend to be caught slumbering.

Mr. Frank Birdsall, President of the East Peterborough Association, who was in town today, states that a meeting of the Association has been called for Monday next at Norwood, to take steps to place a candidate in the field.

It is expected there will be a large attendance from every part of the riding, on Monday, Oct. 3rd. Several names are being freely discussed as the standard bearer of the party.

It is believed that with a winning cause and united organization there will be no difficulty in capturing the seat and displacing Mr. Anderson, the present member.

Hon. J. R. Stratton, Provincial Secretary, was asked this morning if the Ross administration would go to the country at once.

"No I do not think so," he rejoined. "When will the elections take place?"

"Oh, not for some time yet."

"The Conservatives of East Peterborough are going to put a man in the field at once," added the reporter.

"Well, all I can say at present is that they are in plenty of time. I am not looking for an immediate contest in the Province," concluded the Provincial Secretary as he walked away.

A FORESTER'S FUNERAL

The funeral of the late George F. Cowling took place on Saturday afternoon from his late residence, 176 Edinburgh street, to the Little Lake cemetery. The funeral was conducted under the auspices of Court Chemong No. 530, I.O.F., of which the deceased was Chief Ranger. The services at the house were conducted by the Rev. W. J. Jolliffe and the Rev. Dr. Crothers, reference being made to the deceased as a faithful Bible student of the Y.M.C.A. and of his unflinching temperance principles. There were many beautiful floral tributes to the memory of the deceased, including wreaths from Courts Chemong and Queen I.O.F., the Carpenters Union and from various societies and friends of the Methodist churches. The pall bearers were Bros. A. Allison P.C.R., J. W. Sayers R.S., G. W. Powell F.S., W. Miles S. W., D. Wallace V.C.R., and T. Dale O.D. Notwithstanding the rain and muddy streets, quite a number of the Foresters walked ahead of the hearse and there were also representations of the Carpenters' Union and Foresters attending in cabs. The service at the cemetery was conducted by the Rev. Dr. Crothers, the Foresters' services being read by Bros. Allison and Miles. The officers of the High Court of Eastern Ontario telegraphed to the Recording Secretary conveying their deep sympathy to the widow and friends of the departed brother.

JOE THOMPSON IN COURT

THREE CHARGES AGAINST HIM — HE ELECTED TO BE TRIED BY JURY.

Two Women in Court — Insulting and Abusive Language Charged — A Young Man in Trouble.

Three cases came up before Magistrate Dumble this morning. Joseph Thompson, alias Murphy, the burglar arrested by the police last week, appeared to answer for three charges. These charges are in detail as follows:

1. That Joseph Murphy did unlawfully have in his possession an offensive weapon, that is to say, a five-chamber loaded revolver or pistol, for a purpose dangerous to the public peace, contrary to the provisions of the criminal code.

2. That Joseph Murphy did unlawfully break into and enter the dwelling house of Leonard Hailey and in said dwelling house did steal contrary to the criminal code one coat, one pair of trousers, one pair of suspenders, one watch chain and fob, and two silk handkerchiefs of the goods and chattels of the said Leonard Hailey.

3 That Joseph Murphy did unlawfully and wilfully have in his possession an explosive substance, namely, nitro-glycerine, with intent by means thereof to cause serious injury to property contrary to the provisions of the criminal code.

Murphy or Thompson pleaded not guilty to all three charges and elected to be tried by jury.

Mrs Louie had her old friend, Mrs. Valois in court again to answer once more the charge of using grossly insulting and abusive language. This is the second time the two have been involved in the same charge. The refrain of the popular song, "Any rags, any bones, any bottles to-day," entered prominently into this case. It appears that Mrs. Valois, according to Mrs. Louie, shouted "Rags, bones and rubber," and waved her coat when passing the house of the latter. The charge was dismissed.

A young man was fined $2.00 and costs, amounting in all to $4.00, for using grossly insulting and abusive language.

FINE ITALIAN TONGUE

HAS MR. D. O'CONNELL WHO MADE APPLICATION FOR NATURALIZATION OF 144 ITALIANS.

The High Court Opens — Stay of Proceedings in the Crookford Case

What is regarded as an unmistakeable sign that the general elections are approaching took place in the High Court of Justice this afternoon, when Mr. D. O'Connell presented the names of one hundred and forty-four Italians, and applied for naturalisation. It was no little task for Mr. O'Connell to pronounce the rather peculiar names constituting the list, but ere he had finished he had developed a fine Italian tongue, which suggested remarkable capabilities as a linguist. The applications were filed.

Francis Birdsall, Aspbodel, gentleman.
George Elliott, Peterborough, woodranger.
Alfred J. Gaddy, Otonabee, farmer.
Thos. G. Gillespie, Peterborough, carpenter.
Henry Humphries, Asphodel, farmer.
Edward Hawthorne, Dummer, farmer.
Robt. H. Hicks, Peterborough, coal merchant.
Alexander Irwin, Peterborough, farmer.
H. P. Kennedy, Peterborough, meat merchant.
P. A. Kearney, Smith, merchant.
J. J. Lundy, Ashburnham, gentleman.
A. E. Mosely, Peterborough, gentleman.

His Lordship briefly addressed the jurors. He regretted that the Sheriff of the County was unable to be present for reasons deeply deplored, but the gentleman whom he had appointed to attend to the present sittings had informed him officially that there were no cases to be investigated by the jury. There were one or two cases of a minor character that he would look into. This was regarded as a condition on which His Lordship congratulated the people of the Town and County. It spoke volumes for the observance of law and the preservation of order. The jurors, he pointed out, would have to inspect the jail, and it was their privilege also to visit other places in receipt of public money. The manifold evidences of increased prosperity among the people were also referred to as reasons for congratulation.

Mr. Hugh O'Leary, K.C., of Lindsay announced to the court that he had received a letter from the Attorney-General, instructing him to stay proceedings in the case against George Crookford, for writing a letter to a minister named Lorymer, threatening to kill. Further investigations pending.

The Court then proceeded with the first case, Calcutt vs. Cartwright.

The lawyers present when Court opened were Messrs. E. B. Edwards, K. C.; G. M. Sager, R. M. Dunnistown, F. D. Kerr, J. W. Bennett, John Green, D. O'Connell, G. H. Watson, K.C., Toronto; Hugh O'Leary, K. C., Lindsay.

Edward Taylor, charged with theft of a watch, appeared in court, and elected to be tried by the County Judge.

—Wm. Christie, of Asphodel, was arraigned before Magistrate Edmison this morning, charged with creating a disturbance on a C.P.R. train here a few days ago. He was remanded until Thursday.

Woodstock, Sept. 26.—At the convention of Conservatives of the North Riding of Oxford in the City Hall here Saturday James G. Wallace, barrister, of Woodstock, was unanimously nominated as the Conservative candidate for the next Dominion elections, while Robert E. Butler, who was Col. Munro's opponent last January in the bye-election, was nominated for the Provincial House. Mr. Butler on the final ballot received 79 votes, Charles A. Mums 29 and John Youngs 9. The nomination was then made unanimous.

Both nominees will prove strong candidates, and the prospect is that they will receive enthusiastic support. There were about 120 delegates at the convention, nearly every division in the constituency being fully represented.

Will Ask Nations of World For Second Hague Congress.

Washington, Sept. 26.—President Roosevelt announced Saturday that at an early date he would ask the nations of the world to join in a second congress at The Hague for the promotion of arbitration.

The occasion of the announcement was the reception by the President of the delegates of the Inter-Parliamentary Union, which recently held a session at St. Louis.

American Steamer Seized.

Vancouver, B. C., Sept. 26.—The American steamer Alert of Bellingham, and two large scows, one of them loaded with salmon and $1,000 worth of nets, have been seized by the Ruth, a Dominion Government fisheries protection steamer. The value of the property seized is about $15,000. The authorities allege that the American boat was poaching on fisheries 125 miles from the American boundary. The seized steamer has been brought to this port.

May Come At Any Time.

Winnipeg, Man., Sept. 26.—On Saturday, 700 members of the Allied Mechanical Trades Union employed by the C.P.R. went out on strike. Their action has no bearing upon the situation as regards to carmen, but it is said that within a few days the demands of the men will either have been agreed to or 2,000 employes of the company, representing the entire staff employed in the car shops from St. John to Vancouver, will be wanting.

Polish Tongue Under Ban.

Berlin, Sept. 26.—One of the most stringent enactments ever issued by the Prussian Government against the Poles has just been promulgated. Some time ago schoolmasters were prohibited from using the Polish language in school hours, but the latest ukase warns them against using Polish outside of school hours in communicating with their families or at social gatherings.

Mining Town Swept Away.

El Paso, Texas, Sept. 26.—Floods in Chihuahua, Mexico, have destroyed Cusihuiriachina, a mining town in the interior of the State. Every house was swept away, but no lives were lost. Over the Border

By ... ROBERT BARR.

Author of "Jennie Baxter, Journalist," Etc.

Copyright, 1903, by Frederick A. Stokes Co.

"Has Captain Bent arrived with his prisoner?"

"Yes, excellency. He came at sunset."

"Is he sure of his man?"

"He appears to be so, sir."

"Were any papers found on him?"

"Yes, excellency."

"The other prisoner, Wentworth, is little more than a youth, I am told."

"He is very young, excellency."

"How came he to be set on an important outward post that night?"

"There was danger of attack, and I placed him there of deliberate purpose. He was most reluctant to go, making one excuse and then another, saying he was ill, and what not. For more than a month he has been under suspicion of communicating with malignants, although we had no direct proof. He had been seen stealing away from the domain of Lord Rudby, the chief of the disaffected in this district. On the night in question he was watched, and as soon as he supposed himself alone he deserted his post, put spurs to his horse and rode straight across country to Rudby Hall."

"And was arrested there?"

"No, excellency. An unlooked for event happened. He rode out from the grounds of the hall, fighting his way, as it appeared, against a band of Rudby's followers, who were attacking him, and ran into the arms of our men, who were watching for him. The attacking party, seeing, as they supposed, an unknown force of rescuers, turned and fled. The night was dark, and the account of what took place is confused, but Wentworth was carried back to Corbiton, tried and condemned for deserting while on duty and holding commerce with the enemy."

"Umph! What version did Wentworth give of the affair?"

"He maintained he was no traitor, but did not give any explanation of his absence from duty."

"I thought Rudby had surrendered all arms and had taken the oath to remain neutral?"

"His men were armed with staves only, and so Wentworth, better equipped, held his own against them."

"What view did the court take of this affray?"

"They thought it merely a feint to cover the retreat of a discovered traitor. The night, as I said, was dark, and our men, being mounted, could not move silently. Knowing the house would be searched if Wentworth was hidden, this plan of seeming enmity against him was prepared beforehand in case of discovery."

"How old a man is Rudby?"

"Nearing fifty."

"What family has he?"

"His two sons are supposed to be with the king at Oxford. There is one daughter at Rudby Hall."

"Humph! Is this the young man who is said to be a son of the late scoundrel, Strafford?"

"Yes, excellency."

"In that very blood is hatred of the people, contumely and all arrogance. At heart he must be a royalist. And yet—and yet— Where was he brought up?"

"On the estate of Sir John Warburton, dead these some years back. Warburton was his grandfather."

"Where is the Warburton estate?"

"It adjoins the lands of Rudby."

"A-h! Is the boy's mother living?"

"No. His only relative is a sister who seems to be the most bitter king hater in all the land."

"Is there not a chance the boy was on his way to see his sister?"

"It was thought not. She has been at liberty to visit him here and has done so on various occasions."

"Has Wentworth ever been in action?"

"Oh, yes, excellency, and he acquitted himself bravely enough."

"No hanging back, no wavering in the face of the foe?"

"No, excellency."

"Humph! Send Captain Bent to me with the papers. When he is gone I wish you to bring me a trooper, some silent man who can be depended upon, an unerring marksman."

When Captain Bent arrived, he handed to the general the papers he had taken from Armstrong. Cromwell examined them with great minuteness by the light of the candles, then set them in a bunch on the table without comment of any kind.

"Did your prisoner resist at all or make any attempt at escape?"

"No, general."

"He made no protest then?"

"He said England and Scotland were at peace, that he therefore needed no passport; that his arrest was illegal, and that you would be the first to admit as much."

"Humph. Was he thoroughly searched? Are you sure he had no other papers than these?"

"Quite sure, general."

"Very good. Bring the man here. If the door is open, come in with him. If it is shut, wait until you are called."

When the captain left the room the colonel quipped with his trigger, who bore a matchlock. Cromwell dismissed Perlock, then said to the trooper:

"You will take your place in that gallery and remain there, making no sound. Keep your ears shut and your eyes open. A man will be standing before me. If I raise my hand thus, you will shoot him dead. See that you make no mistake, and I warn you to shoot straight. Go!"

CHAPTER XIII.

When Captain Bent entered the galleried room with his prisoner, he found Cromwell seated at the table, his head bowed over some pages of manuscript on which he was busily writing. The general did not look up for a full minute, until he had finished the sentence he was inditing, then he raised his head and said quietly to the captain:

"Go!"

For one brief and lamentable instant the discipline which held the captain in its bonds relaxed, and he replied in surprise:

"And leave him unguarded, sir?"

Cromwell said nothing, but a look of such devilish ferocity came into his piercing gray eyes that the captain staggered as if he had received a blow, gasped, turned and fled. When the commander spoke to Armstrong there was no trace of resentment or anger in his tones.

"Will you oblige me by closing that door which Captain Bent has stupidly left open? You are nearer it than I."

Armstrong with a bow did what he was requested to do and returned to his place beside the table.

"I fear I must begin with an apology, a form of speech to which I am unaccustomed. You have been stopped quite without just cause, and I trust you have met with no inconvenience or harsh treatment in consequence?"

"With neither, General Cromwell, if I am not at fault in so addressing you. I suspect that there are not two such men as you in the army of the parliament."

Cromwell paid no heed to the compliment, if such was intended, but, although his voice was suave, his keen eye searched the prisoner like an east wind.

"The stoppage may indeed save you further annoyance if you intend to travel about the country, for I will give you a pass likely to prevent such a mistake in future. You are in the cattle trade, I am told?"

"Yes, general."

"It is a commendable traffic, with which I have no desire to interfere. You know of no reason for your arrestment by my stupid captain?"

"Truth to tell, your honor, and I know a very good reason for it."

"Humph! And what is that?"

"Some nights since, as I was making for the English line, I stopped for refreshment at an inn where I had been accustomed to halt in my travels. To my amazement, I was refused admittance by a man who stood on guard. We had a bit of a debate, which ended in my overpowering him and forcing an entrance, and which was more surprised—the dozen there gathered together, or me, with their sentry under my oxter—it would be difficult to tell. Swords were drawn, and I might have come badly out of the encounter had it not been that a friend of mine among the assemblage recognized me."

"I suppose you wish to mention no names?"

"I see no objection," continued Armstrong innocently. "I take it that the men were quite within their right in gathering there, although I contended they exceeded their right in trying to keep me out of a public house. My friend was the Earl of Traquair. These gentlemen, finding I was for England, asked me to carry a message to the king, but I explained that I had no wish to interfere in matters which did not concern me, and they parted to meet again somewhere else. There was a great spiore about a spy that escaped, and I have no doubt if he saw me there and heard the proposal made to me he might well have brought my name and description across the border. At least that was the way I reasoned it out with myself."

"It is very like you are right. Spies, unfortunately, seem to be necessary when a country is in a state of war. Many unjustifiable acts are then committed, including the arresting of innocent men. But I am anxious nothing shall be done that will give just cause of offense to Scotland, a God fearing country and a friendly. When such injustice happens, as it has happened in your case, I try to make amend. How far south do you propose to travel?"

"I may go the length of Manchester or Birmingham. The distance and the time will depend on the state of trade."

"If you will tell me places you intend to visit I will include them in the pass I shall now write for you."

"That I cannot say just at the moment. I wish to follow trade wherever it leads me."

"Then an inclusive pass, extending as far south as Manchester, will meet your needs?"

"It will more than meet them, general," said Armstrong, with supreme indifference.

"As you carry no message from Traquair to the king I can write Oxford on your permit as easily as Manchester."

"Thank you, general; but Manchester will be far enough."

"I may say that we are strict about those whom we allow to journey to and fro at the present time, and if you should overstep the limit of this document you are liable to investigation and delay, and I may not be so near at hand on the next occasion."

"I quite understand, and if I wished to go farther south I would have no hesitation in begging permission of your excellency, but I doubt if I shall even see Manchester."

"You will not be leaving Corbiton until the morning, of course?"

"No, general. I know when I am well housed."

"Then, as I have much to do, I will make out your paper later, and it will be handed to you in the morning."

"Thank you, general."

After giving some laconic instructions touching the welfare of the northerner to Captain Bent, who was hovering uneasily in the outside hall, Cromwell, bidding his enforced guest a cordial farewell, ordered Wentworth to be brought to him and retired once more into the dim council chamber.

With hands clasped behind him and head bent, he strode slowly up and down the long room in deep meditation, vanishing into the gloom at the farther end and reappearing in the limited circle of light that surrounded the two candles, for the torches had long since smoked themselves out, and there had been no replacement of them, none daring to enter that room unsummoned while the leader was within it. The watcher in the gallery felt rather than saw that there was an ominous frown on the lowered face as the commander waited for the second prisoner, over whom hung sentence of death.

This time a clanking of chains announced the new arrival, who was preceded by Colonel Perlock and accompanied by two soldiers, one on either side of him. The young fellow, who shuffled up to the table dragging his irons, cast an anxious look at the forbidding face of the man who was to be his final judge, in whose word lay life or death for him, and he found there little to comfort him. Cromwell seated himself once more and said gruffly:

"Take off those fetters."

When the command was complied with the general dismissed the trio and sat for some moments in silence, reading the frank, open face of his opposite.

"You are to be shot at daybreak to-morrow," he began in harsh tones that echoed dismally from the raftered ceiling. I have examined the evidence, and I find your condemnation just."

"I have never questioned the verdict, general, nor did I make appeal."

The shaggy brows came down over Cromwell's eyes, but his face cleared perceptibly.

"You own the penalty right?"

"Sir, it is partly right and partly wrong, like most things in this world. It is right to punish me for deserting my post; it is wrong to brand me a traitor."

"Ah, you have found your voice at last, and there is some courage behind it. Desertion is an unpardonable crime. The point I press upon you is this: Your life is forfeit; yet, although your fault is unpardonable, I do not say it cannot be compensated for. Even my enemies admit I am an honest trader. I will bargain with you for your life. You shall buy it of me, and I shall pay the price, even though I do not forgive the crime. We will first, if you please, clear up the charge of treachery. You were visiting your own home that night, and as it is on the farther side of Rudby Hall your accusers naturally thought you had a rendezvous there?"

"No, general; it was my intention to have visited Rudby Hall."

Housework.

A very wise preacher rises to remark: "That woman's work is never done is usually her own fault. The great knack of getting on in doing housework is to know which duties may be slighted, thus gaining time to expend upon those which demand one's best efforts. The woman who spends the same length of time ironing a sheet that she spends in ironing a damask tablecloth ought to work from sun to sun and even far into the night." Of course the woman who spends so much time on her sheets will claim that "what is worth doing at all is worth doing well," but the question comes simply in the meaning of the word well. The woman who spends a great deal of time on things which are of little or no importance never has the time for great duties.

Don't Become a Back Number.

A woman busy with the cares of her family fails to study and place at their true value her duties to her mind as well as to her body and her household. She makes no mental progress as the years go on, loses the power of companionship with her children, grows discontented and fretful and passes the best years of her life in dull, ignorant unhappiness. Had she seen the limitations and laws of her physical and mental nature she would have known that it was not selfish to snatch a half hour every day for the refreshment of her mind in a botanizing walk or a quiet time for thinking in the open air or a locking of her chamber door while she read two or three pages of a good author.—Exchange.

65 KILLED AND 125 HURT

Head-On Collision Results in a Fearful Disaster.

Terrible United States Railway Wreck Near Newmarket in the State of Tennessee—Conductor Caldwell Said, "It Was My Fault I Misread My Orders"—Every Car On One Train Was Demolished.

Knoxville, Tenn., Sept. 26.—In a collision at 10.20 o'clock Saturday on the Southern Railway, three miles west of of Newmarket, a small town twenty-one miles from this city, fully sixty-five persons lost their lives. Most of them were killed outright, but probably a score have died during the day. About one hundred and twenty-five were injured seriously. Several of these will die.

The collision was of two passenger trains, both heavily laden with passengers. Train No. 12, eastbound, left this city at 9.35 o'clock. It was a heavy vestibule train pulling four sleeping cars. Train No. 15, westbound, was due in this city from Bristol at 11 o'clock, and the engineer and conductor had orders to await the coming of the eastbound train at Newmarket, but overlooked their orders.

Conductor Caldwell of train No. 15 when asked by a passenger as to the cause of the wreck said:

"It was my fault. I misread my orders."

Every car on train No. 15 was demolished. The sleeping cars on train No. 12 escaped without injury and no one in them was hurt.

The trains were due to pass at Hodge Station, but collided about one mile and a half west of that place, the westbound train running past the meeting point. Both engineers were killed.

Six Persons Hurt—One Dead.

Rochester, N.Y., Sept. 26.—Six persons who were injured in a wreck on the New York Central, a short distance east of Lyons, early yesterday morning were brought to Rochester hospitals. Three sleepers on the western express train, bound from New York to Chicago, left the rails and threw the passengers to the floors of the coaches.

Just as the train came to a standstill, a fast freight, eastbound, ran into the derailed cars. Mrs. Newman Erbs, wife of the vice-president of the Pere Marquette Railroad, who was brought here with both limbs cut off, died at the hospital. Mr. Erbs was bruised and injured.

The following are the other injured passengers who were brought here:

Sarah Lowen, 424 Woodward avenue, Detroit, Mich, bruised and cut; Richard Heaney, San Francisco, a brewer, bruised and cut; Samuel Stern, Kansas City, bruised and cut about the head and shoulders; Mrs. Stern, bruised and suffering from shock.

Engine Rolled Over and Over.

Winnipeg, Sept. 26. — Spreading rails were accountable for a serious accident to the eastbound transcontinental train, four miles this side of Moosomin, and as a result seven men were more or less seriously injured. The engineer was badly jammed and received internal injuries of a serious nature. Six cars were badly smashed and many passengers had narrow escapes. All the passengers injured were Italians on the way from Fernie mines en route to Italy.

Killed By a Train.

Chatham, Sept. 26.—James Shuler, a colored farm labor, who hails from Harwich, while working on the C. T. R. tracks near the western city limits early yesterday morning was struck by a westbound train and instantly killed. Shuler was 43 years of age and unmarried.

13 Saved, But 4 Perished.

St. John's, Nfld., Sept. 26. — The Swedish steamer Kron Prins Gustav, from Rotterdam for Wabana, has arrived here. She reports having had a frightful experience. She will go into dry dock for repairs. The French fishing vessel Celeste is reported to have gone ashore on the west coast during a gale. Eighteen of her crew were saved, but four perished.

Drowned in Canoe.

Dort Francis, Sept. 26.—A sad accident occurred here yesterday, whereby a young man, Warner Hodgins of Lucan, Ont., was drowned. He and a companion by the name of McKenzie were coming down the river in a canoe, and when passing through the rapids above Fort Francis upset. Hodgins became entangled and was held under. He was a clerk in H. Williams' store.

Boy Shoots Chum.

Winnipeg, Sept. 26.—Gordon Martin, the 14-year-old son of T. W. Martin, while out hunting for chickens, near Fort Rouge, yesterday afternoon, with two companions, was accidentally shot in the head and will die. The bullet came from the rifle of Norman D'Arcy, who is nearly prostrated.

Fell From a Silo.

Unionville, Sept. 26.—On Friday afternoon, while engaged in working on a silo on the farm of A. G. Gormley, near this village, John Reid, a well-known farmer, lost his footing and fell to the ground, a distance of 29 feet. In falling, he sustained a dislocated hip and a broken ankle, and was generally severely shaken up.

Killed While Intoxicated.

Binscarth, Man., Sept. 26.—While driving home Friday night, John Leduox, a halfbreed, was killed. It is supposed that he drove over a steep hill, having taken the wrong trail. Leduox was under the influence of liquor at the time of the fatality.

Lyon World's Champion.

John Stairs, Ex-M.P., Dead.

Toronto, Sept. 26.—One of the foremost men of the Maritime Provinces died at the General Hospital last night in the person of John Fits-William Stairs, ex-M.P. of Halifax. Mr. Stairs was passing through Toronto early in September and was taken ill with heart trouble. His wife and son, Gilbert S., were present at the time of his death. Mr. Stairs was born in Halifax in 1848, and he was member for Halifax in the Dominion House from 1883 to 1896.

Ease For Tired Feet.

Where one has to stand much throughout the day a nightly warm bath in ammoniated water is said to do wonders in taking fatigue out of the feet. A teaspoonful of ammonia is added to the foot bath or basin of warm water, and in this the feet are immersed for a good quarter of an hour. Then the feet are dried and while still warm and moist are rubbed with a little vaseline. In the morning the feet are rubbed all over with French chalk. This treatment is said to remove the sting and ease the feet from the strain of excessive walking and standing.

New Lemonade.

Boil together two cupfuls of sugar and three cupfuls of water ten minutes. Add the grated rind of one lemon and the juice of three. Allow this to cool and at serving time add one egg, beaten until very light and creamy, and one bottle of effervescent table water poured from some height in order that the mixture may foam. Serve with cracked ice in the glasses.

A MODIFIED HOME RULE

Irish Landlords Favor Constitution of Financial Council.

Important Scheme Outlined For Elective Body to Administer the Annual Expenditure of the $30,000,000 Granted Annually—Statutory Body Suggested to Deal With All Private Bill Legislation Affecting Ireland.

London, Sept. 26.—The report of the committee on organization of the Irish Reform Association, which was adopted at a meeting presided over by Lord Dunraven, at Dublin, on Friday, was issued last night. The report outlines an important scheme for the devolution of the Irish Government in finance and local business. It suggests the constitution of an Irish financial council, composed of twenty-four members, under the presidency of the Lord Lieutenant, and with the Chief Secretary for Ireland as vice-president, twelve members to be elected by groups of existing Parliamentary constituencies and twelve to be nominated by the Crown; one-third of the members to retire every three years.

The functions of the council will be to administer the $30,000,000 expended annually on Irish services, Parliament, however, retaining a controlling power enabling the House of Commons to reverse the council's decisions. The report further suggests that a statutory body should be created, consisting of Irish representative peers and Irish members of the House of Commons, in addition to the proposed financial council, and to which should be delegated all private bill legislation affecting Ireland and any other Irish business that might be referred to it by Parliament.

The report concludes by the submission of its proposals to a Royal Commission.

REDMOND PRAISES BLAKE.

No Man More Respectfully Listened to By Men of All Parties.

Niagara Falls, N. Y., Sept. 26.—John Redmond and party are here, at the Prospect House. The noted Irish member of Parliament has just completed a month's tour of the United States and has been speaking continuously. He leaves here on the 2.25 train this afternoon for Toronto, and will speak in that city this evening. He will speak in Ottawa on the 28th, and in Montreal on the 29th.

When asked concerning Edward Blake, M.P., the well known Canadian statesman, and his work for Ireland, Mr. Redmond said: "Mr. Blake gave up his Canadian career in order to assist Ireland, and for the cause of home rule, of which he has been a supporter all his life. He brought enormous strength to our movement by his prestige, experience and eloquence. On the question of home rule and on financial questions affecting Ireland, he has delivered many powerful speeches in the House of Commons. There is no man in the House who carries more weight and is listened to with more respect by the English statesmen of all parties.

"Mr. Blake has taken a very active part in our organization in Ireland, and is a most popular man in our party. Recently an elaborate banquet was given him in the dining-room of the House by the Irish party, in recognition of his great work. I am afraid, however, that by his close attention to his duties and his work for our cause he has injured his health. He never thinks of himself, but is indefatigable in working for Ireland."

With Mr. Redmond are his wife and daughter, as well as Patrick O'Brien and Capt. A. J. C. Donelan, both members of the Irish Parliamentary party.

DAMAGE TO CROPS.

Front Hills Tobacco, Bean and Corn Crops About Chatham.

Chatham, Sept. 26.—"The frosts of last week have killed nearly all of the tobacco, bean and corn crops on the lake shores," was the startling statement made by T. Broadwood. "All of my crops are gone," continued he. "Jas. Woods, a neighbor of mine on the lake shore, has five acres of tobacco all spoiled and badly scorched; S. Conlan has five acres of tobacco gone; a large field of tobacco on the Everitt place is ruined, and Mr. Banning has all of his tobacco and late beans completely gone. James McGuigan's crops, strange to say, are all right. Tomatoes and cucumbers are greatly damaged."

Wind Shakes Fruit.

St. Catharines, Sept. 26.—The heavy windstorm which prevailed here Saturday proved disastrous to the fruit in some sections. A lot of peaches, pears and apples were blown down, which injures them for shipment. The wind blew down a large smokestack on the Welland Vale factory, which crushed through the roof causing damage.

What Laurier Has Done.

London, Sept. 26.—(C. A. P.)—The Morning Post's Berlin correspondent says Sir Wilfrid Laurier's speech appears to have shaken German confidence in the assertions of British Liberal leaders that the colonies will have nothing to say to Mr. Chamberlain's policy.

Little Girl Had Eczema

Which Defied All Treatment Until Dr. Chase's Ointment Was Used and Cured Her.

Many children suffer from scald head and eczema who could be cured if their parents only knew about Dr. Chase's Ointment.

Mr. C. Wiley, who is employed as cooper by the Kennedy & Davis Milling Company, Lindsay, Ont., states: "I used Dr. Chase's Ointment for eczema on my little girl some 'few years ago, and soon brought about a thorough and permanent cure. She suffered for considerable time, and although we tried a great many remedies, Dr. Chase's Ointment was the only preparation to prove effective. I cannot speak too highly of Dr. Chase's Ointment, as it certainly effected a prompt and permanent cure in this case."

Dr. Chase's Ointment, 60 cents a box, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Company, Toronto. To protect you against imitations, the portrait and signature of Dr. A. W. Chase, the famous receipt book author, are on every box.

The Newest Card Cases

One of the latest decrees of fashion is that the card case shall match in color the costume of "milady." These can be easily and quickly made from velvet leather, and when lined with silk of the same or a contrasting shade, they look very pretty. The Review Stationery Department has a full line of velvet leather in the popular shades of brown, green, grey and red. The leather for the case costs but a trifle, and it may have a design fashioned upon it, or a pretty silver initial fastened on to render it more elaborate.—The Review Stationery Department.

VERY PAINFUL ACCIDENT

ARCHIE JOHNSTON OF CAVANVILLE LOSES THE RIGHT FOOT.

Was Knocked Down by a Train on Saturday and Suffered Serious Injuries.

Arthur Johnston, the 15-year-old son of the station agent at Cavanville, suffered the loss of a foot on Saturday evening last. The boy, it appears, was placing the signal lights for the night, and when re-crossing the track did not avoid a moving freight train. It is said that a signal was given him, but the boy evidently mistook it for an outgoing train. He was knocked down and six cars ran over his right leg, almost severing the foot. His shoulder was also dislocated and the socket splintered. It was a very painful accident and the little fellow was placed in a car and brought to Peterborough. Here he was conveyed to Nicholls' Hospital and Dr. Carmichael, Dr. Young and Dr. Gray were called and deemed it necessary to amputate the right foot. The boy suffered greatly as the result of his injuries, but although weakened considerably is reported to be doing favorably to-day.

EARL SCHWEIR LOOSE AGAIN

The Chief of Police has received the following letter from Mr. Chester Ferrier, superintendent of the Mimico Industrial School: Chief Constable, Peterborough, Ont:

Dear Sir,—A little boy named Earl Schweir of Peterborough was committed to this school a short time ago. He ran away a few days ago. Although we have made a diligent search for him in this section of the country we have so far been unable to find him. He may find his way ultimately to his home. Will you kindly have a lookout for him, and if he comes to Peterborough let me know.

Yours sincerely,
CHESTER FERRIER,
Supt.

This is the lad who caused his parents and the police so much trouble a little while ago. It will be remembered that he frequently ran away from home, and stole his way on the cars to Port Hope and other places. His last exploit there was stealing a horse and making his way to Fenelon Falls before he was captured. It will also be remembered that the Children's Aid Society complained of having a boy of his tender age sent to jail. His escape from the Mimico school confirms the judgment of the police.

Any information about the boy will be thankfully received at the police station.

Lindsay Post, Saturday:—Mr. W. Gould, of Peterborough, and Mr. P. Clancy, of the same place, were in our Bregog town yesterday, attending the Fair.——Mrs. Seth Adams and two children, of Peterborough, are spending Fair days with her sister, Mrs. B. J. Elliott, and other friends in town.

IDEAL SUNDAY SCHOOL

ABLE SERMONS DELIVERED BY REV. DR. CROTHERS.

Consider how the Home Must Assist the Sabbath School — The Duty of the parents.

Yesterday in George-st. church Rev. Dr. Crothers preached two sermons that must have been appreciated by all hearing them who are engaged in Sunday school work. In the morning he discussed how parents may help the school, and presented in a very able manner some of the fundamental principles to be recognized in work among the young. His text was Luke 1, 66: "What manner of child shall this be?" The historical setting of the text was explained—the naming of John, meaning the gift of God, and the speaker hoped that every child would be so regarded. The coming teachers, authors, business and political men were in the homes of to-day, and in the troops of children going to and from school. The importance of giving attention to children was freely admitted on all sides. They were not sheets of white paper on which to write anything, but in which there was one self-determining principle, hence the propriety of the question in the text. There was a disposition for a child to go astray early, and we ought to watch in order to lead the children to the Lord Jesus Christ. Reference was made to what Dr. Cayler had said: if he had to live his life over again he would spend it in preventive work among the young.

The speaker first considered the question as answered in the home. The sweetest word in the language was "home. The life there was before that of the Sunday school; the institution of the family was fundamental, and the obligation of parents to instruct their children was inalienable. First of all, the home was the place of first opportunities, such as no teacher could possibly have. The home was the seat of authority; statements there made were received without doubt or hesitancy, and it was a very serious thing to deceive a child or shake his faith. Home was the place of unconscious influence. If honor, courage, truthfulness, unselfishness, were not taught there, it would be very difficult to teach them in any other place. In the home occurred many opportunities for illustrating religion. Ofttimes the pleasantest remarks and smiles were kept for outside and the cheapest words used in the home.

ASSISTING THE TEACHER.

Consideration was next given to the question as answered in the school. Parents should encourage children to attend, and should likewise take an interest in their work, assisting them to prepare next Sunday's lesson. Very discouraging was it to a teacher to sit down before a class that knew little or nothing of the lesson. We are, said the speaker, to support the teachers as they try to train our children morally. There is nothing more needed than a revival of good, old-fashioned honesty. Very often parents look upon the stealing of apples as a trivial offence. We ought also to aid the teachers in maintaining discipline. We have not the same opportunities via Sunday school as exist in the Public school, and so when the teachers complain about our children we should clasp our hands with the teachers around the boys and girls, and thus be a means of saving them.

THE CATECHISM.

We must help the teachers as they teach the catechism. Our children must have positive views of religious truth. Those who object say, if you give children views of religious truth it will prejudice them. We are bound as parents to prejudice our children in certain ways. We are bound to give them views in regard to political and scientific matters, so we are bound to give our children views in reference to religious matters. What was good enough for us is good enough for our children, and there should be no carelessness in that particular. People of positive opinions are those who look at the opposite. We are to give them an idea of the history of our church. I am speaking now of the Methodist Church and not in criticism of other churches. It would be a good thing for the parents to come to school themselves occasionally, and join hand in hand with the teachers to make it a great success.

THE IDEAL SUNDAY SCHOOL.

In the evening Rev. Dr. Crothers delivered a sermon on the subject, "The Ideal Sunday School," his text being Zechariah 8: 5, "And the streets of the city shall be full of boys and girls, playing in the streets." Human nature, said the speaker, was the same the world over. He pitied the man or woman who did not love to see the boys and girls at play. He referred to Zechariah as one of the prophets who returned from captivity in Babylon, to assist in rebuilding the temple at Jerusalem. This part of his prophecy is very encouraging. It refers to a time of peace and prosperity. This is indicated by the fact that the streets were a safe place for the boys and girls to play: people were willing to trust their boys and girls on the streets. We cannot always in this modern day trust our boys and girls on the streets because of the danger of what they may see and hear.

This refers to the church of God, and in this connection the children have a large place. What the children shall be depends upon their relation to the church: the Sunday School is a most important factor. There must of course, be teaching at home. This is correct, but this is not always done, hence the need of the school.

THE FIRST SCHOOL.

Then there is an inspiration in gathering members. The speaker referred to Robert Raikes as the founder of the modern Sunday School. But 40 years before his time, John Wesley organized a Sunday School in Savannah, Georgia, and fourteen years before Raikes, a lady started a school at High Wiscombe. It was familiar how Raikes, seeing a lot of ragged children, said, "What can we do for them?" and she replied, "Let us teach them to read and bring them to church." This was Sophia Cook afterwards the wife of Bradburn, one of Welsey's preachers. On the Sabbath when the school opened, Sophia and Raikes marched at the head of a lot of ragged urchins which they had gathered together, and brought them to church.

This work had gone on until, according to the report at the World's Sunday School Convention, there is a total of 280,695 Protestant Sunday Schools in the world, and 23,442,996 scholars. Wesley took hold of the work: he looked upon the Sunday School as the nursery of the church. This work is important by reason of the material—not ordinary souls. The Sunday School teachers had grander opportunities than the minister. He is surrounded by those who meet argument with argument, the teacher by boys and girls who accept his statements, and the difference is that between working in clay and in marble.

FUTURE MEN AND WOMEN.

It is important by reason of its effects on the church. We have here the future men and women. The church of the 20th century ought to be far better than that of the 19th. There was more Bible study today, more opportunities to understand the work of missions, hence the field of Sunday School work is wider than ever before. It is important because of its far reaching effects. Important principles are to be communicated and the teacher is commissioned to teach God's inspired Word, not as a book of history, not as a book of theology, but to bring Christ near to the children as an ever present friend. In the ideal School each pupil will have his own Bible, and will bring it to school, the lesson will be thoroughly prepared beforehand and there will be a regular class for preparing teachers—thus teaching the philosophy of teaching. The workers must be an unpaid, vast army of men and women. They need a personal acquaintance with the things of God. We can do little at second hand. They must understand God's word: not all of it, because there are mysteries which possibly we may never be able to understand in this world, but so far as practical things are concerned, the word of God was written for plain people. They must feel that certain truths must be applied to the needs of the scholars. The teacher must, further, visit the pupils and gain their confidence.

As a reward, there was a satisfaction in helping people into the Light. The old Egyptian kings allowed none but nobles to perform even the menial offices for children of the blood royal. So was it in God's great family. The Sunday School teachers should feel that they are honored by being permitted to lead young souls to Christ. Many a noble worker can look back and say, "My teacher led me to Jesus. Then there is the final reward when all the work is over and when the Master says, "Thou hast been faithful over few things, I will make thee ruler over many things."

At the morning service a duett was given by Miss Evelyn and Miss Tryphena Chasty, and during the offertory a solo by Miss Bessie Sperry. In the evening Mr. Jas. Dawson sang with excellent effect, the solo, "Abide With Us." The evening anthem was, "I Was Glad When They Said Unot Me."

A SHOCK FOR PORT HOPE

SURVEY OF PORT HOPE ROUTE OF CANAL ONLY FOR 6 FEET.

Survey now Being Made Considered as one Means of Catching the Farmers' Votes.

Port Hope, Sept. 25.—The Port Hope Canal Association and Western Ontario claims for the Port Hope outlet of the Trent Valley Canal, have received quite a jolt from the Hon. Mr. Emmerson, Minister of Railways and canals. The Port Hope Canal Association recently held a meeting and forwarded a communication to the Minister, asking what instructions had been given to the engineers now engaged in surveying the Port Hope route, and the answer just received from him is that no instructions for a survey of Trenton route have been given, and that the Port Hope route survey is for the same depth as the completed portions of canal. This, of course, is only six feet.

The arrangement of the present survey, if persisted in by the Minister, will simply make the survey a farce. Feeling is running high in the county, and the question is being asked, who is to be benefitted by the surveyors' stakes being strewed over several survey trial lines in Durham County? The impression is that the survey now being made is merely to catch the farmers' votes, and that there is no intention to give a proper and comparative survey.

RUGBY.

The locals had a rattling good practice on the Oval on Saturday afternoon. Despite the unfavorable climatic conditions, the biggest crowd of the season was out and the men were put through a thorough drilling by Mr. A. W. McPherson, formerly of the locals, but now of the Varsity team. The following players were out in uniform: Crowley, capt.; Simpson, Shaw, Morgan, Ford, Rigbey Dillon Hurtubaise, Green, Cameron, F. Burnham, Jas. Craig, A. Noble, Hook, Gillespie, O'Brien, Fitzpatrick, Collins, Lang, Scriver, Gilbert, Walker. The senior halves lined up against the senior wings, and some good playing was done by both sides. Judging from the form displayed on Saturday, everything looks good for a very fast bunch of players this season. The back division will likely consist of Ford, fullback; Morgan, Simpson and Shaw halves, and Graham quarter. This will be considerably stronger than that of last year. Simpson, who has played full back and half with Queens for three years will be seen at centre half at least for next Saturday, and he will supply the kicking power which was lacking last season. He is a very powerful punter, and is also a good line-breaker. Shaw is a new man at the Canadian game, but looks like a good one. He is a fairly good kick, a good tackler and handles the ball cleanly. Morgan, the third half, is very speedy, and made some pretty runs on Saturday. He follows up like lightning, and ground was always gained when Simpson kicked, on account of Morgan's fast following-up. Ford, at full back is a fine punter, and very speedy. Graham was not out on Saturday, but is always in position, and is a most valuable man at quarter. There is a great struggle for positions on the wing line. Hurtubaise will likely be away, but it is hard to say who will fill the other six positions on the line. Wing players are as thick as flies around a molasses keg. With Crowley, Dillon, Noble, Rigbey, F. Burnham, R. Craig, Cameron, Green, Desmond and Meagher trying for the wing line, it will keep the management guessing to pick out the six. At all events the locals will have one of the strongest forward lines in the country, and they will keep the opposing halves on the jump all the time. Their tackling on Saturday was beautiful, and they chased the pigskin as if they had been practicing for months. With another week's hard practice, the team ought to be in great shape for the game with the Argonauts.

What about the City League. It's time something was done about arranging matters for the season. There is plenty of material for three or four good teams, and there is no reason why the League should not be as big a success as last year. A meeting should be called at once to form the League and draw up the schedule for the season.

At the meeting of the O.R.F.U. executive on Saturday night the schedule for the senior series was revised and the following drawn up:—

District No. 1.
Oct 1—Argonauts at Peterborough.
Oct. 8—Torontos at Argonauts.
Oct. 15—Peterborough at Torontos.
Oct. 22—Argonauts at Torontos.
Nov. 5—Peterborough at Argonauts.

The intermediate series was abandoned.

Hamilton Tigers had a very easy time with the Torontos in a practice game on Saturday, defeating their opponents by 27—0. Gowans, of last year's Victorias, was hurt in the game.

BASEBALL.

"Yobbie" Flaherty is in town today.

All players of the Young Quakers are requested to turn out to practice on the P.A.A.A. grounds to-morrow evening.

LACROSSE.

Brantford defeated Tecumsehs on Saturday before a large crowd in a closely contested game by a score of 3—2.

Charlotte-st. Church

The music at Charlotte st. church on Sunday was especially pleasing. In the morning the anthem was "No, not despairingly," and the male quartette sang "Jesus is calling." Mr. Norman Jolliffe sang "He Leadeth me," with violin obligato by Mr. Jones, and was listened to with much pleasure. The evening anthem was "Savior, when night involves the skies," and during the offertory a pretty duet, "Come unto Me," was sung by Miss Clara Bellegham and Mr. R. Friend.

MOST AWFUL WAR FROM THE RUSS-JAP CONFLICT

Milton Prior, War Correspondent, Says it Will Lead to European Complications

GREAT CASUALTY LIST OF THE RUSSIANS

An Amazing Lack of Discipline Proved in General Kuropatkin's Army Through Papers Found at Liaoyang—Japanese Preparing Extensive Turning Movement East of Mukden.

Honolulu, Sept. 27.—Melton Prior, the British newspaper correspondent, who arrived here yesterday from Yokohama, says he feels absolutely certain that the war in the Far East will lead to European complications and to the most awful war in the world's history. Mr. Prior complains that Japan has displayed bad faith toward all the correspondents. This, he says, is his twenty-seventh campaign, and it is the only one in which he has seen nothing. He believes that with the possible exception of the battle of Liaoyang, not one correspondent has seen a shot fired, and he even doubts if the Liaoyang fighting was witnessed by a newspaper man.

Lack of Discipline.

London, Sept. 27.—The Daily Mail's Liaoyang correspondent says: "The discovery in abandoned Russian headquarters here of a number of documents and orders from Viceroy Alexieff, cashiering officers for abandoning positions and for drunkenness, etc., and censuring officers for lawless treatment of Chinese, waste of ammunition and other offences, proves an amazing lack of discipline in General Kuropatkin's army.

Russians Had Many Casualties.

St. Petersburg, Sept. 27.—A despatch has been received from General Kuropatkin announcing that the Japanese are preparing an extensive turning movement east of Mukden. A large force is advancing from Liaoyang by way of Taiche to Tsiansachan. Skirmishes have occurred in the valley of the Hun River, and at Iapu, between Bentsiaputse and the railroad. There were many casualties at Iapu.

Boys Jape Were Repulsed.

St. Petersburg, Sept. 27.—General Sakharoff, in a despatch dated Sunday, telegraphs that the Japanese advance guard during the last few days attempted to occupy Kaoutou Pass (commanding the road to Fushun), but were repulsed by a detachment of the Russian advance guard.

MR. BORDEN AT ORILLIA.

With Several Other Prominent Conservatives Is Given Hearty Welcome and Warm Reception.

Orillia, Sept. 27.—Mr. R. L. Borden was last night greeted by 1,200 people in the Opera House and given a hearty welcome. Mr. Borden was met at the station by a committee of the Liberal-Conservative Association and quietly escorted to the Orillia House, where he dined with leading East Simcoe Conservatives. The visit of the distinguished guest was emphasized by a display of banners on the principal streets, bearing suitable mottos.

The Opera House was crowded to the doors long before the arrival of the speakers of the evening. On the platform with Mr. Borden were a large number of prominent local and visiting Conservatives, prominent among whom were: W. H. Bennett, M.P.; Col. Sam. Hughes, M.P.; J. P. Downey, M.P.P.; E. A. Little, M.P.P.; J. S. Duff, Col Gregory, Haughton Lennox, M.P.; Mayor McCosh, president Liberal-Conservative Association; Dr. J. W. Slaven and Dr. Raikes of Barrie. The chair was taken by Mayor McCosh, who introduced the speakers of the evening.

Mr. Borden was preceded by Mr. Bennett, who spoke at some length on the more prominent political issues of the day, closing his address with an expression of his firm conviction that he had nothing to fear in the result of the coming election.

Mr. Borden was greeted with loud applause as he rose to address the audience. The Conservative leader was presented with an address by G. H. Clarke, secretary of the Liberal-Conservative Association on behalf of the Conservatives in East Simcoe. At the conclusion of this ceremony little Miss Ellen Clarke presented Mr. Borden with a bouquet, which the distinguished speaker suitable acknowledged.

Mr. Borden was in fine form and spoke with the vigor of one hardened to a political campaign. His arguments were frequently applauded. He dwelt on the Grand Trunk Pacific contract with the Dominion Government. Mr. Borden closed a spirited address in the midst of loud and long continued cheering from all parts of the hall.

J. P. Downey, M.P.P., for South Wellington, followed Mr. Borden in a short address. The meeting closed with hearty cheers for the King, Mr. Borden, Mr. Bennett and Mayor McCosh.

Clarke and Casgrain.

Halifax, N.S., Sept. 27.—The opening meeting of the series to be addressed by T. Chase Casgrain, M.P., of Montreal, and E. F. Clarke, M.P., Toronto, took place in Amherst last night, and was a success, 2,000 electors being present. Messrs. Casgrain and Clarke made good impressions.

Goes to Borel.

Ottawa, Sept. 27.—The Premier leaves here to-day to attend a political meeting at Borel in behalf of the Liberal candidate for Richelieu, Mr. Bruneau.

Goes Back to Duty.

Woodstock, Sept. 27.—Hon. James Sutherland left Woodstock yesterday for Ottawa to resume his duties as Minister of Public Works. At a meeting of the executive of the North Oxford Reform Association, on Saturday afternoon, he stated that he again would accept the nomination in North Oxford, and a convention has been called for Oct. 6 to nominate him. He is much improved in health.

BABY MARTIN'S MURDER

The Coatsworth Cut Mystery in Toronto Cleared Up.

Alexander Martin and His Wife Arrested For the Crime—Their Secret Discovered By Chief Bond of Port Hope—Mrs. Martin Confesses After the Arrest in Toronto—Her Husband Was Jealous of the Babe.

Toronto, Sept. 27.—The Coatsworth Cut mystery is practically cleared up. Last night there were locked up in No. 1 Police Station on a charge of murder:

Alexander Martin, aged 22, born in Toronto.

Ethel Martin, aged 19, born in Canton, near Port Hope.

The couple are man and wife. After the Toronto press had published the story of the crime and descriptions of those who were thought to have committed the crime, the detective department sent out 300 circulars to Ontario towns. One of these circulars reached Chief Bond of Port Hope, who furnished the information which led to the arrest of the Martins.

Yesterday afternoon detectives went to Corby's restaurant, 109 East King street, and escorted Ethel Martin to police headquarters. There she was asked where her child was. She replied in Port Hope with her mother. Chief Bond was asked by wire if that was so. He answered that the child was not in Port Hope, and had not been there since August 1.

In the meantime Mrs. Butler of Forest road, the lady who noticed the couple on the street car on the day of the murder, was sent for. She positively identified Mrs. Martin as the woman who accompanied the man and the child on the fatal day.

Husband Jealous of Babe.

The prisoner was then sent to No. 1 Police Station, where she confessed to the crime of Aug. 3. She gives no reasons nor explanations for the deed, any more than that her husband was jealous of the baby, claiming that she thought more of it than she did of him. When they were out in the boat he struck the child with the end of the oar, killing it. She would not say whether the murder was premeditated or not.

After the woman's arrest, Detective Cuddy and Sergt. Geddes proceeded to Stanley Barracks, where they took in charge Private Martin. He was brought direct to No. 1 Station, still wearing his uniform. When Martin saw the officers he began to shake, but recovered his nerve before reaching the station. The woman took the arrest much more coolly than the man.

Alexander Martin was born in Toronto. He attended the Louisa street school, and learned his trade with Hobberlin, the Yonge street tailor. His father was formerly a captain in the employ of the Toronto Ferry Company, but is now caretaker of Hodson's boathouse, foot of Brock avenue.

During the South African war he was for a time in the Halifax, N.S., barracks, from which he received an honorable discharge.

Martin met his wife in a boarding house in Peter street, where he and his father were living. He was 19. She was 16. They made a runaway match of it, going to Rochester, N. Y.

Mrs. Martin was Ethel Bye of Port Hope, but she was born in Canton, four miles from Port Hope. Her mother was Mrs. Matilda Bye.

Bound Accused to Cuba.

Montreal, Sept. 27.—News was received here by Chief Carpenter, regarding the arrest in Cuba of Cory Paymaster Hamel, who is wanted for forging a cheque on the Bank of Montreal. It is supposed that all difficulties have been overcome for the extradition of Hamel.

Leader Bounded Up at Last.

Kingston, Sept. 27.—W. H. Leader, who forged cheques and notes here, and fled to the United States, has been arrested at Passaic, N.J., accused of similar crimes at Philadelphia, the cheques being on a Kingston bank, which sent them back as forgeries. Then the detectives got after the criminal. Leader was released last spring from the penitentiary here, where he had served a term for forgery.

Burrowed Way to Freedom.

Cayuga, Sept. 27.—N. P. Collins, who was sentenced here on Saturday last to three years in Kingston Penitentiary, burrowed his way through the stone wall of his cell Sunday night and escaped. He was to have been removed to Kingston last night.

Bartlett Remanded.

Winnipeg, Sept. 27.—Ex-City Official Bartlett was remanded by the magistrate yesterday on a charge of theft.

A Postoffice Surplus.

Ottawa, Sept. 27.—(Globe Special.)—The transactions of the Postoffice Department for the financial year ending June 30 last show a clear surplus of $304,771 over expenditures of all kinds. The expenditures are not those of old Canada merely, but include the very costly services in the Yukon and Atlin and Peace River districts; in fact, throughout the entire length and breadth of Canada.

Logging Outfits Seized.

Vancouver, B. C., Sept. 27.—The British Columbia Government has made a big seizure of American logging outfits, following on the discovery that United States firms have been smuggling logs out of the country, contrary to law.

Private Perry Married.

Vancouver, B. C., Sept. 27.—The marriage of Private, now Sergeant, S. J. Perry, to Leola, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Archibald McAllister, took place here yesterday at ten o'clock.

Sir Wm. MacGregor Installed.

St. John's, Nfld., Sept. 27.—Sir William MacGregor, the new Governor of Newfoundland, arrived here yesterday from Liverpool, and met with a warm reception at the landing. The warships Charybdis, Fantome and Calypso, which were in port, participated in the reception. Later in the day Governor MacGregor took the oath of office and commenced executive duties. It is understood that he brings assurance of the certainty of the ratification of the Anglo-French Treaty by the French Chamber this month.

REDMOND IN TORONTO.

Toronto, Sept. 27.—John Redmond and party arrived in this city yesterday, and were met at the Union Station by Peter Ryan and other well known Irishmen. In the party besides Mr. Redmond were Capt. A. J. C. Donelan, M. P., and Patrick O'Brien, M.P., and Mrs. Redmond. The party were banquetted, and in the evening Mr. Redmond addressed two meetings, one at Association Hall and an overflow meeting at Guild Hall.

In the course of his speeches, the Irish leader, who is eloquent, described the three steps to home rule already taken as the banishment of famine, the abolition of coercion, and the ousting of landlordism. He added in his banquet speech that his party could not rest till Irish public opinion was as potent in Ireland as public opinion was in Ontario. Irishmen had been shown in the county councils to be capable of governing themselves, and the Irish landlords were now actually engaged in evolving a home rule scheme of their own. Ireland's opportunity had come, and he confidently predicted the speedy triumph of the home rule cause.

Premier Ross also spoke at Association Hall in welcome of Mr. Redmond and his party. One of his good points was: "I might have been tempted to follow Mr. Blake's example, but I have reached the summit of my ambition already, and my great anxiety is to keep there."

A letter of regret was read from Mayor Urquhart, and one from Hon. Edward Blake, M.P., who subscribed $500; Eugene O'Keefe subscribed $200; George P. Magann, $50; Mr. Mulcahy, $25; Peter Ryan, $25; Lawrence Cosgrave, $25; C. R. Whittal, $25; P. Jamieson, $25; Frank Slattery, $10; F. F. Cronin, $10; R. J. Hearn, $10; L. O'Donohoe, $25; George Foy, $25; F. O'Connor, $10; P. Mulqueen, $10; Herbert Lennox, $10; A Scotch Believer in Home Rule, $20; Another Scotchman, $5; A Canadian Home Ruler, $20. The collection in Association Hall amounted to $1,275, and in the Guild Hall to over $200.

One of the notable items in Mr. Redmond's Association Hall speech was the acknowledgment that it was to Hon. Edward Blake that he owed the chairmanship of the Irish party.

Capt. A. J. C. Donelan, M.P., by East Cork, and Patrick O'Brien, M. P., for Kilkenny, also made addresses. The entire visit was a great success.

That is about the ratio. About seven times as many persons are injured as die from all causes yearly.

Accidents are a more prolific cause of death than any disease except lung diseases.

Twice as many people are accidently killed as die of old age. Does it not seem reasonable to you as a business man that it would be to your interest to carry an accident policy?

THE CREATURE OF CRIME

The organs of Mr. Ross are accusing the Conservatives of indecent haste in inviting the Premier to commit hari-kari. Mr. Ross should have abandoned his untenable position long ago. Never since the general election, to go no further back, has he occupied the position of a constitutional Minister, but has been a usurper of the South American or San Domingo type. The electors of the Province, as a body, rejected him, and in spite of the gerrymander constituencies, did not give him a working majority. Since then he has clung to office by heaping crime upon crime.

In South Oxford he endeavored to oust the duly elected Conservative by the grossest subornation of perjury. He tried to purchase the desertion of the member for Manitoulin by corrupt inducements as to the patronage and the protest, only the actual passing of the cash being "not proven." He ran the bye-elections by the wholesale corruption and fraud which the election courts are now exposing. He disfranchised North Renfrew for nearly a year and a half in dread of the adverse verdict which was given as soon as there was an opportunity. He closed the courts by the hasty summons of the Legislature to keep in their seats the members he had corruptly elected. With the aid of these bogus representatives, he effected the wholesale purchase of Sault Ste. Marie interests, resulting in the cruise of the Minnie M. and other atrocities.

In some of these crimes he was an active participant; in others he acted by agents, organized, maintained and paid for such work. Now, without a majority, he is clinging to office, in the hope of devising some other trick to prolong his criminal career.

The Globe on "The Responsibility of the Honest," is the most stupendous exhibition of hypocrisy since its barnacle article.

Mr. Ross says he deprecates corrupt practices. Why then does he maintain his machine; why does he pay, employ and reward them; why does he let his Attorney-General shield instead of persecuting them; why did he chase the courts that the bogus members, now being kicked out for corruption, might retain their fraudulent seats for a year; why did he buy the Sault wholesale? Why, in short, is he the most corrupt of the bunch?

In the last reckoning, we are told by the Globe, responsibility for the electoral crimes committed in any constituency rest directly and immovably on the candidate and his leading local supporters. The new plan invented by Mr. Ross is to relieve these gentlemen of the control, and place it in the hands of his organized machine. In West Elgin, in the shameless confession he drew up, Mr. Aylesworth explained how these outsiders worked while the candidate was supposed to know nothing. In North York Mr. Davis confessed that he accepted the aid of these machine men, while he falsely pretended ignorance in regard to them This is the latest improvement in electoral villany as devised by Mr. Ross and his colleagues.

The Liberal St. Mary's Argus cannot follow its leaders in some of their ways. It says:

"The revelations made at the Sault trial in connection with the Minnie M. charges are such as no Liberal can justify and no honest man will try to. Better, far better, that the Liberals be cast into the wilderness of opposition for years than for them to retain power by personation and bribery. It is not essential that the Liberal party must always be in power in Ontario, but it is essential that Liberals demand purity of election, and the dismissal of all workers of the Cap. Sullivan variety from their ranks. Liberalism in the past has owed its strength to the great mass of independent electors who believed in its principles and practices as being the least tinged with corruption. It can neither afford nor allow such practices as prevailed at the Sault to be associated with its name."

SUPPOSE THE JUDGES

A Worthless Defence in Favour of Ministerial Corruption.

Supposing at the trial of an election petition, after the judges had decided there was sufficient evidence to void the election, the counsel for the respondent should address the court to the following effect: "Your Lordships, we admit that our client deserves to lose his seat, but we submit that judgment should not be given declaring the seat vacant, for the following reasons: First, such a judgment would mean a new election, in which our client might be elected again, leaving the situation just as bad as ever; second, the other fellow might be elected, and he is just as bad"—supposing such an argument to be advanced, what would the court be likely to say? Yet that is the argument of the Liberal party press in favor of punishing the Liberal Government in power.—Woodstock Express, Indep.

THE GLOBE ON ITS KNEES

In the last reckoning responsibility for the corruption that has made politics a byword in this Province rests, to a degree, on the honest, respectable, high-minded citizens. It is true they are not guilty of the political crimes which they regard with indignation and shame. They did not do the illegal and immoral thing. But they permitted others to do it. By their preoccupation in their own business and pleasure and domestic affairs, by neglect of their duties to their political party and to the State, and by gratifying their distaste for needed service on committees and in the campaign the honest and intelligent citizens permitted, if they did not encourage, the corporation grafter, the political parasite and the heeler to get in his work. The college man stayed among his books, the professional man preferred the more congenial and the more profitable occupations of his office, the business man went his way to his store, and the farmer to his well-tilled fields; and while they devoted their time and talents to their private affairs the real enemy of their party and of the country made himself "useful" to the politicians and afterwards reached for his rewards. Now they hold up their hands in amazement and horror at the reports of rascalities which they did nothing to prevent or to make unprofitable. It will be the first step in the direction of effective political reform if something of responsibility for political corruption is brought home, not to the "grafters, the "heelers," the "blacklegs," who served the party for their own gain, but to the high-class citizens who were too busy or too careless or too good natured to share in the discomforts and the turmoils of a political campaign.

And the first responsibility of intelligent and respectable citizens is for themselves and the political party to which they belong. It may uncover hypocrisy and defeat pharisaism to expose the evil doings of one's opponents, but it will add neither attractiveness nor strength to one's own party. Certainly Liberals must have—as they have—some far stronger argument and some far higher inspiration than the proof of dishonesty and immorality in the Opposition. And at this moment the honest and intelligent Liberal can do his party and his leader no truer service than by steadily facing the ugliest facts touching the Liberal party and frankly accepting his own share of responsibility for the wrong doings of others, and then by resolving that the upright and public spirited men who have done the real but thankless work of the campaigns during many years, without reward and often at great sacrifice, shall not be any longer withheld his ready and active support.

It is not enough that the "heelers" and "rascals" be repudiated and punished as they deserve to be. Nor is it enough—though it would be an important service—that the men whose hirelings the "rascals" were be exposed and punished as they also deserve to be. And the short and easy method of the superficial reformer who would dismiss one government and install another of less ungainly and poorer traditions would not avail. The disease strikes deeper than can be reached and eradicated by any such cure. Unless the quality of our citizenship is improved, unless the exercise of the franchise is made intelligent and responsible, unless throughout the constituencies there is awakened and made active and punitive a new civic spirit, all these rough-and-ready methods of dealing with political corruption will miscarry or lead to disappointment.

In the last reckoning responsibility for the electoral crimes committed in any constituency rests directly and immovably on the candidate and his leading local supporters and those who should be active in his support. They know, or they ought to know, what is being done and who are doing it. When the men of character and intelligence in any constituency undertake to manage their own campaign work the "strangers" from outside will find his occupation gone.—The Toronto Globe.

YEAR'S LABOR CONGRESS

ONE OF MOST SUCCESSFUL IN THE HISTORY OF THE ORGANIZATION.

Some Important Questions Considered—A Common Ground Between Laborer and Manufacturer.

Some very important questions were considered at the Labor Congress held recently in Montreal. The members are elated over the approach to a common ground between the laborer and the manufacturer, and members of the Congress would like to see an organization composed of representatives of both laboring and manufacturing classes and also of that large middle class who belong to neither—the whole to form a composite body that is better able to reach a disinterested decision than would be possible where two sides alone are represented.

Mr. James Wilson, who represents the Trades and Labor Council of Toronto, said the present gathering of the Trades and Labor Congress had been the most successful yet held in the history of that organization. He had himself attended twenty annual gatherings of the kind, and had never yet witnessed such unanimity of opinion or such unanimity in the beats.

One of the most important, as well as one of the most interesting, discussions related to the liquor traffic. "The discussion in this connection," he continued, "related to the temperance question. There were many strong defenders of the movement on the floor of the Congress. After a somewhat protracted discussion, it was finally decided to recommend to the local organizations that they should include in their educational propaganda instructions along the line of temperance.

LABOR AND POLITICAL PARTIES.

"As regards the placing of labor candidates in the field in political campaigns—which was another important point considered—the consensus of opinion was seemingly in favor of permitting laborites in the various localities to reach a decision for themselves. The sentiment in favor of independent action in this respect is apparently growing very rapidly.

"The important issue of the political aspect of the labor problem cannot be over-estimated. Nearly every report presented to the Congress dealt with political phases of various situations. In this country in so far as labor was concerned. It is not, perhaps, surprising then that a very strong sentiment developed in favor of placing independent labor candidates in the field owing to the fact that the labor element has obtained nothing from either the Dominion or Provincial Governments.

"What we desire is to get enough men in the various Houses of Parliament to call for a division when any matter affecting us is under consideration. The great difficulty at the present time is that some of the members which affect us come to a discussion and it is consequently impossible for us to mail the politicians on either side down to voting either for or against us. With six men in the Dominion House we could call for a division.

"Do I consider the political outlook in this respect hopeful? Well, that is conditional upon certain contingencies. The strength of the political movement will largely depend upon the action taken by local councils; it will largely depend upon the enthusiasm which they display. In any event all friends of organized labor should be educated up to vote for their own men.

"The proposal to send a delegate to England to counteract the pernicious effect of the immigration policy pursued by the present government I consider to be an excellent one. The principle of this departure has already been affirmed by the congress; it now only remains to arrange the financing of the project."

A STRONG TEMPERANCE SENTIMENT.

Mr. W. V. Todd of Toronto, representing the Cigarmakers' International Union, and the American Federation of Labor, was also of the opinion that one of the most interesting questions discussed by the congress was that of temperance.

"It was brought up," he said, "by the National Trades and Labor Council, it being suggested that legislation should be sought from the Provincial parliaments prohibiting the sale of liquor on Labor Day. The general opinion was that while such legislation might do well, it should not be directed against any such specific case. During the discussion a strong temperance sentiment developed, and the opinion generally was that not only on Labor Day, but on all days laboring men should abstain from the excessive use of alcoholic liquors.

"This has proved the very best congress we have ever had; the tone of debate has been very much higher than ever before. Not a discordant note has been struck. There has been some talk about the existence of a caucus, but, while I have no personal knowledge of the affair, I presume that so long as large bodies of men convene together you will have caucuses and canvassing. You cannot prevent that by legislation.

HOW TO ENDORSE CANDIDATES.

"The placing of labor candidates in the field would not, in my opinion, do any harm. The American Federation of Labor have adopted a plan whereby they submit a series of questions to candidates who have presented themselves for the suffrages of the people. They then determine to support the candidate who answers the most of the questions in the affirmative. I have been told that this plan has met with no small measure of success, and there is a great deal to be said in favor of it."

According to it, the would be position to back the man who most favored our views. It certainly has a great deal to commend it. One thing is sure; we need direct representation on the floors of our Legislatures. We have now one or two men who have been very useful indeed in voicing the opinions of labor on the floor of the House—men belonging to both political parties. Without them we would be at a great disadvantage. The best plan for us to adopt will, of course, be the one under which we will secure the most representation. What that will be I cannot say."

Following officers were elected:—President, Vervaille, President of the Montreal Trades and Labor Council; Vice-President, James Simpson, Typographical Union, Toronto; Secretary, P. H. Draper, Ottawa, re-elected.

PINE STUMPS

The Value Obtained from their Destructive Distillation.

A new proof of the fact that what is wasted one time becomes a valuable material under other circumstances is given in the success of pine tar plants that have been started up near the head of Lake Superior. That the industry is no experiment and of no doubtful value is shown by the fact that the Weyerhaeuser syndicate, the largest lumbering concern in the world, has taken it up, has just bought out the plants already established and is installing more.

All the region about the head of Lake Superior is, or was, covered with pine timber, and when this was cut the stumps remained on the ground. Pine stumps do not rot as do those of hardwoods, and the presence of these stumps was a serious obstacle to the spread of farming in the region.

Now comes the pine tar company and offers to clear a farm of all the old stumps or to pay the owners $3 for every cord of them that he will pull himself. For farmers, throughout thousands of acres, this is an irresistible boon, and it will open hundreds of thousands more acres as fast as the stumps are got out.

The company has invented, or applied existing processes of destructive distillation of wood to the pine stumps, and is securing a combined product of great value. There is a large amount of turpentine in these dry stumps, also a high grade of lubricating oil, tar, and finally, excellent charcoal. The discovery that lubricating oil was to be secured from stumps by carrying the distilled product to its last analysis, is quite new, and no machines for producing this have yet been installed, but they are to be put in at once in the company's first plant, a few miles south of Duluth.

Surprises the Doctors

Most doctors are astonished at the results obtained by Dr. Chase's Ointment as a cure for eczema, salt rheum and itching skin diseases which are often considered well nigh incurable. By word of mouth from friend to friend the exceptional merits of Dr. Chase's Ointment have gradually become known until it is now standard the world over and has a record of cures unparalleled in the history of medicine.

Fish Planting

The Ontario Government, in conjunction with the Grand Trunk Railway, inaugurated a vigorous policy of restocking with fish many of the lakes in northern Ontario, where there was any chance of a depletion, and the success which has attended their efforts has been marked. During the summer season this year, no less than 2,305 parent bass were captured and transported from Lake Erie to the several districts that are visited by the angler and summer tourist. A special fish car was built by the Grand Trunk three years ago expressly for the transportation of live fish for this purpose and it has been used each summer in the propogation of this good work. This year three car loads of bass, none less than 12 inches in length, and many weighing two and three pounds, were planted in the Muskoka lakes, two carloads in Lakes Simcoe one cargo in the Lake of Bays region, one carload in Balsam Lake, some of the Kawartha group in Victoria county), and a carload in Algonquin lakes along the Canada Atlantic Railway in Algonquin Park. These carloads contained in each instance from 500 to 700 fish. In addition to the planting of the parent fish, a car load of 5,000 black bass fingerlings was placed in the Lake of Bays region. The results of each shipment have been most gratifying, and the summer tourist and angler have appreciated the movement, and look forward to better sport in these waters in the future. J. D. MANCHURIA

A Great Prize not to be Lightly Relinquished

The defeat of the Russians at Liao-Yang and their retreat towards the north by no means signifies than an evacuation of Manchuria is contemplated. The Russian frontier is yet a long way off. Mukden, which is really in Southern Manchuria, is fifty miles away, and if the Russians decline to give battle there and withdraw four hundred miles to Harbin, they will still be in Manchuria. Harbin is about half way to the frontier, for a trip of about 700 miles on the Siberian railroad would be required to put the army on Russian territory.

Manchuria, in the view of the military expert of the Spokane Spokesman-Review, is too large and rich a province to be given up because of a single defeat or a year's defeats. It is a prize for which the Russians have been seeking for years, and, compared with the sterile Siberian country, is well worth a large sacrifice of men and money, if it could not be obtained otherwise.

The world at large has known little about this magnificent province; Russia has known all about it, and that is why it has been anxious to get a firm foothold on it against the protest of the other great powers. In addition to natural resources its geographical location and its maritime advantages combine to make the province one of the most to be desired in all Eastern Asia.

Manchuria is larger than France, or Germany, or Spain, and is twice as large as Italy. It is larger than all the New England States, with New York, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Ohio and Indiana. It is larger than British Columbia, Washington, Oregon and Idaho. It is traversed by a river one thousand miles long, and is one of the richest agricultural countries in the world. And in addition to being a country of magnificent possibilities along farming lines, it has mines of gold, copper, lead, iron and coal that are believed by some experts to be equal to those of Canada and the United States.

With such a country as the prize, the loss of a great fleet, the fall of a great fortress and the defeat of a great army will not be enough to drive the Russians from an empire that is richer in resources than any other country in continental Europe. —Canadian Trade Review.

In Our Grandfather's Youth

Paralysis was almost unheard of in the youth of our grandparents, and now nearly every newspaper contains a record of numerous being stricken with this dreadful form of helplessness. Paralysis is in reality a starving of the nerves, and can always be prevented by the timely use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, a preparation which has no rival as a creator of nerve force.

CELEBRATED HIS BIRTHDAY

Mr. Alfred E. Hayter was 80 Years old on Saturday Last.

The following despatch from Toronto to the Ottawa Journal, relates to a former resident of Peterborough, Mr. Alfred E. Hayter, who at one time was engaged in the newspaper business here, and is regarded as being likewise one of the oldest Peterborough Old Boys:—

Toronto, Sept. 24—The Ottawa Old Boys, of Toronto, are today joining with a host of friends in extending congratulations to Mr. Alfred E. Hayter upon the anniversary of his birthday. Mr. Hayter is known as "the "oldest old boys" of the Ottawa Old Boys Association of this city. Born in Hull, Yorkshire, England, on Sept. 24, 1825, he today enters upon his eightieth year.

His recollections of Ottawa date back to July 10, 1834, when it was called Bytown. There he lived for a number of years. He was one of the charter members of St. George's Society, Ottawa. Sir Henry Strong was one of his associates in the formation over half a century ago.

When only a lad of nine Mr. Hayter took up his home at Little York, (now Toronto) in May, 1834. He later became one of the pioneer newspaper editor and publishers in Canada. He began as an apprentice of Richard Dover in the Cobourg Star office on Feb. 3rd, 1840. He established the Millbrook Messenger in Millbrook, Ont., on August 19th, 1867, and continued its publication until Dec. 17th, 1887.

Mr. Hayter is still quite active, and is a regular attendant at the monthly meetings of the Ottawa Old Boys Association of Toronto, by the members of which he is highly respected. Mr. Frederick T. Hayter, of the Auditor-General's Department, Ottawa, is a son, whom he visited not many years ago.

ST. MARK'S HARVEST FESTIVAL

Thankful and Reverent Congregation Took Part.

A most inspiring Harvest Festival was held on Sunday by the congregation of St. Mark's. The church was prettily decorated with the products of the garden and field, and a thankful and reverent congregation was present to take part in the annual thanksgiving to God for his manifold mercies. The rector, Rev. E. A. Langfeldt, preached an inspiring sermon on "The best grand Harvest," from St. Matthew 13:30. "The harvest is the end of the world and the reapers are the angels." Miss Helen Davies assisted in the musical part of the service. She sang in excellent voice "He was wounded for our transgressions." Her voice, so wonderfully melodious, was never heard at better advantage, and expressed the emotions of the heart as inspired by the sacred story of the Passion of Christ. Professor Davies presided at the organ. The thanksgiving of the congregation amounted to $24.68.

THE GYMNASIUM CLASSES

Senior Young Men Got to Work Friday Night.

The Senior young men's gymnasium class commenced last Friday evening at 8 o'clock at the Y.M.C.A. There was a large group of young men there for the opening class, larger than has been at the opening of previous classes.

The work commenced with a mass run around the floor, in order to warm up a bit, then a few minutes were spent in military marching. After that the class lined up for calisthenics and dumbell drill. This was made lively and the men all felt pretty well limbered up when they got through. Apparatus work was next indulged in; first the parallel bars and second the horse, both used with the aid of the spring board, which made it immensely lively and interesting. The class closed with a rattling good game of basket ball and a bath.

We believe that every man owes it to himself to keep in the very best physical condition, and think no better and cheaper way exists than through the physical department of the Y.M.C.A.

The October Housekeeper.

A wealth of practical wisdom for the intelligent American housewife is contained in the October number of the Housekeeper. It comes in handsome dress, a striking cover of classical design, autumn leaves contributing a dash of brilliant color. Helps for Home Dressmakers contains, as usual, many valuable suggestions. The annual baby parade at Ashbury Park, N.J., is portrayed in a double page of unique photographiana, and there is a comprehensive illustrated article on Jane Adams and her work at Hull House, Chicago, written by a personal friend of that wonderful woman. The second instalment of Robert Bascom's strong serial, The Rainbow Quest, and the first part of Aloysius Coll's love story, The Trapping of a Bear, are among the bright fiction that is always a feature of The Housekeeper. Published by the Housekeeper Corporation, Minneapolis, Minn.

PREPARATION DAY PROCEEDINGS PETERBOROUGH INDUSTRIAL FAIR

Every Department of the Big Show in Full Swing--Splendid Exhibit of Stock--Lively Scenes on the Grounds--Judging in the Various Classes--Successful Exhibit Assured.

The second Peterborough Industrial Exhibition is now in full blast.

All the departments, particularly the live stock, are well filled, and the number of entries exceed those of last year.

Yesterday was preparation day at the grounds and the scene presented was an exceptionally busy one, indicative of the success of this year's show.

All that now remains to cause the management to view with satisfaction the result of their faithful, energetic work, is favorable weather, and a large attendance today and tomorrow.

Peterborough takes a pride in its fair, and well it may, for no county organization offers more liberal prizes and affords better accommodation for exhibitors. The officers have all worked assiduously in behalf of the institution and now, that it is well under way, the prospects are of the brightest possible character.

MR. D. HUGHES-CHARLES
PRESIDENT PETERBOROUGH INDUSTRIAL EXHIBITION

President D. Hughes-Charles was here, there and everywhere, looking after the interests of the exhibitors, and cheerfully answering numerous inquiries.

The secretary, Mr. K. Eardley-Wilmot, and his assistant, Mr. R. W. Grubbe, were kept on the jump, making out entry tickets, receiving membership fees, allotting space, and attending to several other matters which always fall to a secretary-treasurer to look after.

A large percentage of the stock arrived yesterday, and nearly all the entries were made early.

THE STOCK SHOWN.

The number of entries in all classes of horses exceed those of 1903. In draught, breeding, and roadster animals, some of the finest specimens ever seen on the grounds are in evidence. The showing in the ring will be excellent.

In beef and dairy cattle the display is fully equal to former years, and will be found of the greatest interest to farmers and stock breeders. The pens are well filled and the herds of Durhams, Herefords, Galloways and Aberdeen Angus, as well as Ayrshires, Holsteins and Jerseys are all that could be desired. Some of the prize winning herds of Toronto, Ottawa and Winnipeg exhibitions are here in their entirety.

In sheep the exhibit is small, while the showing in swine is fair. What pigs are in the pens are of a superior class, and in the poultry line some fine birds are shown.

IN MAIN BUILDING.

The main building is well filled with attractive displays. All the available space is occupied. The one thing in evidence is that a much larger structure is required to meet the the increasing demands of the association. The grounds are ample in their proportions but it is a subject of general remark that the main hall is out-of-date for a fair of the pretensions of the Peterborough Industrial.

Among those making a display in the building are the American Cereal Company, the Canadian Cordage and Manufacturing Company, Coughlin Bros., Mr. R. M. Roy, and others.

In the ladies' department everything in in attractive shape. The Nunnery of Cookstown, Tyrone county, Ireland, sends some choice samples of Irish lace, which is the cynosure of all eyes. From the arts and handicrafts store in Montreal, and sent through the kindness and forethought of the Women's Art Association of Canada, are many beautiful articles, including lace made by the Doukhobors, some nice homespun goods, catalogne carpets, tufted portieres and other handicraft productions. There are also about $200 worth of sketches, pastels and water colors. The display in flowers, roots, grains, seeds and vegetables is not as large as in some years, but what there is excites favorable notice. The showing in oil paintings, water colors and photographs is good, all things being considered.

THE PRESIDENT SPEAKS.

"Yes, I am well pleased with the showing in all departments," said President Charles today. "I do not think we have much to complain of, and everything has gone along pretty well so far. We have a superior list of attractions, and if the attendance is only up to the mark, we will be amply rewarded for all our labor."

The officers of the Association for 1904 are—

JOTTINGS.

There are the usual number of side shows. The man who can guess your weight, the striking machine, the electric picture machine, the ring the cane game, the doll man and the usual other things that interest young and old to a greater or less degree, are all in evidence, including the freak side show.

There are about 150 members of the association and the membership and entry fees yesterday were exceedingly gratifying.

Wm. Stewart and son of the Maple stock farm, Haliburton County, have a splendid exhibit of Ayrshire cattle. This is the third time that the Messrs. Stewart have shown at the Peterborough fair.

The speed ring is in good shape and some excellent events are looked forward to to-day.

A representative of the firm of Wm. Stewart and Son, Lansaville, Ont., complained to the secretary yesterday that the prizes in Galloways and Aberdeen Angus were not liberal enough. He said the premiums should be equal to those offered in Durhams, Herefords and other beef cattle. He also added that, considering the low premiums, the entrance fee of each animal was too heavy. Mr. Stewart conferred with Mr. Eardley-Wilmot about the matter and he promised to bring his grievances before the board of directors with the object of having them remedied if possible. Mr. Stewart is well satisfied with the show in other respects.

SPECIAL EXHIBITS

Roy's Fine Photos

Mr. R. M. Roy, the enterprising Hunter street artist, makes a highly creditable display in the main building. His splendid collection of pictures framed and unframed, and in groups, is drawing widespread attention and elicting favorable comment. Mr. Roy's ability as a photographer is well known and the quality of his work bespeaks its worth. Prominent in his splendid assortment is an exceptionally large picture of the hydraulic lift lock which is the largest photograph that can be produced, being 6x4 feet. Mr. Roy also shows a fine portrait of Mr. Frank J. Ross of Pittsburg, Pa., and the thirty grand mushinooge recently captured by him near Peterborough. Several magnificent group portraits, of which Mr. Roy makes a specialty, are shown, among them being the Quaker football club, city champions, and other well known local sporting aggregations. A handsome India ink portrait of Dr. Boucher and a colored portrait of Miss Alice Dean, the noted violinist, are further evidence of Mr. Roy's skill and excellent taste. Mr. Roy has always captured first prize in his work wherever he has exhibited and he stands in the front rank of his profession. Several individual photos in different sizes and all mounted in the latest fashions, many of the designs being exclusive, are also displayed. Mr. Roy has been in business in Peterborough eight years and each year has done an increasing trade in his line. Visitors to the Industrial exhibition should not fail to see his excellent and neatly arranged exhibit and also pay a visit to his well-equipped and up-to-date studio on Hunter street. His prices are moderate and his work never fails to satisfy the most fastidious.

Stewart's Prize Cattle

In the cattle department the exhibit of the prize winning herd of William Stewart and Son of Lansaville, Lambton County, is attracting universal attention from the farmers and stock breeders. Stewart & Son have thirteen splendid animals on exhibition in Galloways and Aberdeen Angus. Their herd captured first place at Toronto, London and Ottawa. For fourteen years the Aberdeen Angus have topped the market in Chicago. Messrs. Stewart & Son have been breeding this famous clan of cattle for twenty years and are among the largest importers, buyers and sellers in the Dominion. The breed is the finest for beef purposes in the world, the animals maturing early and being docile and quiet in disposition. They are easily prepared for the market and possess many superior points. Messrs. Stewart's stock comprises the finest and best kept of all Galloways and Aberdeen Angus and they have had a wide sale in all parts of the Dominion. Mr. Stewart reports a number of excellent sales and believes that as a beef cattle the breeds have no superior. Farmers and stock breeders should examine his pens. All enquiries are cheerfully answered and the many merits of the animals explained.

Coughlin's Monuments

Coughlin's Monumental Works, 214 Hunter-st., make a splendid showing in the main building, which is attracting a large share of attention. This enterprising and progressive firm are always leaders in their line. Messrs. Coughlin have a decidedly creditable display of granite monuments in various shades, from the different quarries, and have taken advantage of Peterborough's electric power and installed machinery for polishing granite. They have the largest and best equipped factory in Central Ontario, having

MR. K EARDLEY-WILMOT SECRETARY-TREASURER PETERBOROUGH INDUSTRIAL EXHIBITION

every facility for handling granite. They get it from the quarries in the rough in car load lots, and have it worked at their own factory, thus making a big saving in freight and duty. They have a staff of granite cutters who served their apprenticeship at the home of the granite business (Peterhead, Scotland) and are turning out all different styles of monuments, some with all polished faces ornamented with tracery carving; others with polished faces and rock ends, showing the beauty of the stone in the rough. They are also making something decidedly new in a monument finished in oxalog and heavily carved in relief in a fine grained granite of a very light color. Messrs. Coughlin also have on view a sample of Stony Lake granite, and, everyone wishing a memorial of this stone, can get one by leaving their order with this firm. The big display is in charge of J. Godfrey Coughlin, salesman for the firm.

Yelland's Well Built Buggies

Mr. Benj. Yelland, the Murray-st. carriage builder, has a large tent on the grounds, in which he is showing several well built and attractively finished buggies. There are two seat top buggies with steel tires, two top buggies with rubber tires, one comfortable runabout and one bike waggon, each equipped with rubber tires. The display reflects credit on Mr. Yelland's facilities for turning out up-to-date conveyances in the best style, finish and design. All the vehicles exhibited by him are handmade and guaranteed in every particular. The material entering into their construction is of the highest grade, and for service, light running qualities, appearance and general workmanship no rigs in the market can surpass them. Mr. Yelland has supplied rigs to many of the leading residents of Peterborough town and county, and the fact that his output has given the very best satisfaction is ample evidence of the care, skill and soundness which are characteristic of his establishment. In brief, Mr. Yelland's buggies are such that one can always ride in them with ease and comfort. They are dependable rigs in every sense, and a credit to a home manufactory. A visit to Mr. Yelland's busy establishment on Murray-st. will demonstrate to anyone the superior class of work done in the carriage department. He has never turned out any style of buggy which he cannot conscientiously recommend as to its build, style, material and durability.

Elmdale Stock Farm Exhibit

The showing in Tamworth hogs and Holstein cattle made by Mr. Bertram Hoskin, of The Gully, Northumberland county, is an admirable one. Hoskin is an extensive breeder and has some of the finest pens ever seen in this part of the country. He exhibits twelve head of Tamworths, consisting of five boars, and seven sows. Tamworths are a superior bacon hog, with a long, deep side, easily fed and excellent animals in every respect. "Bobs" is the winner of the first prize at the Pan-American Exposition. He is now four years old. The silver medal boar, "Caldwell's Choice," is the best hog of his class ever seen on the grounds, and of him Mr. Hoskin is especially proud. Among the sows, Nellie, of Springbank, is a superior animal. With two of her daughters and another sow, the quartette was awarded first prize at the Dominion exhibition this year in Winnipeg. One pen from Caldwell's Choice captured first place at the same show. Out of thirty premiums at Winnipeg, Mr. Hoskin's Tamworths landed no less than seventeen prizes and diplomas—a record which it would be hard to surpass. These hogs also swept the board this year at Cobourg and Lindsay, and their enterprising proprietor reports a number of sales.

Mr. Hoskin's herd of Holsteins are a decided feature in the cattle department. There are three males and seven females. Holsteins are conceded to be the greatest milkers and best butter cows of the day, and the herd from Elmdale stock farm have a strong dash of blood in them from the famous milker, De Kol. All Mr. Hoskin's young, strong and fine appearing animals were bred by a grandson of Sadie Vale Concordia, who, in 1903, held the world's record as a butter producer, her showing being 30 pounds 10 ounces in seven days. Mr. Hoskin has been breeding Holstein cattle for ten years, and Tamworth hogs for four years. He owns one of the most improved stock farms in Eastern Ontario, and all interested should not fail to see his unexcelled prize winning pens of Tamworth hogs and Holstein cattle.

Cereal Company's Display

Package upon package, pyramidical in form, and neatly decorated with brilliantly colored bunting, the exhibit of the American Cereal Company is a striking feature of the interior arrangement of the main building. Mr. A. C. Steven, the hustling manager of the sales department, is in charge of the display, while generous quantities of unique advertising matter are being distributed by Miss Kate Cranley. Mr. G. W. Mulligan designed the exhibit, which reflects infinite credit on his artistic ability. The showing consists of Quaker rolled oats, Banner oats, Saxon oats, and Pettijohn's Breakfast Food—all products of the gigantic mill, which is one of the proud boasts of Peterborough. The fame of these justly celebrated breakfast dishes is too widely known to need any lengthy reference. The products of the American Cereal Company are sold all over America and Canada, and their tasteful, toothsome and tempting qualities are appreciated in thousands of homes.

They develop strong, healthy, happy men, women and children and all enterprising grocers and provision merchants handle them, and report a constantly increasing demand. Quaker Oats have won their way to the very forefront solely on their merits, and have come to stay as a national breakfast dish. In each package of Saxon oats and Banner oats will be found a nice piece of crockery, the premiums being greatly appreciated. These foods are a delicious treat for all, and if you have not tried any of these various national building materials for body and brain, turned out by the American Cereal Company, you certainly have missed half the joy of living. Be sure and see the handsome and artistic display of the company.

SHE WHO SMILES.

It Is a Wise Woman Who Knows the Value of a Bright Face.

It is a wise woman who can smile upon friends and upon enemies. It will keep the first and disarm the latter.

It is a wise woman who can smile even when little things bother her. If she can manage to see a little fun even when something goes wrong she is not only wise, but popular.

It is a wise woman who can smile at a compliment, be really pleased with it and then—forget it.

It is a wise woman who can smile at a disparaging remark and pretend not to know it is intended for her.

It is a wise woman who can smile when she rises in the morning, as it brightens the whole day for herself and her neighbors, and she is still wiser to smile when she retires, as it blots out the disagreeable features of the day past and gives her a refreshing sleep to prepare her for the day to come.

It is a wise woman who can smile no matter how she feels. In this she shows that she has not only learned to govern herself, but to understand other people and the depressing effect upon them of a peevish, dissatisfied woman. —Philadelphia Ledger.

HARDWOOD FLOORS.

How They Should Be Treated to Get the Best Results.

The best hardwood floors for every day usage are those which are either waxed or oiled. A floor that is shellacked, as a great many hardwood floors are, does not wear well. It shows the marks of boot nails and is easily scratched. Unless it is carefully covered with rugs it is as much of a nuisance as carpeting. The waxed floor is really the ideal floor for all rooms, except the kitchen. The ordinary oiled floor is the best for the kitchen, where there is so much hard usage. It will often remain, under ordinary conditions, very clean and neat looking for half a year or more without renewing the oil. The proper oil to use is boiled oil, and it should be rubbed into the floor until the pores are filled with it. In time it becomes oxidized, so that a permanently glossy surface is produced.

PETERBOROUGH INDUSTRIAL TO-DAY OFFICIALLY OPENED

The Button was Pressed by the Hon. Mortimer Clark, Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario

CONGRATULATED TOWN ON ITS SUCCESS

The Exhibition Now in Full Swing—A Most Auspicious Opening Day—The Horse and Farm Stock Departments Make Excellent Showings—Judging Carried on in a Systematic Manner, and Satisfaction in Evidence on Every Hand

Everything was lovely for the opening of the Peterborough Industrial Fair today. The weather was the best that was ever allowed, and the public appreciated the fact, judging from the number of people on the grounds during the day. There probably never has been a more auspicious official opening than that of today when the Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario, Hon. Mortimer Clark, pressed the button. This ceremony tended to give great impetus to the interest which centered in the Exhibition, this fact being evidenced by the large crowds on the grounds during the afternoon.

The Secretary-Treasurer, Mr. E. Eardley-Wilmot, states that the entry list in horses, cattle, sheep and swine is much larger than that of last year, and was thoroughly representative of the County. Not a few exhibitors are present from outside places—men who have shown their animals at Ottawa, London, Toronto and other exhibitions, and this fact is a further demonstration of the growing interest in Peterborough Fair as being representative of the Midland District. There were some magnificent horses shown in the ring this morning, and this year's fair will undoubtedly mark the setting of a higher standard in cattle, horses and farm stock than ever existed before.

Considerable interest was taken in the exhibits of the main building, the art department, the ladies' fancy work, the showing of farm, garden and dairy produce having many admirers. The showing by local business and manufacturing concerns was an especial feature of the inside exhibit, the Cereal Company, the Cordage Company and the Coughlin Manumental Works being among the leaders. Several tents were erected on the grounds, and there enterprising carriage manufacturers and agents of dairy machinery exhibited.

There were many side-features also to interest those who had ready coin, and the young folks, of course, made the largest investments.

The judging was carried out in a thoroughly systematic manner, and such was the order observed by the directors in carrying out the programme that the greatest satisfaction resulted.

THE OFFICIAL OPENING.

There must have been three thousand people on the grounds at two o'clock for the official opening of the fair. His Honor the Lieutenant-Governor and Mrs. Clarke arrived in their carriages almost at the time appointed, and accompanying them to the platform were Mr. D. Hughes-Charles, President of the Exhibition; Hon. J. R. Stratton and Mrs. Stratton; Mr. and Mrs. K. Eardley-Wilmot, Col. and Mrs. Campbell, of Montreal; Mr. Wm. Hendrie, of Hamilton; Mr. E. A. Peck, Warden of the County of Peterborough; Rev. E. A. Langfeldt and Mr. George W. Fitzgerald, County Councillor. As the party ascended the platform the band played "The Maple Leaf Forever." Great interest centred in the opening speeches.

Mr. D. Hughes-Charles referred with pleasure to the existing King's weather. The directors, he said, were delighted to see the large attendance; they were endeavoring to place the exhibition on a basis which would make it second, to none in the Provinces and a credit to the town and county. The entry list of live stock was much larger than last year, and this was encouraging. He referred with regret that Mr. Beith was not present with his prize winning hackneys, owing to the fact that Bowmanville fair conflicted with this, and he could not go back on his own town. There was, however, an exhibit of ten fine animals by Graham Bros., of Claremont, the largest importers of Clydesdales in this country. The exhibit of agricultural products was not large, and the President told the farmers that they ought to be ashamed of themselves because of that fact.

Mr. Hughes-Charles stated that a debt of gratitude was due Lieut.-Governor Clark and Mrs. Clark for their presence at the exhibition. He read the following address:—

Peterborough, Sept. 27, 1904.

May it please Your Honor:—

On behalf of the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition and of this Town and County, we welcome Mrs. Clarke and yourself on the occasion of your first visit to Peterborough since your appointment as Lieutenant-Governor.

We can assure you that your friends in this district heard with great pleasure and appreciation of your elevation to their offices, and have every confidence that you will faithfully and ably discharge the difficult and responsible duties attached to your position.

The occasion of your visit is timely, for the people of the County and Town are much interested in the Exhibition which you have so kindly consented to open, and are pleased to have the opportunity of being present to join in the welcome to you.

We appreciate the interest you show in the Exhibition by your presence here in spite of the many claims upon your time. We have recognized the efforts you have made by similar acts to encourage the great industry of agriculture, and the other industries that make the prosperity of Ontario, and it is encouraging to find that as Lieutenant-Governor of this great Province, you do not confine yourself to your official duties, but have shown your readiness to advance the interests of the Province in any way in your power.

We feel, Sir, that we have in this County a very important portion of Ontario. The agricultural and dairying interests, as you will see when you inspect the Exhibition, are important. We would direct your attention in particular to the horse exhibit, which we trust will meet with your commendation.

The County has also much mineral wealth, gold, iron and other minerals in abundance, and the forests are far from being depleted. The manufacturing industries, especially in this town, and numerous and important, one of them having one thousand employes and in others the number of employes runs well up into the hundreds.

Our ideas are not altogether confined to material progress, to the exclusion of culture or recreation, for the one is provided for by large and handsome churches and schools, and kindred institutions, and the other by several large and beautiful parks and recreation grounds, while within the County are several as picturesque and pleasant summer resorts as can be found in the Province.

We feel that in coming here today you have not only assisted the Directors of the Exhibition, but that you have also done honor to the Town and County, and we desire you to know that we highly appreciate your kindness.

D. HUGHES-CHARLES, President Peterborough Industrial Exhibition.
G. M. ROGER, Mayor, Peterborough.
E. A. PECK, Warden, Peterborough.

THE REPLY.

The Hon. Lieutenant-Governor was received with applause, and he stated that he felt honored in being requested to open an exhibition in so important a centre as Peterborough. He congratulated the directors upon the great efforts they had put forth to maintain the exhibition, and he assured those not connected with it, that they could form but very little idea of the labor and time and trouble which the directors had spent on their behalf. He trusted they would pay good heed to the remarks of the President, and that they would realize their duty towards the exhibition.

His Honor thanked them for the flattering address and the kind expression of good wishes towards Mrs. Clark and himself, and hoped they would be fully realized. He had always felt a deep interest in Peterborough. Though never a resident, his wife had spent some of her early years here, and she had told him a great deal about this district, so much, in fact, that he almost felt he had something to do with Peterborough himself. Some years ago her brother had contested this riding unsuccessfully, and he was in Peterborough on that occasion. One thing impressed him then—that the electors of the County then had nothing to learn from those who came after them, with regard to organization. They had the latest improvements along that line, and in electoral procedure. It was a long time since he had been in Peterborough, and the city had grown. He had been struck, as he drove through the streets, to see the extent of important buildings—a glad revelation to him. He had heard further that they were to have large and important armouries and a splendid collegiate institute. There were already a number of admirable schools, and the new building would prove a great addition. He was much struck also with the factories that had sprung up. There was one of the largest electrical works in the Dominion of Canada—equipped with the latest scientific appliances. There were also piano factories, pork packing establishments, works for the production of agricultural implements and large mills for the production of cereals. Some years ago in Rotterdam, Holland, he was very much struck by a large illuminated sign on one of the highest buildings in the city with the words "Quaker Oats." He little thought that the goods they sold in Rotterdam were produced in Peterborough, almost at his own door.

These factories could not fail to prove of the utmost consequence to the city, having one great effect, preventing young men and women from seeking employment in other countries, sometimes under the flags not friendly to us. He hoped our young people would be able to find employment more and more in the locality in which they reside and grow up useful and an honor to the city and country and to the great advantage of the commonwealth.

While manufacturing industries are of the utmost importance to the well being of the whole community one cannot fail to realize that the whole basis of the prosperity of this community rests with the agricultural industry. I had a conversation with the manager of one of the largest banking institutions in London, controlling 90 millions. He told me one remarkable thing; that one never heard the question asked, is there a good harvest? The land values and the agricultural facilities of Great Britain counted for nothing in financial circles. Here the land value the productive value is enormous, and the prosperity as the years go by will increase more and more, according to the attention given to agriculture. Time was when any man could be a farmer, but, I trust, these days are past. The Government has established agricultural colleges and dairy schools to advance agricultural knowledge, and agriculture is in a sense recognized in the University of Toronto, and a degree in agriculture is given. With this improved acquaintance with the true sense of agriculture, I have no doubt that the interests of the industry will continue to advance. I think we are entering an era in which there will be higher prices for agricultural products, and this will add greatly to the comfort of the agricultural population.

I trust the young men and women brought up on the farm will not in our days run away to the villages and towns for purposes of maintaining themselves, and will obtain that independent livelihood upon the farm, the most independent life a man can live. I hope the days are past when our young men and women think it beneath themselves to remain on the farm, and will make for conditions that will increase the influence, the energy and the importance of the the great community to which they belong.

His Honor referred to the great engineering works in Peterborough, the lift lock, one of the most wonderful works in the Dominion. The members of the Society of English Engineers who recently visited Peterborough remarked upon it with the greatest interest. I was told, said the speaker, that there is to be great improvement in the Trent Canal, and with it the facilities for bringing produce from Georgian Bay to Lake Ontario and thence to the sea-board. This is a vital question, and the completion of the canal will mean a great advantage to the whole country. His Honor said he did not propose to speak much on problems of empire, but of this he felt confident that the British people would ever be united in maintaining the true grandeur and magnificence of the British Empire.

He assured the people that they would be delighted with teh music of the 43rd Highlanders Band—those soldiers of the King who go into the battle field with their regiment, and some of whom had been wounded on the field of battle fighting for the British Empire. Their music was simply superb.

Hearty cheers marked the close of His Honor's address.

The Hon.-President, Hon. J. R. Stratton, made a brief address in which he expressed pleasure in joining in the welcome to the Lieutenant-Governor and Mrs. Clark. He congratulated the directors on the very auspicious opening and was glad that the president had done a little scolding. New buildings, he suggested, however, should be erected on the grounds. In congratulating the directors on the large membership he referred to the excellent financial backing of the Exhibition. The president was manager of the Bank of Commerce, the secretary-treasurer was manager of the Bank of Montreal, while the auditors were the managers of the Bank of Toronto and the Ontario Bank. He was pleased to remark the apparent prosperity of his country friends and hoped all would carry home very happy remembrances of Peterborough Fair.

The President called for three cheers for the Lieutenant-Governor and Mrs. Clark, and this was heartily responded to, after which His Honor declared the exhibition officially opened, and the band played "God Save the King."

At noon today, His lordship and Mrs. Clark, the Wardan and officials of the fair and their ladies were entertained by Hon. J. R. Stratton and Mrs. Stratton.

DEATH OF MRS. SHERIFF HALL

A Life of Christian Usefulness and Held in Loving Regard.

Saddening news was that announced this morning—the death of Mrs. Sheriff Hall, and the loss of one who was held in loving regard by all who knew her. She had not been well during the past summer, and on Wednesday night, Sept 21st, her illness became severe. It was of the nature of a complication, which was rendered more serious by paralysis. The end came last evening. Mrs. Hall was born in Georgetown, British Guiana. She had resided in Peterborough since her marriage. Her former name was Miss Annie Gilbert Mrs. Hall had every attribute of a Christian lady, and her life was devoted to a wide sphere of usefulness She was actively associated with St Paul's Presbyterian church, and on many occasions has occupied presiding positions in the different institutions of church work. Her death will create a vacancy which all who have been associated with her will deplore. She was for several years president of the Ladies' Aid of St. Pauls', took an active interest in mission work and was also president, for some time, of the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Y.M.C.A. In all of these her efforts have been very greatly appreciated. Besides Mr. Sheriff Hall, there are surviving four sons, two of whom are at home, and five daughters, three at home and two absent. Mrs. Crofton, in Portland, Me., and Mrs. Austin in Detriot.

The funeral will be held on Wednesday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

CALCUTT CLAIM FAILED

PLAINTIFF FAILED TO ESTABLISH TWO IMPORTANT POINTS.

That Captain Cartwright was Negligent and that this was Cause of Accident—Counter Claim Dismissed—Grand Jury's Presentment.

At the opening of the High Court this morning the Honorable Chief Justice Falconbridge gave judgment in the case Calcutt vs. Cartwright, an action brought to recover $1000 damages for the wrecking of a scow and tons of lumber therefrom on the Otonabee River in May last, due, it was alleged, to negligence on the part of Capt. Cartwright, of the Water Lily, a vessel owned by plaintiff. His Lordship pointed out that to succeed in such a case it was necessary for the plaintiff to establish two things, that the defendant was guilty of negligence, and that the negligence or breach of duty was the cause of the accident. The case was an unusual one; he could not recall one similar in his experience where a vessel owner sought to recover damages from his captain. The glance booms were not in position in the river at the time, and the defendant charged that he got peremptory orders to come up with the scow and that he had told plaintiff if such were done it would be at his risk. There appeared a difference of opinion with reference to this, but His Lordship held that the two points he referred to had not been positively established and he dismissed the claim. The counter claim of Cartwright against Calcutt of $240 was likewise dismissed.

JURY'S PRESENTMENT.

To the Hon. Chief Justice Falconbridge:

May it Please Your Lordship.—The Grand Jury heartily agree with your Lordship in congratulating the town and County of Peterborough on the comparative absence of crime. According to your instructions we visited the jail and found therein thirteen prisoners, all male, who seemed perfectly satisfied with the care and attention given them by the officials. The jail itself we found clean and kept in the best sanitary condition possible. Three of the inmates appear to be men of weak intellects, and one inmate is a man whose only crime is old age and infirmity.

We also visited the Nicholls and St. Joseph's Hospitals. These are institutions of which the Town and County of Peterborough have just reason to be proud. The sick and afflicted of this district receive in them places the best of attention and the most skilful treatment that medical skill and good nursing can provide. We regret to find that infectious and contagious diseases have to be treated in the same buildings as other patients.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

F. BIRDSALL,
Foreman.

The jury deeply deplore the death of Mrs Sheriff Hall, whose illness was mentioned in Your Lordship's address yesterday, and we wish to express our sincere sympathy with Mr. Hall in this his hour of affliction.

His Lordship thanked them for the promptitude and diligence with which they had discharged their duties. He re-echoed the congratulations offered in view of the comparative absence of crime. With regard to the presence in the gaol of persons of old age and infirmity and weak intellect, he had reason to believe that provision is being made by the Government for the transmission of such inmates to a more suitable place, and he would forward the presentment to the Provincial Secretary. He concurred in the expression of sympathy to Mr Sheriff Hall in his deep affliction.

The Minstrels Moving

Last night a meeting of the Minstrels Association was held and the several committees appointed to attend to details of organization and the several departments of the show. As soon as music is received and prepared practice will begin in the Bradburn Hall.

First Aid to the Injured

This is one of the new subjects to be taken up in the Y.M.C.A. evening school this year. It is an important one. Several accidents have happened of late and are constantly happening where, if his associates knew some of the first principles of first aid, the comfort and welfare of the victims of such accidents would have been different. Mr. Percy K. Holmes, physical director, will be the instructor. The common interest of man in man should cause many to take up the class.

The Gunpowder Plot.

The Orangemen of Peterborough are making preparations for an entertainment to commemorate the frustration of the Gunpowder Plot. It will be held on Friday, Nov. 4th, 1904, in the Foresters' Hall. Rev. Mr. Whitelaw, of Omemee, D.G.C. Ontario East, will give an address, and Rev. E. A. Langfeldt will act as chairman. An excellent programme is in preparation. Remember the date.

REDUCTION OF MEMBERS ON EDUCATION BOARD

The New Act Relating to this Subject was Discussed by the Aldermen

MONEY FOR THE COLLEGIATE AND SITE

Solicitor Instructed to Take Necessary Steps for Issue of Debentures for $40,000 to Collegiate and $10,000 as Town's Contributions to Site—Council and Trustees to Meet and Discuss the New Act Meldrum Siding Question to be Settled.

The Town Council held a special meeting last night for the particular purpose—in accordance with a notice of motion by Ald. McWilliams—of giving consideration to the new Act elating to reduction of the number of memers on the Board of Education. Ald. McWilliams explained the Act, but it was deemed advisable to first hold a consultation with the trustees to ascertain their views on the matter, they having written a letter requesting that no action be taken, as very important business was pending.

The Finance Committee presented a report with reference to the arrangement of details in connection with the purchase of the Separate School grounds for a site for a drill hall and Collegiate Institute, and a resolution was passed instructing the Town Solicitor to take necessary steps looking to the issue of the necessary debentures to pay for the town's share towards the site, and to enable the Board of Education to pay their share, and proceed with the erection of a Collegiate Institute.

Many communications were received, but none of any great importance.

The Cereal Co's., the C.P.R's. and Mr. W. H. Meldrum's representatives are asked to meet the Council on Wednesday night to discuss the erection of a siding on Simcoe-st.

There were present Aldermen Morrison, Rush, Edgcumbe, Best, Batten, Mason, McWilliams, Hicks, Adams and Scott. In the absence of the Mayor, Ald. Morrison, on motion of Ald. Batten, seconded by Ald. McWilliams, presided.

The minutes of last meeting were confirmed.

COMMUNICATIONS.

From the Canadian Machine Telephone Co., stating that in a few days they would be ready to begin underground work in the business part of the town, and that they have left with the town engineer plans for trench work and manholes for his approval. They asked that the Council arrange matters that the work might be proceeded with at the end of the week.—Board of Works.

From Emma Hudson, asking for remission of taxes.—Court of Revision.

From W. E. Genno, stating that he proposed to erect a building on King-st. to be used as a skating rink, and enclosed plans of the proposed building, which will be 200 feet long, while the frontage will be 114 feet, with a depth and higbth of 20 feet. A board fence 10 feet high will surround the space for skating, and accommodation for 2,500 persons will be provided. The writer states that he intends to make the rink modern in every particular, and asks that the Council grant the necessary permission to proceed with the erection of the building at once.—Committee of the Whole Council. It seams that an adjustment of the Fire Limits by-law will be necessary if this application is granted.

From R. W. F. E. Davidson, asking for permission to make a connection with a sewer to be put in on Antrim-st.—Board of Works.

From W. G. Morrow, Secretary of the Board of Education, enclosing a resolution passed by the Building Committee of the Board:—Moved by W. G. Ferguson, seconded by J. J. Hartley,—Whereas the Joint Committee of the Town Council and the School Board, having obtained from the Government a grant of $10,000 towards the purchase money of the Murray-st. Separate School grounds, and whereas the School Board desire to proceed at once to let the contract for the erection of a new Collegiate Institute, this Committee request the Town Council to immediately exercise their option to purchase the said Murray-st. grounds and to convey to the Board of Education that portion of the said grounds already agreed upon, and upon the execution and delivery of such conveyance the Board are prepared to pay to the town the sum of $10,000. —Finance Committee.

From S. R. Armstrong, returning officer, advising the Council that both by-laws that came before the people on Sept. 20th were defeated.—Received.

From F. M. Caldwell, asking for a plank sidewalk connecting his house on the east side of Rubidge-st. with Dublin-st.—Board of Works.

From Dennistoun, Peek, Kerr & Stevenson, on behalf of William Kemp, claiming damages to the extent of $60.00 to a horse which fell into a drain on August 13th last.—Legal Committee.

From George Mather and others, asking that four willow trees adjacent to the property of the petitioner be cut down and replaced with other trees. Ald. McWilliams moved, seconded by Ald. Batten,—That the Engineeer be empowered to authorise the work if considered advisable.

From F. Bartlett, asking for the appointment as assistant to Mr. W. Chipman, who has been engaged to prepare plans for a sewage system. —Special Sewer Committee.

From W. G. Morrow, Secretary of the Board of Education, enclosing a resolution expressing the desire of that body that no action be taken in the reduction of the Board, in view of important measures.—Received.

From J. Osias de Laplante, on behalf of N. T. Laplante, giving notice that the offer of the latter to sell to the town part of Block A, in Park lot No. 6, in North Monaghan, is withdrawn.—Received.

ADVERTISING THE TOWN.

Ald. Rush presented the following report of the Manufacturers' Committee:

SITE FOR DRILL HALL.

Ald. Adams presented the following report of the Finance Committee:

Gentlemen,—Your Finance Committee beg leave to report as follows:—

The matter of arranging the details in connection with the purchase of the Separate School grounds for a site for a Drill Hall and Collegiate Institute, having been referred to this Committee, we met with representatives of the Board of Education and discussed the question of the location of the buildings. It was mutually agreed that it would be unwise to place the buildings on the west side of the grounds, as that would result in the parade and [illegible] grounds being towards George [illegible] it would be unsightly to [illegible]re ground, tramped down, [illegible]t grass or other evidences of [illegible], within view of the main street. It was therefore decided that the two acres of Central Park next to George street should be kept as a park, as they now are; that the buildings should be located on the centre two acres, and that the west two acres should form the parade and play grounds. Your Committee appointed a deputation to wait upon the acting Minister of Public Works, as did also the Board of Education, and the deputation was accompanied by Mr. R. R. Hall. The Minister agreed to the location of the buildings as proposed, and also that the Government would contribute $10,000 towards the purchase of the site, the Crown to be given a deed of Lots 3, 4, 5, and 6 north of Murray street. The Board of Education is to have a deed of Lots 3 and 4, south of McDonnell street, and the County will have to be consulted with regard to this, but in view of the County's willingness to give the whole Park for a site for a drill hall, there will doubtless be no difficulty. Lots 5 and 6 south of McDonnell street may be vested in any of the three parties to the transaction, but they are to be kept open and not built upon so as to be available for drilling purposes.

We recommend that this Committee be authorized to complete the transaction, and that the Solicitor be instructed to prepare the necessary by-law for the purpose.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

Ald. Best pointed out that no plans had as yet evidently been agreed on by the Board of Education for a Collegiate.

Ald. Adams replied that the Council had nothing to do with that. The Department of Public Works had indicated a willingness to make the Armouries of the same style of finish as the Collegiate, so that the two might correspond, and this he considered important from the standpoint of appearance. The armouries would undoubtedly be a credit to the town.

The report was adopted.

Ald. Best read a communication from Mr. Richard Sheehy, asking that a cement sidewalk be built in front of his terrace on Bolivar street, and that he should be permitted to build the walk at the rate at which the Council is building walks at present. The Board of Works was, on motion of Ald. Best seconded by Ald. Batten, authorized to proceed with this work.

THE BOARD OF EDUCATION.

Ald. McWilliams stated that he proposed to bring in a motion with reference to the Board of Education

JUST BREATHE.

When Worn Out Don't Take a Stimulant; Just Breathe.

Don't take a stimulant; just breathe. This is the advice of a doctor who does not believe in the old medical policy of mystery, but who undertakes philosophically to explain to any patient why such and such a remedy should be beneficial, says the Philadelphia Telegraph.

"When you are 'let down,'" continues this physician, "don't take a cocktail; just breathe. Put your finger on your pulse and get its rhythm. During eight beats draw in the breath, breathing deep and low and forcing the diaphragm down first, then filling the upper lungs. Then exhale this breath during four beats of the pulse.

"Now, if you are working with a piece of machinery, say a typewriter, what do you do to make it run more smoothly? You don't put a lot more oil on it and gum and clog it all up. You clean it first. You can best clean the blood by breathing. The blood comes through the lungs and it needs fresh air in it. If it can't find perfectly fresh air it needs more air which is not perfectly fresh. It needs to be cleaned by contact with the air.

"Once in awhile hold the lungs full of breath as long as you can without expulsion. In doing this you are simply cleaning the machine. You are cleaning the blood. At the same time you are giving that little flutter to the action of the heart and the nervous system which you took the cocktail for. In the latter case you didn't clean the machine. You simply ran it a little faster and gummed it up a little more. You didn't get the same results, the same feeling of exhilaration and of accomplishment, without taking the cocktail, and at the same time the machine will steadily improve in its running quality. Breathe the best air you can get and plenty of it. It is as necessary as food. The heart and lungs act involuntarily. In hurried business life they become too involuntary. In that case don't take a cocktail; just breathe."

POINTED PARAGRAPHS.

Don't volunteer too much information.

What a lot of time we waste wondering why.

Patting yourself on the back is a difficult task—seldom done gracefully.

There are more talkers than thinkers. Here you have the solution of quarrels.

One of the greatest virtues and the rarest is the moral courage to practise self denial.

The Voice of Experience.

The wedding is to occur soon, and she was telling her mother about her plans.

"When Fred is out late at night," she said, "I shall not scold him. I shall try to be reasonable. I think I shall go so far as to keep a light burning for him to make him cheery when he returns."

Her mother was silent.

"Don't you think it would be a good idea to keep the light burning?" she persisted.

"Well, it might do very well for the first month or so. But after you have paid a few gas bills you'll probably conclude that it will be just as well to put the matches where he can find them and turn the light out."

Heroism in Animals.

Animals are capable of what we should call heroism in man. In one field was a donkey, in another a horse. Through the first went a mastiff and made for the ass, seized him by the throat, pulled him down, and that so suddenly that the donkey looked likely to be killed. The horse in the next field leaped the hedge dividing the two pastures, cantered the dog with his teeth, swung him and like a baseball player caught him on the fall—with his heels. The mastiff was whisked over the hedge which the horse had just cleared, and the donkey was left in peace to recover from his wounds.

Over the Border

By ... ROBERT BARR,

Author of "Jennie Baxter, Journalist," Etc.

Copyright, 1903, by Frederick A. Stokes Co.

CHAPTER XIII (continued.)

"The residence of that foul, malignant Lord Rudby, so called?"

"Yes, but not to see his lordship, who is my enemy, personal as well as political."

"You are truthful, and it pleases me. Why did you make a foolish mystery of your excursions? I take the case to stand thus: Your grandfather and Rudby were neighbors and possibly friends. You were and are in love with my lord's daughter, but since you belong to the cause of the people this oppressor of the people will have naught of you. You have risked your life to see the girl, who is doubtless as silly as the rest of her class, as you will discover if I let you live. Stands it all like that?"

"In a measure, sir, it does, saving any reflection on the lady, who"—

"Surely, surely. I know what you would say, for I was once your age and as scared in folly. The question is, if you will risk your life for her, will you do what I ask of you to earn the girl and your life, or will you refuse and lose her to another?"

"Sir, I will do anything for her."

"Then harken well. There was here before me, where you now stand, some moments since, the most plausible liar in the kingdom. He told me truths which on the surface appeared to be treachery to his friend, but which he was well aware I already knew. This was to baffle me into believing him. He rides to Oxford to see the king, and in that I am willing to aid him. He may tell the king what pleases him and those who send him. Little good will it do any of them. In return the king is to give him a commission to be handed to certain lords in Scotland. If that commission crosses the border we are like to have a blaze to the north of us which I do not wish to see kindled until a year from now. Then, by God—then, by God's will I shall be ready for them. We shall defeat the Scots in any case, but if this commission reaches these malcontents we cannot have the pleasure—humph!—we shall be precluded from the duty of beheading the ringleaders without bringing on ourselves the contumely of Europe. Without the king's commission they are but brollers, marauders. With this commission they will set up the claim that they are belligerents.

"The commission must be intercepted at all costs. It will be your task to frustrate the intentions of the king and his Scottish nobles. But the task is more complicated than yet appears. It would be an easy matter to run this messenger through the body and there an end. I want what he carries, but I do not wish to harm the carrier. These Scots are a clannish, troublesome, determined race. If you prick one with a sword's point the whole nation howls. This, then, must be done quietly, so that we bring no swarm about our ears. William Armstrong is the messenger's name, and he has powerful supporters in his own country. He was stopped as soon as he crossed the border yesterday and brought here. He pretends to be an innocent trader in cattle and will likely keep up that pretense. I have appeared to believe all he says, and he leaves this house tomorrow morning with a pass from my hand, giving him permission to travel as far south as Manchester, which was all he asked. I would willingly have given him safe conduct to Oxford, but he was too crafty to accept such a thing. He thinks he can make his way south from Manchester. As a matter of fact, he cannot, but I wish to make the way easy for him.

"Of course I could give a general order that he was not to be molested, but there are reasons against this, as we have doubtless spies in our own ranks, and a general order would excite suspicion and would probably prove useless because this man, south of his permit's territory, will endeavor to go surreptitiously to Oxford and by unfrequented routes. It will be your duty to become acquainted with Armstrong and win his confidence. You will accompany him to Oxford and return with him. You will be protected by a pass so bound that it will cover any disguise either of you may care to assume. It is such a pass as I have never issued before and am not like to issue again, so I need not warn you to guard it carefully and use it only when necessary. It reads thus."

Here the speaker took up a sheet of paper on which he had been writing and, holding it so that the light from the candles fell upon it, read aloud:

"Pass the bearer and one other, without question or interference, from Carlisle to Oxford and return.

"The journey south will give you the opportunity to become acquainted with your man. On the northward march you must become possessed of what he carries, and when you bring it to me you receive in its stead pardon and promotion. If you do not succeed before you reach Carlisle, then I must crush him, possibly kill him as a spy. Will you undertake it?"

"'Tis an ungracious office you would bestow upon me, sir. I had rather meet him in fair fight and slay him or have him slay me, as God willed."

"There speaks youth!" cried Cromwell impatiently. "This man is a treacherous, lying spy, whose life by all the rules of war is already forfeit. I propose to discomfit him with his own weapons. Nay, more, I willingly save him from the destruction he merits. You are set to do him the greatest service one man can offer another. If you fail, he dies; if you succeed, he has probably a long life before him."

"Sir, you are in the right, and your argument is incontestable. I accept your command willingly."

A gleam of pleasure lit the rugged face of the general, for he was flattered to believe his prowess in controversy was no less potent than his genius in war. His voice softened perceptibly as he continued:

"You save your country and at the same time save your country's enemy. What excuse will you give to Armstrong for your desire to visit Oxford?"

"My friend, the son of Lord Rudby, is there. Although we are on opposite sides, he has none of the bitterness against me shown by his father. I will say I wish to confer with him."

"That will serve. Now this pass is for two, and you can offer to Armstrong safe conduct under your guidance, giving what plea you choose for the absence of the man who was to accompany you and who, it may be, was supposed to have procured this pass from me."

Cromwell folded the pass and handed it to young Wentworth. "Go. This paper is your safeguard. I shall give the order that you are to be well mounted and provided with money. Send Captain Bent to me as you pass out."

Once more alone, Cromwell wrote the pass for Armstrong, giving him permission to travel between Carlisle and Manchester. When he had finished writing, Captain Bent was standing beside the table, and to him he delivered the paper.

"You will give that to your late prisoner," he said. "He is to depart tomorrow morning, not before 8 o'clock, and is to travel unmolested. You have accomplished your duties well, captain, and your services shall not be forgotten."

The silent but gratified captain left the room with straighter shoulders than had marked his previous exit. His chief looked up at the dark gallery and called out, "Come down and report yourself to the officer of the night."

For nearly ten minutes Cromwell sat at the table in silence, save for the busy scratching of his pen. Then he rose wearily, with a deep sigh, his marked face seemingly years older than when he had entered the room. Once outside, he gave Colonel Purlock the papers he had written and said:

"The finding of the court martial is approved, but the sentence is suspended. It is possible that Wentworth may render such service to the state as will annul the sentence against him. You will give him every assistance he requires of you and the amount of money set down in this order. Bring out my horse."

When the animal was brought to the lawn the general mounted with some difficulty, more like an old man than a leader of cavalry. The two silent horsemen behind him, he disappeared once more into the night, as he had come.

CHAPTER XIV.

NINE o'clock of a summer's morning in rural England is an hour of delight if the weather be fine. The birds sing whether there be war or peace in the land; the trees and hedgerows and the flowers make a path to fairyland of the narrow lanes, but the man who trusts to these winding thoroughfares, unless he know the country well, is like to find himself in an enchanted maze, and Armstrong, stopping his horse at an intersection, standing in his stirrups the better to view the landscape, wrinkled his brow in perplexity.

The sound of galloping hoof beats to the rear caused him to sink into his saddle once more and wait patiently until he was overtaken. As his outlook had shown him the woods surrounding the mansion he had left an hour before in an entirely unexpected direction and at a distance not at all proportionate to the time he had spent on horseback, the thought occurred to him that his late detainers had changed their minds regarding his liberation and were pursuing him, but he was fortified by the knowledge that he possessed a permit written by Cromwell's own hand, which no one in that part of England would dare to disregard. If the oncomer should prove to be a private marauder, of which the country doubtless had many, the horseman reposed a calm confidence in his own blade that gave sufficient repose to his manner. He turned his horse across the lane, completely barring the way, and with knuckles resting on his hip awaited whatever might ensue.

The hastening rider came round a corner, curbing his animal down to a walk on seeing the path blocked. The two horses neighed a greeting to each other. Armstrong was pleased to note that the stranger was a youth with a face as frank and beaming as the day, a face to which his friendly heart went out at once with sympathy, for it seemed glorified by the morning light, as if he were a lover sure of a warm greeting from his lass, which was indeed the hope that animated the boy.

Arriving as near the impeding horseman as he seemed to think safe, he came to a stand and with a salutation of the hand made inquiry:

"Do you stop me, sir?"

This question carried neither challenge nor imputation, for the times being troubled, no man could be certain that he met a friend on the highway until some declaration was forthcoming.

"Only so far as to beg of you some solution of the enigma of these roads. I am desirous of traveling southward and seek a main highway, which I am grievously puzzled to find."

The other laughed cheerily.

"You could not have chanced on a better guide, for I was brought up some miles from this spot, although at the moment I am myself on a southern journey. We turn here to the right, but we have far to go before we reach the highway."

"The more lucky am I, then, that you have overtaken me. 'Twould need a wizard to unravel this tangled skein of green passages."

"Indeed," cried the youth, with a lightsome laugh, "I've often lost myself in their entanglements, and, what is more lasting, I lost my heart as well."

"There is one thing you have not lost, and that is time. You are just young enough for such nonsense as the latter losing. I am older than you and have lost my way before now, as you may well bear witness, but I have kept my head clear and my heart whole."

"'Tis nothing to boast," said the boy, with an air of experience. "It simply means that you have not yet met the right woman. When you meet her, you will be in as great a daze as that in which I found you at the crossroads. I hope to get a glimpse of my fair one before I ride farther toward Oxford."

"Toward Oxford!" cried Armstrong, instinctively reining up his horse in his surprise. "Are you, then, making for Oxford?"

"Yes. I have been expecting a friend to come with me, but he is delayed, I suspect, at Carlisle, so I must get on as best I can without him."

"I travel to Manchester," said Armstrong, more noncommittal than the other appeared to be.

"Then I shall be happy to bear you company if it so pleases you until we come to the parting of our ways—that is, if you are not in haste and can wait until I have a word with my lass, in whose direction we are now tending. She is the most winsome little lady in all the countryside, the only daughter of Lord Rudby, who is"—

"Why should I not? Although she is the sweetest angel that ever visited this glad earth, she makes no descent when she joins her hand to mine. I am Thomas Wentworth, eldest son to the late Earl of Strafford."

They had been traveling knee to knee in the narrow way, but Armstrong pulled up and looked at his companion in amazement.

"Do you mean the minister to the king of England?"

"Yes. There was no other."

"Then you are perhaps about to visit Charles at Oxford?"

"Ah, I have already told you more than was wise on so short an acquaintance," said Wentworth, trying another tack. "You yourself gave me a lesson in reticence a moment since, and you have not been so garrulous concerning yourself as I. I do not even know your name."

"Sir, I am William Armstrong, and Scotland is my country. As two swords are better than one, I shall be most glad to travel in your company. I may say, however, that I hold a pass from Cromwell himself, so if you are a king's man you may not wish to be my companion."

"I am myself abroad through Cromwell's permission," answered Wentworth jauntily, "and I'll venture my pass is broader as well as longer than yours. 'Tis sometimes well to have a friend in the enemy's camp, and my friend pretends he can get anything from Old Noll. Read it, if you think I'm boasting."

Wentworth handed the document to the Scot, who read and returned it.

"Mine is but a limited permit compared with this. Where do you expect to encounter your comrade?"

"I fear there is little chance of seeing him until I reach Oxford, if indeed I find him there. I suspect he is detained at Carlisle. However, I travel on my own business and he on his, so it makes little difference to me save the lack of companionship."

"You go to Oxford alone then?"

MODIFICATION OR PROTEST.

Russia's Alternative to Britain on Thibetan Treaty.

St. Petersburg, Sept. 26.—Foreign Minister Count Lamsdorff has, it is announced, wired instructions to Count Benckendorff, the Russian Ambassador to Great Britain, to confer with Foreign Secretary Lord Lansdowne, with a view to securing a modification of the Anglo-Thibetan treaty, which has not been ratified by China.

Count Benckendorff is authorized by these instructions to lodge a strong protest if Great Britain refuses to consider Russia's objections to the treaty, which, it is understood, referred exclusively to Article IX. of the draft of the convention.

of milk, one teaspoonful salt, one-half white pepper, one cupful stale breadcrumbs. Mix all together except the whites of the eggs. Beat these stiff and add last. Pour into a buttered mold, set in a pan of cold water and bake in moderate oven for thirty minutes or until the center is firm. Then unmold quickly on to a hot plate and serve with butter and pulverized sugar.

Sweet Apple Pickles.

Select smooth apples below medium size and have them uniform. Peel carefully and leave the stems on. Allow two quarts of vinegar, four pounds of light brown sugar, one ounce each of ground cinnamon and cloves. Tie the spice in little cheesecloth bags and some sticks of whole cinnamon. When scalding hot put in enough apples to cook well. When they can be easily pierced with a broom straw skim out in a stone jar and cook the other apples. Pour the hot vinegar over the pickles, turn an inverted plate or saucer over the jar and tie up securely with white muslin.

Here the School Boards were united and the change under the new Act (4 Edward VII., Chapter 63) affected the method of election and the number to be elected. Early in the year the council received a request from the Board asking that special legislation be secured reducing the number of members, as it had become unwieldy and hence some difficulty had been experienced in securing a quorum. The same request came from a number of municipalities, and after a long discussion in the Legislature a general act was passed making a rather sweeping change, providing for a Board of 6, 8 or 10 members according to the wish of the phase and to be elected in the same direct manner as the Aldermen or as the School Board in Toronto. As applicable to Peterborough it provided for a Board of eight members, one from the Separate Schools, and the others elected directly. Ald. McWilliams stated that he had given notice of a resolution in accordance with the Act. It was provided that the Council by resolution might adopt the system but not later than the last of September. It had the advantage of creating a decided reduction in members of a Board and making it more business like and hence in a better shape to facilitate operation. Ald. McWilliams said he was rather in favor of the new system of election. He pointed out that the Board had an absolute power over the taxes as had the town. The present system had a disadvantage of shifting upon the Council any action in this connection and did not give the people of the town an opportunity to consider its wisdom or unwisdom. He was not criticising any action of the present Board; in fact he favored its reconstruction under the new Act by retaining present members. He considered that the present was an opportune time to adopt the new system, for there were many important matters which should be performed in the most efficient manner—by the very pick of the present Board—a smaller body being better able to transact business with expediency, and further he held that it should be an responsible to the people as is the council. Ald. McWilliams moved, That in the opinion of this Council, it is expedient that the School Boards be amalgamated and a Board of Education as provided for by 4 Edward VII. c. 63, be elected in lieu of the present Board.

Ald. Bush said it would be hardly treating the Board with courtesy in dealing them with this matter, as they had written asking that no action be taken.

Ald. McWilliams replied stating that at last meeting it was proposed that the opinion of the Board as such on the change should be obtained. This should hardly have been expected as it might have meant the voting by the members for the cutting off of about one half their number. He held that the change would affect present plans very little.

Ald. Bust suggested that a meeting be held between the council and Board of Education. He thought that the members of the Board should be elected direct and be responsible to the people. The opinion of the experienced members of the School Board should be obtained in the matter prior to any action. Ald. Bust moved in this direction, "We cannot dispose of a body of gentlemen which has done so much good in town without consulting with them," he said.

On motion Mr. V. Eastwood was heard. He said he had expected some of the other members of the Board would be present to discuss the matter. So far as the present election of the trustees was concerned, he thought it should be by the people direct, but he did not think the Act did justice to a town of Peterborough's size. As a town we were only entitled to seven members, while other places of the same size incorporated as cities were entitled to ten. The number as given under the new Act was hardly enough for this place. He did not think it would be wise for the Council to deal with the matter in a peremptory manner. If a joint meeting could be arranged it would be a better plan, although Ald. McWilliams had given ample notice.

It was Ald. Adams' opinion that the Board had placed themselves and the Council in a wrong position, for they had advocated entirely different views at the beginning of the year—that a reduction be made. He was not decided as to what action would be wise to take at the present time, and agreed with the proposal to hold a joint meeting. They had had lots of notice and should attend to such matters; if not the Council would be warranted in taking action.

Ald. Bust moved, seconded by Ald. Bush, that the Clerk notify the School Board to meet the Committee of the Whole Council on the evening of Wednesday, and that the Council adjourn until 8 o'clock that evening to go into session to deal with the question.—Carried.

Ald. Bush moved, seconded by Ald. McWilliams, That the matter of providing winter clothing for the police be referred to the Supervision Committee.

Ald. Bush moved that the solicitor be instructed to draw a by-law appointing Mr. C. S. McClelland caretaker of the town clock at a salary of $80 a year, and that the clock be thoroughly cleaned every four years.

Ald. Bust pointed out that such a resolution, though alright so far as it went, would only hold good until the end of the year, which officials being of course appointed annually.

Ald. Botten amended the motion, and the solicitor will be instructed to enquire into the legal aspect of the position and to act accordingly.

TO PROVIDE MONEY.

Ald. Adams moved that the town solicitor be instructed to take the necessary steps to give effect to the request of the Board of Education to have the debentures prepared for $50,000 for the purpose of purchasing a site and erecting and furnishing a Collegiate Institute. And that a by-law be prepared authorizing the issue of $10,000 in debentures for the purchase of a site for an armoury.

Ald. Bust moved in amendment that the School Board should spend $10,000 and nothing more for a site.

Ald. McWilliams pointed out that it was no concern of the Council's what the Board of Education paid for a site. The entire expense was, however, not to be over $50,000.

Ald. Adams explained that the understanding was that the town should spend $10,000, the School Board $10,000, and the Government $10,000, and he did not see the wisdom of a clause inserted in the motion.

Those in favor of the original motion were Aldermen Hicks, Adams, Scott, Bottem and McWilliams, while those supporting Ald. Bust were Aldermen Edgecombe and Mason. The resolution as originally presented carried.

THE MELDRUM SIDING.

A discussion took place with reference to the application of Mr. Meldrum for a siding, and the opinion was that action should be taken as soon as possible. Ald. Adams moved in regard to this question that the Cereal Company and C.P.R. and Mr. Meldrum be notified that a committee meeting of the council would be held on Friday evening, when this matter would be considered. Ald. McWilliams seconded the motion and suggested that any merchants interested in the construction of such a siding also be present. The resolution carried.

Ald. Johnston recalled that the time the trees were pruned the branches were thrown into the gully on Water st. This wasn't so bad, but lately people had begun to throw garbage there, and he moved, seconded by Ald. McWilliams, that the proper authorities be instructed to act in the matter.—Carried.

The council adjourned.

GEO. R. HAMILTON DEAD

Killed By His Own Hand in His Office in London, Ont.

Western Ontario Manager of the Imperial Life Insurance Company Found Dead From Revolver Shot—The Circumstances Surrounding the Sad—Devoted to His Wife and Family of Six Children—No Inquest Necessary.

London, Sept. 27.—George R. Hamilton, Western Ontario manager for the Imperial Life Insurance Company, shot himself in his office in the Bank of Toronto Chambers, about 6 o'clock last night. There was no witnesses of the deed, the office staff having left some time previously. The shooting was not discovered for half an hour later.

Caretaker Borland found the suicide. He was surprised to see seated in the inner office, the door of which was ajar, the manager of the company, Mr. Hamilton. He called him, but received no answer. Thinking that Hamilton had fallen asleep, for his head rested on the table in front of which he was seated, the caretaker went over to him and shook him.

Police Called In.

Discovering the pistol he quickly summoned the police, who found Hamilton sitting at his table, his head dropped over on the table, and resting upon the leather case of a large revolver. His left hand grasped the side of the table, as though he had clutched it in falling forward. The right hand rested on the table. His face was down. He was seated in his chair, the revolver lying by his right hand, and it appeared that he had shot himself with this hand.

Within fifteen minutes Mrs. Hamilton and two children had reached the office and learned the terrible news. Mrs. Hamilton was overcome. Coroner McLaren, after an investigation, determined that the case was one of suicide and that no inquest was necessary. The circumstances were such as to point most plainly to self-destruction. Asked if it might not have been an accident, the doctor said that this was not impossible though he believed that it was not an accident.

Of Highly Nervous Temperament.

Deceased was of a highly nervous temperament, but that he had trouble of any description whatever is not known. During the day those who met with him noticed nothing wrong. He was perfectly natural in all that he had to say or that he did. He complained during the morning of having suffered lately with lumbago, but otherwise he had no complaint. He enjoyed good health, and apparently possessed all that should cause a man to appreciate life. He was deeply devoted to his wife and family of six children, and spent all of his leisure hours in their company at the family's handsome home on Marley place, in London South.

Deceased had lived here some four or five years, coming from Toronto. He previously had lived in Winnipeg. William Hamilton, of Toronto, general manager of the Imperial Life, is a brother of the deceased. He was notified by telegraph shortly after the shooting, of what had happened. Others notified were Mrs. W. D. Burchard of Woodstock, Mrs. Dr. Hueston of Strathroy, Fred Cox, president of the Imperial Life, Toronto.

Miss Wright, stenographer for deceased, probably last saw him alive. She says that she noticed nothing unusual about the deceased's actions as she left the office for the night. No note from deceased was found, if he left one, which is doubted.

Mr. Hamilton was probably 45 years of age, though he looked younger.

BOAT UPSET, 3 DROWNED.

Tragic Ending of Sailing Excursion At Victoria, B.C.

Victoria, B.C., Sept. 27.—The captain of the British ship Blythswood took a party of seven friends with him Sunday afternoon for a sailing cruise in one of the ship's boats. She upset off Albert Head in a squall, and three of the party were drowned. Captain Pritchard had invited Sergeant-Major Churchard and Sergeant Endicott of the Royal Engineers of the Victoria Garrison, with their wives, to spend the day aboard the Blythswood, and he, with his son, the two officers, the second mate of the Blythswood and three seamen, went off in the ship's long-boat for a sail to Race Rocks. All hands succeeded in clutching the overturned boat, and after consultation, the second mate started to swim to the ship, several miles distant. He had not reached her three hours later. Sergeant-Major Churchard tried to swim ashore, but perished before he had gone a hundred yards. Sergeant Endicott, after two hours in the icy water, sank. When rescued, the five survivors were in such a state of exhaustion, that ten minutes longer would have meant death.

PERISHED WITH COLD.

A Duck Hunter Drowned in Whitefish Lake.

Port Arthur, Sept. 27.—A man named Demarche was found yesterday morning. He was about done out when they met him on the shore of Whitefish Lake, and was mentally affected. He was fed and then sent back with a party to hunt for Vinette, whom he left three or four miles back in the woods, where he gave out, and could go no further. Demarche covered him up with twigs and leaves to protect him from the cold. According to the last account, they had not returned to Whitefish. It is believed Vinette has perished.

Thomas Fisher of the Ontario Bank was drowned at Whitefish Lake yesterday. He was duck shooting when the canoe upset.

Hurt By Machinery.

Walkerville, Sept. 27.—Frank Bens of Windsor and John Connor of this town were terribly injured by falling machinery at the basket factory of Gardner Bros. yesterday morning. Both are in Hotel Dieu, Windsor, and, while Bens's recovery is probable, grave fears are entertained for Connor, whose skull is badly crushed. The victims are middle-aged men and married.

Pistol Revolver Accident.

Owen Sound, Sept. 27.—At three o'clock yesterday afternoon a little two-year-old son of John J. McMasken, while playing with a revolver, was shot and instantly killed. The parents reside on Beach street, where the child was in charge of a little girl named Libbey McNally. While she was in the yard the child got the revolver out of a drawer, and when found was dead, with a thirty-two calibre bullet through its heart.

Ran Into Open Switch.

Lewiston, Me., Sept. 27.—Three are dead, nine others seriously injured, and some 20 other persons cut and bruised as the result of the wrecking of a passenger train on the Maine Central Railroad, which ran into an open switch and crashed into a freight train opposite the State Fair Grounds, near this city, late yesterday.

Another Fatal Wreck.

Peoria, Ill., Sept. 27.—A washout on the Burlington Railroad, near Elmwood, caused a wreck yesterday in which one man was killed and three persons were probably fatally injured. The roadbed was washed out for a short distance, leaving the rails suspended in the air. The train struck the unsupported rails with a high speed.

Former M.C.R. Brakeman Dies.

St. Thomas, Sept. 27.—Simon J. Schreck, jeweler, Sunday received a telegram from F. R. Brown, secretary of the B. of R. T., at Ellensburg, Washington, stating that Mr. Schreck's son-in-law, W. Dales Steele, until about three years ago a brakeman on the M.C.R. here, had been killed in a wreck near there Sunday morning. His remains will be brought to St. Thomas.

REDUCE FRUIT FREIGHT RATES.

Railways Make Concessions As Result of Recent Protests.

Toronto, Sept. 27.—As a result of the complaints of the Fruit Growers' Association at the recent session of the Railway Commission, the freight rates will be materially reduced. The railways have communicated these reductions to W. H. Bunting, president of the Fruit Growers' Association, who in turn has sent the statement to N. B. Cowan, editor of The Canadian Horticulturist.

The reductions made are material in car lots shipped from larger sections, principally Toronto, Ottawa, Montreal, Quebec and Winnipeg. Special rates are also made for half car lots of 10,000 pounds or over. The concessions made are equal to about $10 per car from Toronto, Ottawa and Montreal, and about $33 per car to the Northwest. In addition to these concessions the rate for ice on cars destined for Manitoba have been lessened. Hereafter the shipper will be charged only for the actual amount of ice used. Apples, whether in boxes or barrels, will be carried at the same rate, and it is understood that pears in boxes or barrels will be in the same class as apples in the future.

While these concessions are not all that the committee representing the fruit industry asked for and considered reasonable, they are a measure of relief to a very serious situation.

OFFICER COMMITTED SUICIDE.

Mistook Lead For a Dark Cloud and Liner Grounded.

Montreal, Sept. 27.—At the inquiry yesterday into the stranding of the Allan Liner Hibernian, off the coast of Newfoundland last May, it developed that Second Officer Gallagher, who was blamed for the accident, committed suicide by drowning.

Gallagher was on the bridge when the steamer ran ashore, and, according to the evidence of Capt. Wallace yesterday, he accepted the blame, saying that he mistook the land for a dark cloud. Gallagher had been brooding over the death of his wife and Capt. Wallace said he believed this had something to do with the error of judgment which caused the vessel to go ashore.

After the accident Gallagher disappeared and later his body was found floating in the sea. The court could not render a finding in the case and referred the evidence to the Imperial Board of Trade for judgment. In the grounding of the collier Turret Cape, on Goose Island, Sept. 17, the court held Pilot Delisle responsible and fined him $100.

DOUKHOBORS ON PILGRIMAGE.

Police Arrest Three and Try to Quiet Many Others.

Saskatoon, N. W. T., Sept. 27.—A large party of Doukhobors, men, women and children, arrived here yesterday after three days on trail. The police arrested three of the ringleaders, and will try to persuade the remainder to go back. The party is, as usual, looking for Messiah, and want universal peace proclaimed as a prelude to the millennium. They are, however, warmly clothed, and wear shoes. The present warm weather encourages them on their pilgrimage, and they regard this as a direct intervention of Divine power in their behalf. English-speaking settlers are indignant at the Doukhobors' antics, and are said to be preparing a memorial to the Dominion Government for cancellation of the latter's land grant, as constituting a serious detriment to the settlement of the district.

Summons For Mr. Hendrie.

Toronto, Sept. 27.—A summons was issued yesterday for William Hendrie, president of the Ontario Jockey Club. The summons is returnable Thursday morning at ten o'clock. President Hendrie is charged with keeping a common gaming house, alias the betting-ring, at the Woodbine.

DIZZY SPELLS AND DYSPEPSIA

Soon Disappeared When the Nervous System Was Set Right by Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

Mrs. M. A. Sharp, 346 Dublin-st., Peterborough, Ont., states: "For some years I was troubled with indigestion, which developed into nervous dyspepsia, and besides suffering from nervousness, strange dizzy spells would come over me. Hearing of the good results obtained from Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, I decided to try it. After a pretty thorough test of this medicine I can say that I never used anything that did me so much good. It seemed to be the very treatment that I needed, and as a result of the use I am quite restored to health."

The Newest Card Cases

One of the latest decrees of fashion is that the card case shall match in color the costume of "milady." These can be easily and quickly made from velvet leather, and when lined with silk of the same or a contrasting shade, they look very pretty. The Review Stationery Department has a full line of velvet leather in the popular shades of brown, green, grey and red. The leather for the cases costs but a trifle, and it may have a design fastened upon it, or a pretty silver initial fastened on to make it more elaborate.—The Review Stationery Department. 24

DARING ATTEMPT TO ROB FACTORY

BURGLARS ENTER THE GEO. MATTHEWS' ESTABLISHMENT, OTTAWA

Night Watchman Bound to Steam Coils with Picture Wire — Five Men in the Gang Evidently Amateurs — No Booty Secured.

Ottawa, Sept. 25—There were exciting doings at the pork packing establishment of Geo. Matthews and Sons at Hull this morning. About 1.30, when Watchman Treau entered the boiler house he suddenly found himself confronted by three masked men, each of whom covered him with a revolver. Treau was armed, but he had not time to draw. He was seized and securely bound and one of the men placed as guard over him. The other two left the boiler house, and with two other men who had joined them proceeded to the packing house and held up the second watchman, and bound him also. Three of the men then went to the office and for half an hour worked at the combination of the safe but without success. They were evidently amateurs at the business, as they had no burglars tools with them.

Shortly they quit their task in disgust, and about five o'clock the five decamped. The watchmen were some time getting free from their fastenings, but when they had liberated themselves they immediately notified the head of the firm here, Mr. W. F. Matthews. An examination of the office showed that the burglars had secured nothing.

The Ottawa Citizen says:—

They were evidently amateurs at the safe-cracking game, however, and after working for half an hour at the combination of the safe, they left without making any effort to blow it open. Shortly after one o'clock the attention of Nightwatchmen Treau and Gendron were attracted to the presence of two suspicious characters hovering on the railroad in the vicinity of the building. After keeping the pair under surveillance for some time the watchmen decided to summon the Hull police as they believed the intention of the men was to enter the building.

THREE MASKED MEN.

In order to reach the 'phone it was necessary to enter the shipping department and all unconscious of danger they threw open the door of the room, to be suddenly confronted by three masked men. Both men were menaced by revolvers and ordered to throw up their hands, the trio of desperadoes immediately proceeding to tie them up to prevent any possibility of escape. The burglars used picture wire to accomplish their purpose. The hands of each of the two men were bound to their shins and they were then bound to the steam coils, one of the masked men remaining to guard them. While the two who first figured in the episode remained on guard on the outside, the other two entered the office and for almost half an hour the bound watchmen could hear them working in an effort to solve the safe's combination.

GAVE UP THE TASK.

Nothing came of it, however, and the whole party, whether frightened after having given up the task, suddenly left the building and disappeared, leaving the watchmen still prisoners. The latter after a desperate struggle of half an hour with their bonds finally freed themselves and at once notified the police. Constable Pelletier was on the scene in a few minutes, but the would-be safeblowers had left no clew behind them and it will be a difficult matter for the police to locate the gang.

Even had they succeeded in opening the safe they would have received little reward for their trouble, the company making it a rule to place the funds in Trust Deposit vaults every evening. Circumstances favored the burglars.

CORALLED NO SPOIL.

The Matthews establishment is a large stone building, and the operation of blowing the safe might have gone on unnoticed by anyone on the outside. The fact of their having left the premises without making an attempt to drill the safe under such favorable circumstances, would lead to the belief that the men were amateurs at the business. They carried some tools. Treau and Gendron reclined themselves, files, etc., in the possession of the men at the time of their capture. On the other hand it is quite possible that the men may be part of an organized gang operating in the Ottawa Valley, safe-blowing having been a common occurrence in neighboring towns recently, viz., in Rockland, Buckingham, Wakefield and Aylmer.

UNION LEAGUE MEETING

The Great Forward Mission Movement Discussed with Great Spirit.

The missionary meeting held by the Epworth Leagues of Charlotte st., Mark st., and George st. churches last evening in George st. church was largely attended and a very enjoyable and profitable evening was spent. The meeting was called for the purpose of giving the members of the different leagues some information about the great Forward Mission Movement which has been going on for the last few years. The different speakers told of the missionary work which is being carried on, and the part the young people of the Methodist church are playing in sending out and supporting of ministers. Mr. Kidd of Charlotte st., acted as chairman.

Rev. Mr. Jolliffe was the first to address the meeting. He was pleased to see such a large crowd of young people present. He humorously compared the gathering to a Quaker meeting, where the women sat together on one side and the men on the other. Turning to the question of missions, Mr. Jolliffe said that if a man wished to be a good missionary he must first turn his attention to things around him and do good at home. We often hear of people wishing to become missionaries to China or Japan who never do much to save their fellow-countrymen who are in need of help. There are plenty of heathen at home to be converted before thinking of the heathen abroad. There is more hope for the heathen who have never heard the Gospel than for those who have heard it but do not govern themselves by its teachings.

Rev. Mr. Lewis off Mark street, was the next speaker. He congratulated the leagues upon the success of the meeting and thought that more such meetings should be held. They provided a means by which the young people become better acquainted with each other, and more interested in church work. It was his opinion that some Sunday should be set apart for a special missionary rally. The work of the League is work done by and for young people It is with the young people, said the speaker, that we have our greatest opportunities. They were good workers, a little too fond of pleasure perhaps or rather failing to recognise that the greatest pleasure is in serving the Master. He who touchath a young life does a greater service than one who merely awakens the spirit of an older persons. The church has made a wonderful change for the better during the last twenty-five years in the matter of Young People's Societies. At first the League had to fight for its place, but is now firmly established and doing a great work. The preparation for the League meeting is good spiritual and mental training. The members of the League must remember that they are teaching others, and should seek to qualify themselves for the opportunities which occasionally come to them in the home or in life generally. There are some obstacles which hinder the progress of the League. Among these are unpunctuality, unpreparedness and irregularity of attendance.

At this point Misses Parnell and Hill favored the meeting with a duet.

Rev. Dr. Crothers expressed himself as delighted with the spirit manifested and the large representation from each of the three Leagues. He endorsed Rev. Mr. Lewis' opinion concerning the need of more union meetings. The speaker then explained the Forward Movement. He referred to the excellent work done in East London by Rev. Mark Guy Pearse and others, the labors of Jahnson in Edinburgh and the work done in New York and other American cities. In 1888 two important movements were started. The Epworth League for Canada and the United States was instituted and in the same year the Student Volunteer movement was started. Since then they have been distributing literature about China and Japan, and other mission fields, publishing maps, missionary geographies and histories. It was felt that something was needed. There were plenty of missionaries, but no money was at hand to send them out and support them. So in 1896, Fred Stevenson, Warren and Service handed themselves together to go to the colleges and stir up the students. In the same year Stevenson started a little paper called The Leader. In 1896 he changed it into The Missionary Campaigner, putting all his money into the work. In that year he commenced the active campaign. He sent students during the summer vacation to stir up the young people. Over five hundred meetings were held, the first place to be campaigned being Cobourg. This district along with Peterborough sent out Dr. Smith to West China. In 1897, 570 meetings were held, in 1898 over 600 meetings were held. In 1898 also the Missionary Campaigner and Missionary Outlook were joined together. 42 Missionaries have been sent by the young people of the Methodist church. Some of these are in Quebec, some on the Pacific coast, but the majority are in China and Japan. Another advantage of the work is that much enthusiasm has been stirred up, money raised and a great amount of missionary information has been scattered abroad. Dr. Crothers thought that more than one missionary service should be held every year and that missionary prayer meetings should also be instituted. The speaker said the recent operations in Thibet will open the doors of that country to the missionaries who will immediately flock there since Great Britain has practically established a protectorate there. Coming back to the Forward Movement, the following figures were read, illustrating the progress which has been made: In 1895 the young people contributed $1600; in 1896, $5,128; in 1897, $9,427; in 1898, $14,529; in 1899, $18,313; in 1900, $21,172; in 1901, $24,953; ihn 1902, $30,226; in 1903, $32,245, making a grand total of $157,701 raised by the young people in nine years.

The meeting was dismissed after singing a closing hymn.

SPORTING NEWS

GOLF.

Another bright star in the galaxy of Canadian sporting heroes has appeared in Mr. George S. Lyon, of Toronto. By defeating N. Chandler Eagan, of Chicago, in the Olympic Golf Tournament at St. Louis, Mr. Lyon has gained the title of the world's champion golf player. Once more Canada has shown the world that the "Lady of the Snows" can produce as good athletes as are to be found in the world. First, Lou Scholes opened the ball by capturing the Diamond Sculls, emblematic of the rowing championship of the world. Then Private Perry walked away with the King's prize, and now we have Mr. Lyon winning the golf championship of the world.

RUGBY.

There was a large turnout of players at the Y.M.C.A. last evening, when a chalk talk was given by Captain Crowley. A code of signals was adopted and several plays illustrated on the blackboard. Such talks as these are of great assistance and should be held oftener. A run was also taken by most of the players who were out.

Ben Simpson, who played with Queen's last year, will leave soon for the Hamilton Normal School, but the Peterborough management hope to be able to make arrangements for his playing with the local club.

It is not likely that Chris. Graham will be in the game this year. He is going to retire from the field, but will take an active part in the management of the affairs of the club.

The O.R.F.U. opens the ball on Saturday but nothing has yet been done about starting the City Leagues. The players seem anxious to see it under way, and yet nothing is being done. Let someone call a meeting this week to discuss matters. The E. A. A. and Rough Riders are gathering in the players, and the Y. M. C. A. has plenty of material for a good team.

BASEBALL.

It seems queer that none of Lindsay's League umpires were given a chance to officiate. — Lindsay Post.

To those who know the clan of sports Lindsay produces it doesn't seem a bit queer.

The pipe dreamer of the Lindsay Post rises to give us the following remarks: Cobourg wants to play the winners of the Midland League for $100. Now, Lindsay, win your League game on Thursday and then run down to Cobourg and gobble up that $100. Another score of 6-4 would do nicely.

It wouldn't cause much surprise or sorrow here to see Lindsay defeated by Bowmanville for the third time this year.

Next Saturday's game promises to be a record breaker. The team from the west has a reputation but the locals think they can take a fall out of them.

T.A.S CONCERT

Very Successful Programme under the Auspices of the Literary Society

The concert in the T.A.S. Hall last evening was a big success. There was a very large crowd present, one of the biggest crowds ever assembled there. The concert was under the auspices of the Literary section of the Society, and was the most successful ever held by them. The programme was varied and enjoyable, and the large crowd showed their appreciation by applauding every number. It is to be hoped that more of such concerts will be given throughout the winter months. The attendance at the next one will surely be a record-breaker. Mr. John Hanrahan acted as chairman.

The first number on the programme was an instrumental duet by Miss Doherty and Miss M. McCabe, which was highly enjoyed. Mr. R. N. Jolliffe rendered a solo in excellent voice. Miss Garvey also delighted the audience with a solo. The next item on the programme, a song by Mr. Chas. Coleman, was thoroughly appreciated. Messrs. Cranfield, Peters and Richards gave a musical studio farce, which was one of the evening's biggest successes. Mr. Ramsay's Scotch selection was sung with excellent effect. Mr. W. Coleman displayed his talent in comic singing by rendering a comic song. Rev. Father McCall here gave a short address on the work of the society.

The second part of the programme opened with another delightful solo from Miss Garvey. Mr. Ramsay displayed his versatility by rendering an Irish selection.

Miss Clancy's solo was much enjoyed by the large crowd. Messrs. Charles and William Coleman united their efforts in a comic duet, which caught the fancy of the audience.

Rev. Father O'Brien made a few remarks about the concerts given last season by the literary section, and expressed the wish that success would continue to reward their efforts.

The accompanists of the evening were Miss Doherty, Miss M. McCabe, Miss Doris and Miss McGarrity.

COTTON SPINNING.

The Scheme by Which a Workman Kept His Bobbins Clean.

The father of the famous Sir Robert reel was a cotton spinner in a comparatively small way until he suddenly went straight ahead of all his competitors. The earliest cotton spinning machinery gave serious trouble through filaments of cotton adhering to the bobbins, thus involving frequent stoppages to clear the machinery. The wages of the operatives were affected by these delays, but it was noticed that one man in the works always drew full pay. His loom never stopped.

"The calender tells me your bobbins are always clean," said Mr. Peel to him one day.

"Aye, they be," said the man, whose name was Dick Ferguson.

"How do you manage it, Dick?"

"Why, you see, Master Peel, it's sort o' secret! If I tawd yo', yo'd be as wise as I am."

"That's so," said Peel, smiling, to humour Dick's knowing chuckle. "I'd give you something to know. Could you make all the looms work as smoothly as yours?"

"Every one of 'em, master!"

"Well, what shall I give you for your secret, Dick?"

The man smiled and fobbed his chin.

"Well, Dick, what is it to be?"

"Come, I'll tell thee," was the reply. "Gi' me a quart of ale every day as I'm in the mills and I'll tell the all about it."

"Agreed," said the master.

"Well, then," rejoined Dick, inviting Mr. Peel to come closer and let him whisper in his ear, "chalk your bobbins!"

That was the entire secret. Machinery was soon invented for chalking the bobbins, and Dick Ferguson was given a pension equal to many daily quarts of beer.

Old Time Remedies.

Strange as it may seem to some, the ingredients of the witches' caldron in "Macbeth," at least a part of them, were once standard remedies among Europeans. In the tenth and eleventh centuries a sovereign cure for ague was the swallowing of a small toad that had been choken to death on St. John's eve, and a splendid remedy for rheumatism was to fasten the hands of clothing with pins that had been stuck into the flesh of either a toad or a frog. Physicians frequently recommended the water from a toad's brain for mental affections and that a live toad be rubbed over the diseased parts as a cure for the quinsy.

Letters of Introduction.

Letters of introduction should not be worded in too complimentary or highly flattering terms. As they are left unsealed and delivered in person it is embarrassing for the caller to deliver them. The letter should simply introduce the bearer, state that he is a friend and that any courtesy or entertainment shown him will be greatly appreciated.

What, Indeed?

Tess—I think Belle acted rather shabbily in breaking her engagement to Jack Huggard. Jess—Well, he broke his arm. Tess—But, good gracious—Jess—Yes, good gracious! What use is a fiance with a broken arm?

Among Speakers.

Among the public men in England is a well known speaker whose remarks are inaudible twenty feet away, and of him a wit said, "No one admires Mr. X. more than I do, but I always feel that I am taking a liberty in overhearing what he says."

Cause For Fear.

"I'm so afraid of lightning," said the pretty girl, who was a born flirt.

"And well you may be," rejoined one of her masculine victims. "You have a heart of steel."—Philadelphia Inquirer.

Mrs. Hughson, of Chicago, whose letter follows, is another woman in high position who owes her health to the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I suffered for several years with general weakness and bearing-down pains, caused by womb trouble. My appetite was poor, and I would lie awake for hours, and could not sleep, until I seemed more weary in the morning than when I retired. After reading one of your advertisements I decided to try the merits of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I am so glad I did. No one can describe the good it did me. I took three bottles faithfully, and besides building up my general health, it drove all disease and poison out of my body, and made me feel as spry and active as a young girl. Mrs. Pinkham's medicines are certainly all they are claimed to be."—Mrs. M. E. Hughson, 347 East Ohio St., Chicago, Ill.—genuine proof of original of these letters proving genuineness cannot be produced.

More than a million women have regained health by the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

If there is anything about your symptoms which you do not understand write to Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass., for free advice and a few timely words from her will show you the right thing to do. This advice costs you nothing, but it may mean life or happiness or both.

REVIEW OF THE MARKETS

The following review of to-day's market was received by Messrs. W. F. Daver & Co., 'phone 416:—

Stocks opened generally strong, with fair amount of activity in leading issues. There was not a great deal of commission business in sight, but traders were active and made up the loss. They were willing to operate for further rallies, which seemed to be easy on the lead given by the wide opening. From opening a determined effort was made to force U.S.Q. above 70. There seemed to be plenty of stock on advances. Some importance was attached to recent London buying of Nor. securities. Taken in connection with strength in other stocks and bonds concerned, the inference is that some settlement has been arrived at. Harriman brokers in London said to have bought stock there, and seeing a higher level of prices on this side, he started to put them up. J. W. Gates is said to be behind the movement in M.O.P., and was responsible for advance yesterday. The Gould brokers have been distributing stock quietly for about two months past, but are naturally not offering any opposition to market movement. Advance in C.P.R. was merely a reaction of London price. At present only satisfactory market for stock is in London. Market at 11.30 strong and gives indications of going still higher before expiration of session. Lower Wall-st. is still bullish on sugar.

In washing woollens and flannels, Lever's Dry Soap in powder will be found very satisfactory.

JAPANESE MOVEMENT ENVELOPS RUSSIANS

Oyama's Army Now Covers a Front of Sixty Miles from Hun River

THE RUSSIAN GENERALS ARE UNCERTAIN

Do Not Know Where Blow will Fall and are Fortifying Yakoman—Hague Convention Holds that the Japanese Claim Affords just Grounds for Mediation—United States Might put an End to Further Bloodshed

London, Sept. 28.—War news from the front is of the scantiest description, but many indications point to the imminence of a renewed forward movement on the part of the Japanese forces. Roughly speaking Marshal Oyama's armies now cover a front of sixty miles, stretching in a concave line from the Hun River, northeast of Mukden, to a point on the Liao River in the neighborhood of Sianchan.

Oyama is thus repeating his previous disconcerting tactics of threatening both the Russian flanks while maintaining a strong force on the main line of attack. Uncertain as to where the blow will fall Kuropatkin is fortifying Fakoman, twenty-five miles northeast of Mukden, evidently with the object of arresting Kuroki's flanking movement from that direction, and also to protect the retreat of the force now holding Sinmintin, an important strategic point forty miles west of Mukden, and ten miles west of the Liao River.

The Japanese are repeating the same leisurely, methodical preparations which have characterized all their successive advances in Manchuria. Their screen of outposts keeps continually in touch with the Russian troops who report a variety of movements at several points of the long front. But it is apparent Kuropatkin does not anticipate he will be able to hold Mukden, and is preparing for an orderly retreat on the Tie Pass, which, by all accounts, will be the hardest nut to crack that the Manchurian campaign has yet yielded.

There is no news from Port Arthur and reports of a sortie by the Vladivostock squadron and of a naval engagement off the southeastern extremity of the Russian Island of Sakhalin have not been verified. Russia is now transporting reservists from Caucasia.

GROUNDS FOR MEDIATION.

The Hague Convention Gives the Nations the Chance.

St. Louis, Sept. 28.—Yesterday's session of the American Bar Association was called to order by President James Hagerman of St. Louis. The report of the standing committee on international law takes up the Russo-Japanese war and discusses it at some length. Briefly the report states:

"It is not for your committee to pass judgment upon the merits of this war; but we do submit that the Japanese claim is of a character that affords just grounds for mediation under the second title of The Hague Convention. The third article declares that the signatory powers think it to be useful that one or more powers which have no part in the conflict may offer of their own volition, so far as circumstances may make it appropriate, their friendly offices or their mediation to the states engaged in the conflict.

"The United States might, as it seems to your committee, very properly avail itself of the provisions of The Hague Convention and make an endeavor to put an end to the further shedding of blood in Manchuria."

JUDGE MORRISON.

M.P. For New Westminster, B.C., Appointed to B.C. Supreme Court.

Vancouver, B.C., Sept. 28.—A special wire was received yesterday from Ottawa, announcing that Auley Morrison, M.P., for New Westminster, had been appointed judge of the Supreme Court for British Columbia, in place of Justice Drake, resigned.

Auley Morrison, LL.B., K.C., was born at Baddeck, N.S., in 1863. He was educated at Dalhousie University and was admitted to the Bar at Halifax in 1886. He commenced the practice of law in Westminster in 1900. He was first elected M.P. in 1896, and a second time in 1900. In 1900 he married Elizabeth Livingston, daughter of James Livingston, ex-M.P., Baden, Ontario.

KILLED HIS UNCLE.

Crapshooter Has Been Sent to Central Prison For Two Years.

Cobourg, Sept. 28.—Before Hon. Mr. Justice Idington at the Assizes here yesterday, James Dunn was tried for the manslaughter of his uncle, Fraser Dunn, on July 12 last at Campbellford. The two men, who lived together, had been drinking in the village and returned home under the influence of liquor. A scuffle took place between them from some unknown cause in the course of which James Dunn threw his uncle down on the ground and kicked him several times. The deceased doubled up in severe pain, and in twenty-four hours afterwards died from peritonitis. The jury found the prisoner guilty and His Lordship sentenced him to two years in the Central Prison less one day.

Mr. McConkey's Sudden Death.

Toronto, Sept. 28.—Death came with startling suddenness yesterday morning to George S. McConkey, the well known proprietor of McConkey's restaurant. He was stricken with apoplexy at 6 o'clock, and at ten minutes to eight had passed away. The late Mr. McConkey was born in Toronto about 63 years ago and was one of its best known citizens. He began his career as a soldier in the grand army of the republic, fighting on the side of the north all through the Civil war. When the armies were disbanded he came back to Toronto and opened up a restaurant on Yonge street, the nucleus of the present large business. Deceased was a member of Doric Lodge, A.F. and A. M., and had taken the 30th degree. He was also a member of the Orange order. Surviving him are Mrs. McConkey, Ernest (manager of the business), Fred and Miss Maude.

Man's Narrow Escape.

St. Thomas, Sept. 28.—While oiling the shafting at the G. T. R. round-house yesterday morning Joseph Roberts' clothing caught on the swiftly revolving shaft near the ceiling, and almost certain death stared him in the face. Bracing with all his might on the ladder, he saved himself from being drawn around the shaft. His shirts, vest and jacket were torn to shreds, nothing being left on him, but his trousers and one wrist-band. No bones were broken, but the flesh under the right arm was badly scraped.

DUNLOP HOLDS HIS SEAT

Liberal Petition in North Renfrew Failed in Court.

No Evidence Was Offered, and the Judges Immediately Dismissed the Petition—Court Lasted But Five Minutes—Mr. Dunlop Makes a Statement in Which He Says He Will Resign the Seat At Once.

Pembroke, Sept. 28.—The petition filed by the Liberals against the return of E. A. Dunlop, Conservative M. P. P. for North Renfrew was brought up in the Election Court yesterday afternoon, presided over by Chief Justice Moss and Justice Street.

Mr. Aylesworth, for the petitioner, announced that he had no evidence to offer, and the court immediately dismissed the petition.

Mr. Dunlop therefore holds the seat, and the sitting of the court lasted but five minutes.

Mr. Dunlop Will Resign.

Following is E. A. Dunlop's statement made yesterday: "Acting on the advice of my counsel, Mr. Hellmuth, I intend to resign my seat. He informed me a short time ago that in looking over my case for trial he found there had been some acts that were technically indefensible under the law, and which would in all probability lead to the vacation of the seat; that I might win out, as there was nothing in the personal charges, but the chances were against holding the seat, and that the expenses of a protracted trial with a large number of witnesses would amount to four or five thousand dollars at least. I did not want the seat unless it was mine, and I said I would resign at once and run again, but I understand that was impossible while the election petition was pending, so I suggested seeing the other side and telling them what I proposed to do, as I did not believe they would want to go on if they had nothing against me personally, and there were no disclosures that I feared. Mr. Hellmuth saw Mr. Johnston and Mr. Johnston said he saw nothing that was unreasonable in the suggestion, and that he would be glad to save expenses to the petitioners if I really meant to resign, as what the petitioners wanted all along was to have the seat vacated. That is the whole story. There has been no saw-off, no bargain. I have conducted the matter on my own account, without any party aid or suggestion, and am satisfied with the outcome."

Mr. Dunlop was asked last night when his resignation would take effect, now or later, and replied, "At once."

THE MUSKOKA DECISION.

Not Illegal Or Corrupt to Employ a Substitute For a Voter.

Toronto, Sept. 28.—Chancellor Boyd handed down the following judgment yesterday in the Muskoka election petition, referring to the question of costs and the payment of money in the Peacock case. Mr. Justice Teetzel concurred in the decision:

"The voter in this case was desirous to vote for the Conservative candidate, but because of his place of work being distant from the polls he could not vote unless he absented himself his employment. His master was willing that he should go to vote if his place was filled by a competent substitute. An active member of the party undertook to supply the substitute and paid the brother of the voter $5 to take his vacant place. This payment was not too much considering that the substitute had to travel some distance to reach the place of employment.

Not Paid to Induce.

"No money was paid to the voter, and the brother, who got the $5, was not a voter. The money was not paid to induce the voter to cast a vote—which is the word used in the statute, section 159. It was rather to enable him to vote. It was not meant to affect the mind or will of the voter but to operate on his bodily presence.

"The transaction is of the character of such acts as are provided for in section 165, e.g., paying expenses of travel to expedite the voter in reaching the poll, but this particular form of expediting appearance thereat is not covered by the language of the statute. It is not in its nature a corrupt practice, and it would require some express and positive enactment to turn it into an illegal act.

"The voter, no doubt, thus gets pay for a day's work he did not do—as his wages ran on—but that is a matter outside of the scope of the primitive provisions of the election law. This payment complained of was not made to induce the man to vote as he did, but it was the means whereby a substitute was procured in his stead at the expense of a political friend by which expedient he was able to vote.

"In respect of the illegal and corrupt matters proved by the petitioner, I should favor a set-off of costs (as against the general costs of petition given to the respondent) to the extent of $50."

Mr. Borden's Tour.

Oshawa, Sept. 28.—Mr. R. L. Borden was greeted by a large audience at the Music Hall here last evening, every possible inch of space being crowded. He was accompanied by Col. Sam Hughes, M.P. for North Victoria, and W. H. Bennett, M. P. for East Simcoe, and on the platform were seated many of the leading men of the county. Mr. Borden delivered a statesmanlike address.

President Goes Shoots Himself.

Berlin, Sept. 28.—A despatch from Strassburg announces that D. H. Goss, president of the American Institute there, has shot himself and killed himself.

Killed By Stamper.

Minden, Sept. 28.—While operating a stamping machine on the farm of J. J. Scott, near here, J. H. Scott was instantly killed by the upsetting of the machine. The deceased was 75 years old.

WAITING FOR FLAG TO DROP.

Premier Laurier Sees the Governor-General—No Announcement Yet.

Ottawa, Sept. 28.—(Globe Special.)—The Prime Minister went down to Rideau Hall yesterday morning and had an interview with the Governor-General. Gossip connected the interview with the approaching dissolution of Parliament. According to the official statement, however, dissolution was not discussed. On the contrary, the interview had reference to a number of subjects which were hung up during the Governor-General's absence. Sir Wilfrid went to Montreal at 3.30 in the afternoon to attend a political demonstration at Sorel to-day and will be back on Thursday. After his return dissolution is looked for. The voters' lists are nearly all completed, the returning officers have been selected, and all that is now awaited is the dropping of the flag.

An East Simcoe Nomination.

Orillia, Sept. 28.—R. D. Gunn, K. C., of Orillia, was yesterday the unanimous choice of the Liberal convention to contest East Simcoe in the Liberal interests in the approaching Federal elections. Nearly 150 delegates were present from all parts of the riding, a special train bringing representatives from Midland, Penetang, Victoria Harbor and Waubaushene. In all seventeen names were proposed. The coming contest in East Simcoe promises to be keen. Both sides are optimistic as to the result.

North Perth Conservatives.

Milverton, Sept. 28.—At one of the largest Conservative conventions ever held in North Perth, James Torrance, postmaster of Milverton, and ex-warden of the county, was yesterday unanimously nominated as the standard bearer in the coming provincial bye-election. His opponent will be John Brown, ex-M.P.P., Stratford. A. F. MacLaren, M.P., was also unanimously nominated to again contest the riding in the coming Federal election.

Charged With Conspiracy.

St. Catharines, Sept. 28.—Edward Day, president of Local No. 407, Brotherhood of Painters, Paper Hangers and Decorators of America, and two members of the union, William Beatty and William Hodgins, made face a jury on a charge of conspiracy to prevent Albert A. Clay, a painter, 30 years old, [illegible] working at his business. The three accused men were yesterday afternoon sent up for trial by Magistrate Comfort after he had heard a great deal of evidence.

Lived Under Five Sovereigns.

Toronto, Sept. 28.—Mrs. Drew, who died at the residence of her daughter, Mrs. Albert Ferriman, 171 Euclid avenue, on Monday, aged 96, had lived in Toronto since 1830, and lived in the reign of George III., George IV., William IV., Victoria and Edward VII.

Seven to One

That is about the ratio. About seven times as many persons are injured as die from all causes yearly.

Accidents are a more prolific cause of death than any disease except lung diseases.

Twice as many people are accidently killed as die of old age. Does it not seem reasonable to you as a business man that it would be to your interest to carry an accident policy?

YOU are subject to over two hundred diseases and liable to accidents without number.

Official figures prove that One Man in Five carrying an Accident and Sickness Policy makes a claim for indemnity each year.

WEDNESDAY, SEPT. 28, 1904.

THE MILITIA ACT

The Ministerialists are pretending that the Conservatives are inconsistent because they at first condemned the new Militia Bill and are now praising it. In the first place the Bill was a confused medley when it was introduced, and it was considerably improved in its passage through the House by the intervention of Opposition critics. As it was finally enacted it was necessarily full of detail, some parts of it being objectionable, and other parts being of good promise, if properly administered. The explanation is very simple, that the proposed changes had two sources. A close examination would show that the objectionable portions are those originating in Sir Frederick Borden's ideas of what a political rather than a military force should be like, and of the expenditure of public funds on colonels rather than on rifles. On the other hand the meritorious portions are those which the Minister differed from Lord Dundonald, not adopting them by the constitutional course of accepting what he considered good advice from his military expert, but hiding these recommendations away in a pigeon hole, and then claiming credit for them himself.

It is useless for the Ministerial organs to deny this, relying upon the dishonest suppression of Lord Dundonald's recommendations. The facts are as we have stated them, and the point can be easily settled by Mr Frederick declaring from his concealment of this important public document and publishing it for the information of the country.

The Ross agents reported for corruption at the Sault are being prosecuted by private individuals. How could the Attorney General prosecute the men whose crimes he knowingly permitted?

English Conservatives are kicking at a man of doubtful financial morals being nominated as a party candidate. He is the sort of man that Sir Wilfrid Laurier or Mr. Ross would make a Senator or a Cabinet Minister, but they are more particular in the Mother Country.

A Ministerial organ says that Mr. Ross may either bring on the bye-election or "order a general elect on." He can give no such order; the Lieut-Governor is not his lackey. What he may do is to ask his Honor to grant him a dissolution, which the Lieut.-Governor if he follows the constitutional practice, will refuse, asking for his resignation as a Minister who has not secured the support of the electors.

A HIGH LEVEL

What Should be Required of Public Men — No Lowered Tone.

The Archbishop of Canterbury has written as follows to England in reference to the nomination of a party candidate of dubious integrity:

"I am firmly persuaded that if our public life is to be maintained at its high level, and our public men are to justify the confidence we have been accustomed to place in them, voters must see to it that no political or partisan enthusiasm leads them to record votes for men whom they do not trust or respect. Unless we adhere unswervingly to this principle, there will be a lowering of the tone and integrity of our public life, and no temporary victory at the polls for one political party or the other could compensate for such national disaster."

In Our Grandfather's Youth

Paralysis was almost unheard of in the youth of our grandparents, and now nearly every newspaper contains a record of numerous being stricken with this dreadful form of helplessness. Paralysis is in reality a starving of the nerves, and can always be prevented by the timely use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, a preparation which has no rival as a creator of nerve force.

LOCAL OPTION FOR SMITH

A Movement on Foot with that End in View.

There is a movement on foot in Smith township to introduce a local option by-law preventing the issuing of licenses to hotels within the township after the present license year expires. The movement has already gained quite popular and several enthusiastic meetings held for thorough organization of the supporters thereof in the municipality. Mr. Hall Sanderson and Mr. D. Eastwood were elected as chairmen of committees in North and South Smith respectively, while Rev. Edward Sanderson was elected secretary for the whole township during the campaign. A joint meeting of all the committees will be held in Zion church Oct. 26th, at 7.30 p.m. Arrangements will then be made for meetings and work in different localities.

NEWS FROM BENSFORT

What the People are Doing in that Vicinity.

Mrs. Collins, sr., and Mrs. Buckham left on Friday 23rd for parts of Michigan, where they will visit relatives.

We are pleased to know that Mr. J. Pue, who had the rather severe experience of a fracture near the ankle of the right foot, on Saturday morning, 17th inst., by the accidental fall of a heavy box, is recovering nicely.

Mr. Albert McBain, who resides near Listowel, met a few former acquaintances here on Saturday evening of last week. His father, Mr. J. W. McBain was postmaster here, and also a school teacher in the '60's. Albert is a brother of Rev. J. H. McBain, who has care of a pastoral charge in Western Ontario.

Messrs. Walter and J. Bradshaw, of lots 10 and 14, con. 4, respectively, have leased their land for a term, the former to Mr. Ryerson Murney, and the latter to Mr. J. Smith. These are desirable properties, and are leased with a view to improvement and also reasonable returns for both owner and leaseholder.

In the church management here, it was decided that the ladies would provide liberally in their good way for the usual tea and its accompaniments. Liberal provision will be made for entertainment, literary and musical. When the date and other announcements are made, bear them in mind. A good turnout will correspond with bygone success in this line.

The community were much surprised by the announcement, by Rev. J. W. McIntosh, on Sunday, 18th., of his resignation of the pastorate of the church at Centreville. After careful deliberation with himself, he had decided to employ his resources in a post-graduate course at Edinborough. He intends sailing about the middle of October.

During the electrical storm on Saturday morning, Master Jimmy Smith was enjoying for a minute or two, temporary support by leaning against a telegraph pole beside the factory, when he was suddenly apprised of the experience of a shock. Jimmy said he felt rather uncomfortable for a few minutes, and imagined he could feel electricity for upwards of twenty-four hours, and see it too.

The sad circumstances in connection with the sudden death last week of the late Mr. Geo. Cowling form genuine reasons for regret. Deceased was a resident here for a number of years prior to going to Peterborough, was highly respected, and well and favorably known. Mrs. Cowling's former home was only a few yards from the postoffice here.

THE ILLS OF THE AGED

Mrs. Stacey, of Hamilton, tells how it may be Lessened.

Mrs. Elizabeth Stacey, of 172 Hunter Street West, Hamilton, says:

"I was very much troubled with Headache, Dizziness and Constipation, I am in my eighty-first year, and I grew worse and worse, till I was so weak and faint that I could hardly keep from falling.

Since using Dr. Leonhardt's Anti-Pill I am very much better; in fact, I may say I am very well compared to what I was before using Anti-Pill.

"I am so thankful for the improvement at my advanced age that I think I should write and tell you about it. I will always recommend Dr. Leonhardt's Anti-Pill to any one suffering as I was."

Anti-Pill is positively the best medicine for aged men and women.

All druggists sell Anti-Pill. 50c. for a month's treatment.

CAPTURED IN TORONTO

William Christie of Asphodel Arrested for Creating Row on Train.

William Christie, of Asphodel, will be tried before County Magistrate Edmison to-morrow afternoon on the charge of being drunk and disorderly and creating a disturbance in a passenger coach of a C.P.R. train on May 20th last.

A summons was issued by the railway authorities shortly afterwards but the county constables were not able to locate Christie in Asphodel township.

Recently it was learned that he was working in Toronto and word was sent to that city to have him taken in custody. High Constable Cochrane went up and brought the accused to town.

An amusing incident occurred at the Walker House, Toronto, where Mr. Cochrane stayed. When he was sent one of the bell boys got hold of a pair of the constable's handcuffs which had been left in the office and, thoughtlessly slipping them on, was not able to get them off until Mr. Cochrane returned some two hours later. The youth was badly frightened and greatly relieved when the officer unbuckled the bracelets.

Surprise the Doctors

Most doctors are astonished at the results obtained by Dr. Chase's Ointment in a case for eczema, salt rheum or itching skin diseases which are often established well nigh incurable. By word of mouth from friend to friend the exceptional merits of Dr. Chase's Ointment have gradually become a matter of fact and form a record of cures unparalleled in the history of medicine.

FORCE OF LIGHTNING

SOME OF THE FEATS PERFORMED BY THE MYSTIC FLUID.

The Way Great Masts of Ships Have Been Shattered—When a Bolt Strikes a Tree It Generates Steam From the Sap and Explodes the Bark.

The explosive force of lightning acting on dead wood is not, as a rule, so great as when living trees are struck, though Sir William Harris shows that "the masts of ships of the line, three feet in diameter and 110 feet long, bound with hoops of iron half an inch thick and five inches wide, the whole weighing about eighteen tons, have been in many instances torn asunder and the hoops of iron scattered about the decks." It will be found, as a rule, that trees are struck by lightning far more often than are buildings, even if the trees and buildings are close together. This is partly because the trees are higher.

But there must probably be some unknown reason not only for the frequency with which trees are struck, but for the recurrence of such shocks in the case of particular trees or trees in the same locality. The commonest form of injury is that the current passes down the bark of the tree, stripping off the band, wider or narrower, from top to bottom. Sometimes on an oak two or three of these lightning marks are seen, evidently caused at different times.

There must be something in the form or situation or earth below the trees which endangers it. An instance is quoted in Mr. Anderson's descriptive book of the Church of St. Mary in Genoa, which was frequently struck by lightning, sometimes as often as twice a year. It was noticed that the electric force always followed the same track. It was discovered later that the walls were clamped with iron, and that the lightning had followed the patch in which the metal offered the greatest continuity, destroying the zone between.

If the ground below the tree or building is hard and dry, the contact with the earth, in which the lightning expands its force and disperses, is difficult, and the destruction of the object struck is likely to result. This may explain the frequency with which a "blasted" tree is seen extending its dead arms on the summit of some rocky cliff or peak. The ground below it is dry and does not easily lead away the current into the earth.

At the same time thunderclouds undoubtedly tend to discharge, or perhaps it would be safer to say that the transmission from the cloud to the earth more frequently takes place, near pieces of water and along the courses of rivers than elsewhere.

In a park in one of the eastern counties of England there is a large lake. The park contains more trees struck by lightning than the whole of the rest of the estate. Some miles away is a road called locally the "Lightning road" from the frequency with which accidents have occurred there either to trees, horses, cattle or passengers. In this park there recently occurred an instance of the explosive effect in certain circumstances not perfectly known.

A very tall spruce, probably 160 feet high, was "exploded" from top to bottom into pieces the size of the wood used in making chairs. Every shred of bark was stripped from them, and the wood looked as if it had been shredded up for firing. A similar instance occurred some years ago when an oak in the grove below the foot of the White lodge in Richmond park exploded under lightning shock. The bark flew off and simply disappeared in small patches, and the rest of the tree was shattered into white fragments.

In these cases it is probable that the current sets up such a tremendous heat that all the sap in the tree is converted into superheated steam, which explodes. The greater the heat the more of the cells in which moisture lies are exploded and the greater the destruction of the tissues of the tree. As there is most moisture between the bark and the trunk the first and greatest explosion takes place there, instantly driving the bark away into space. Frequently the explosion only takes place at that point.

As Sir Hiram Maxim pointed out after the great explosion of Mont Pelee, a very similar method is now used by the American manufacturers of wood pulp. The logs of fir are placed in a strong chamber, and there subjected to the action of superheated steam until the water in every cell is converted into explosive gas. The chamber is then opened and the log explodes, converting itself into wood powder.—London Spectator.

Egyptian Weather.

As a topic of conversation the weather is branded with infamy in Egypt. It is never mentioned—except by a fool. I am not saying this maliciously, for I was that fool often enough. More than once on being introduced to Europeans I would pass the usual compliments and add, "What a charming day it is!" I got more than one withering look of contempt for this species of cranx forgetfulness. Why, the sun shines like a ball of fire for eight months each year, and there is practically no variation in the weather. In my diary I read the following entries: "Beautiful morning;" "Beautiful morning again;" "Another beautiful morning;" "Oh, bother, they are all beautiful mornings here, so I must take it for granted."

Reversed.

"Mrs. Closely, do you still maintain your rules as to when the servants must be in at night?"

"Certainly. The only difference is that the cook now makes the rules."—Detroit Free Press.

A CASE OF LUCK.

How the Look of a Nickel Won a Good Paying Position.

Little Mrs. Tyler sighed as the trolley car whizzed past her.

"To think," she mused, "that I should have come to this—too poor to spend 5 cents for car fare! If I could only get more music scholars! Then Bob could have the beefsteak and the fruit he needs—dear, patient Robert!"

Time was when Frederica Fechner's piano playing had won her many a social triumph, but that was before she had married the penniless Robert Tyler, to begin life anew across the continent. Now that he was sick they had only the pittance her pupils brought her.

Today Mrs. Tyler was very tired. No wonder she had sighed when the car had glided past her, and home was a mile away. Strains of Handel's "Harmonious Blacksmith" drew her inside a music store. Music always rested her. A girl was playing upon a grand piano, and several persons stood about. Mrs. Tyler strolled their way.

One after another took a turn at the instrument. The newcomer was too interested in the playing to question wherefore. Finally a man approached her.

"It is your turn next," he said.

She was about to explain his mistake when the humor of the situation appealed to her, and she was seized with a desire to carry out the joke. Accordingly she took her seat and began Paderewski's "Love Song." She did not know for what she was playing, but she vaguely felt that it was a test of some sort, and she threw her soul into her fingers. When she ended there was a little burst of applause, and "something else" was called for. She responded with Liszt's "Schubert's Serenade" and then with Chopin's "Cradle Song."

A sheet of music was placed before her, and a lady came forward to sing. If there was one thing in which Mrs. Tyler excelled it was in accompaniments, and now she did her best. The face of the man who had invited her to play was one broad smile as he inquired deferentially:

"May I ask whom we have had the honor of hearing? You have distanced them all, my dear madam. The place is easily yours."

Mrs. Tyler looked at him in bewilderment; then she laughed and explained. He explained too.

She had unwittingly taken part in a trial of applicants for the double position of accompanist for a singing master and piano player for the music shop. A salary was named that left the little woman nearly dumb with surprise, so amply it fitted her present needs. She wanted to dance all the way home. Fatigue was forgotten.

"Oh!" cried his wife, and the exclamation was a thanksgiving.—Youth's Companion.

The Family Tree.

A pleasant pastime, literally, for those who have no more pressing duties and wish to get outside their environment at least in thought will open up before her who begins to mount a family tree. Tracing one's genealogy may become—probably will become—a matter of absorbing amusement and attention, for it entails a thread gathered up here, dropped there, a letter to write, a book to read, a register to consult. To the self absorbed, the despondent, the listless, one may recommend this diversion as certain to suit even rather morbid conditions of temperament, and yet as certain to gently force the mind away from itself to other persons and things in opening up a wider and wider field of reflection.

Quaint Prayers.

The chief of the Leslies is said to have prayed before a battle: "Be on our side, aye lay low a bit, an' ye'll see these curies get a-hidin' that most please ye." An old covenanter, who ruled his household with a rod of iron, is said to have prayed in all sincerity at family worship: "O Lord, hae a care o' Rob, for he is on the great deep, an' thou boldest it in the hollow o' thy hand. An' hae a care o' Jamie, for he hae gone to fight the enemies o' his country, an' the outcome o' the battle is wi' thee. But ye need na flash o' yersel' wi' wee Willy, for I hae him here, an' I'm cawpable o' lookin' after him myself."

Careless of Honors.

Pastor Kneipp, the famous discoverer of the "barefoot cure," who was appointed chamberlain by the pope, cared little for the honor. He did not even take the trouble to open the letter announcing the appointment and first learned of the honor conferred upon him by the arrival of a deputation at the Woerishofen cloister to congratulate him. He declined to be addressed, however, as "monsignore." It was with difficulty that he was persuaded to leave his retreat to go to Rome to thank the pope.

Seats of His Raiment.

"It is proper to respect an office under the government," said the patriotic citizen, "even if you do not happen to approve of the man who holds it."

"Of course," answered Senator Sorghum. "It is to the office that the salary and perquisites are attached, not to the individual."

Mean.

Husband—My, but I wish I had your tongue! Wife—So that you could express yourself intelligently? Husband—No; so that I could stop it when I wanted to.

Good breeding is the result of much good sense, some good nature and a little self denial for the sake of others.

THE FAN.

Let poets and the scribbling clan,
Romance's border skirting,
Delight to write about the fan,
That soft first aid to flirting.
Another fan I'd vote first prize
Were I mayhap a voter
Is one that gives to heat a chaze
With its electric motor.

It's nice to see a pretty fan
Held by a girl flirtatious,
But that is if the weather man
Is also soft and gracious.
But when above the hundred mark
The mercury is boiling
How long for the electric spark
To set the brass hands toiling.

We do not wonder as we sit
O'er some soft drink enchanting
That it has made so great a hit
With its electric panting.
For it can take the hottest day
And very neatly rout it,
And so we wonder anyway
If we could live without it.

An Extensive Family.

"Poor man, he has 100 sons-in-law on his hands."

"Why, I thought he had but three daughters."

"That's all. But he has one real son-in-law and two cyphers. How many do you make that out to be?"

A Skilled Trade.

"Is your son going to learn a trade?"

"I thought I should give him that much of a start in life."

"What trade?"

"Horse trade, I guess. That seems to pay about the best, with the shortest hours."

Discriminating.

Rain on unjust and just alike
Falls, and the dust is laid,
But only will the sprinkling cart
The treasures from its store impart
To that sweet section of the plot
Where water tax is paid.

Different Viewpoint.

"Seems to me his writings lack atmosphere."

"Strikes me they have too much atmosphere and would be greatly improved if the wind was pumped out of them."

What It Didn't Say.

"It seems as though she could make the piano talk."

"It doesn't seem that way to me. If it could talk it would have hollered 'Enough' long ago."

Relative Distance.

It's three miles as the crow flies,
But truly it appears,
As the patent, double jointed flying machine tries,
It's several hundred years.

A Doubter.

"I gave a man a quarter for this cigar."

"How much change did he give you back?"

Any one can predict weather, but it takes a genius to draw a salary for it.

It would doubtless be better all round if schoolteachers loved the children under their care. However, it would not be fair to ask them to do it at the present average salaries for teachers.

If hay fever sufferers had a vote they would cut August down to two weeks for bad behavior.

Some of the spellbinders will move the crops this fall to tears.

One beautiful thing about growing old is that you can stay at home from the picnics without occasioning any hard feelings.

Fly paper may knock some flies silly, but there are others that always recommend it to their friends as a health food.

It would cause great unhappiness in the world if a man could see himself as others see him, particularly his stenographer and his office boy.

THE DIVING LIGHT.

Trick of Burning a Candle in a Glass of Water.

If you were to announce some evening that you could stick a lighted candle into a glass of water until it was submerged almost up to the wick and that the candle would not go out, but would burn down to the very end of its wick instead, wouldn't everybody laugh at you?

Get a candle and drive a very small nail into the bottom end. The candle should be about three inches long. Fill a glass with water, light the candle and stick it into the glass. The candle floats and the nail weighs down the end, which results in the candle floating perpendicularly, as shown in the illustration.

But what is to prevent it from burning down to the surface of the water and going out?

That is the secret of the trick, and not one person in a hundred would think of the true cause, which is very simple and natural.

The candle loses its weight as it burns. The remaining portion, growing lighter, keeps rising to the top, pulling the nail up with it. The water maintains the same distance from the wick it had in the beginning of the experiment, and the candle burns merrily away until it reaches the end of its wick, when there will still be enough tallow left to support the nail—if it is small enough—and then it is your turn to laugh.—New York Mail.

DEN OF WILD BEASTS.

A Game That Gives Plenty of Fun and Lots of Exercise.

In the game of "the den of wild beasts" each player represents some ferocious wild animal, such as panther, wolf, lion or bear. Each chooses a tree or post or stone for his particular den. As a signal for the game to commence all make a terrible noise, imitating the animals they pretend to be.

The most venturesome then leaves his den and advances toward the middle of the playground, where he dances around, trying to entice the other animals from their lairs. Suppose the wolf comes out first. Perhaps a lion and a tiger will immediately follow. Then the wolf calls out, "I'm after the lion!" The wolf starts in pursuit, and the lion tries to get home to his den before being caught. If the wolf catches him he takes him back to his own lair, and there the lion has to stay throughout the rest of the game unless the wolf himself is caught.

No two are allowed to chase the same animal at the same time, and the chase belongs to the one who first calls "I'm after so and so!" No animal can be taken while he is bringing a captive home.

It often happens that all the animals are in the field at the same time, each in pursuit of his prey. Then it is most exciting. Whenever the captor of an animal is himself captured the prisoner is free to leave the den and go back to his own lair. The game ends only when all the animals are caught and imprisoned in one den.

Fire Under Water.

Fire under water may be produced by placing some small pieces of phosphorus in a conical shaped tumbler and then covering them with the crystals of chlorate of potash. Next fill the glass with water and then add a few drops of sulphuric acid, the acid to be applied directly to the phosphorus and potash crystals by means of a long tube. If the experiment is properly carried out tongues of bright red flame can be seen flashing up through the water, the intense chemical heat produced by the action of the sulphuric acid on the potash and phosphorus being sufficient to inflame the latter, although entirely covered with water.

When Penny Bolted.

"Come here, right away, quick," shouted Louise, aged three, to her mother. "Tussy is going to make tea."

"What makes you think so?" asked her mother.

Pointing to the cat, who was purring loudly, Louise said:

"Listen, mother, she's now beginning to boil."

The Fish Are Cured.

"Why," said Bobby to his elder brother, "do herring have so many more illnesses than other fish?"

"Who says they do?" asked the youth addressed.

"Why, this book says that thousands upon thousands of them are cured every year."

A HAIR TONIC.

One That, It Is Claimed, Will Cure Premature Grayness.

The question of "how to keep hair from turning prematurely gray" has been asked so many times in journals, as well as daily papers, that I take this way of answering some of those thus affected, for surely it is an affliction for one to turn gray before one is thirty. The tonic I herewith give has been used successfully by many whom I know personally with very gratifying results. It was given by an elderly lady of seventy years, who had used it for a long, long time. When she died she had a lovely head of hair, and it still retained its original color. When asked how she kept it so, she would laugh and reply: "Why, it is easy enough. Just keep the hair good and healthy by cleaning it thoroughly every two weeks and using the tonic I will tell of." Of course, to those who have many gray hairs it will take longer to bring the color back, but it will do it if you only persevere. Then, too, it prevents the hair from getting thin by falling out; in fact, it is generally beneficial to the hair or scalp. When the "basting threads," as my girlie calls them, begin to come in my hair, I shall surely use it and keep them away as long as possible. Hair tonic: One-quarter ounce of sax sulphur, one and one-half drams of sugar of lead, one ounce best brandy, one-half ounce glycerin, two ounces rose water, one pint of soft water. Mix all, adding water last. Let it stand a week before using, being careful to shake it well every day, also shake well before using. Wet only roots.—Designer.

WINDOW CURTAINS.

Inexpensive, Pretty Material Best Answers the Purpose.

The question of curtains is always rather difficult to solve unless the young housekeeper cuts the Gordian knot at once by shunning the upholstery departments and haunting the devious byways of the basements. Thanks to Old Sol, the finest and most expensive curtains in the world will only hold their color and strength for a limited time, so it is by far the best policy to buy pretty, inexpensive materials which may be discarded without a qualm of conscience when they become shabby.

For bedroom curtains, sprigged dimities, such as are sold for summer gowns, may be bought for from 6½ to 15 cents a yard, and when daintily made and hung they are refreshingly pretty to look at.

The so called "cretonnes," which can be bought for from 15 to 25 cents a yard, make a somewhat heavier curtain, and if they are wanted still heavier they are quite charming when lined with cheesecloth of some bright color, some tone of which appears in the pattern.

I once saw some curtains made of unbleached muslin, lined with turkey red, the muslin being bordered with an oriental striped cotton in which red predominated. The effect of the sunlight streaming through these curtains was so bright and cheerful I have never forgotten it.—House Beautiful.

George Sand's Oddities.

George Sand, or Mme. Dudevant, the famous French woman writer, scandalized her literary friends by wearing men's clothes. "A long gray overcoat," she herself says she wore, "a woolen tie and—and—a pair of boots." These boots were her joy. "I longed to sleep with them. On their little iron shod heels I was firm on my feet and trotted from one end of Paris to the other." She also smoked in public cigarettes, even cigars, so that her teeth were much discolored. It was this outward mannishness that won for her the title of "illustrious Hybrid." However, her hands were beautifully feminine. "It was," says one who knew her, "a delicate hand, all grace, tact, firmness and flexibility. One could not dream of a more perfect combination of the French working class woman's and the aristocratic or royal lady's hand." It will be recalled that George Sand boasted, "The blood of kings is mixed in my veins with the blood of the poor and lowly." She was, as she termed it, "astride" of the two classes, the peasantry and the aristocracy.

A Quaint Proclamation.

Somewhat over a hundred years ago George III. of England, with his court, went to Weymouth for his health. The mayor of Dorchester, a neighboring town, being much impressed by the expected arrival of the royal visitor, issued the following proclamation: "Whereas, his majesty the king and queen is expected to honor this ancient corporation with their presence in the course of their tower, in order to prevent them from meeting no impediment in his journey the worshipful the mare have thought proper that the following regulations shall be prohibited, as follows: Nobody must leave no dust, nor nothing in that shape, before their doors nor shops; and all wheelbarrows, cabbage stalks, marble stones, Irish potatos and other minerals must be swept out of the streets. Any one who shall give offense in any of these articles shall be dealt with according to law, without bail or mainprise. God save his majesty the king and queen and his worship the mare."

The Skull Shrinkers.

The Haumbisos Indians, living in the northern part of Peru and near the southern boundary of Ecuador, follow one of the most remarkable vocations in the world. They are able, by a process known only to that tribe, to reduce the human head to one-third its original size and retain the features and coloring to a perfect degree.

The head is severed from the trunk, the skull and frontal bone are removed and in the cavity a soft mold of clay is fitted. It is then hung by the scalp from a tripod over a pot of boiling water and steamed for three days. After this the shrinking process begins, which requires skill and is a secret that the Indians guard jealously. These heads are sold to the tourists at $1.50 each, but as the tribe is savage and the complexity of civilization has not mastered them, it is difficult to obtain the heads at any price.

The Honeybee.

How much honey does a bee find in a flower? A naturalist says he has observed a bee extract a whole drop of honey from one flower, and again he has watched a bee visit a hundred flowers without getting load enough to return to the hive. Bees work advantageously within a radius of three miles of the hive, but they will go eight miles to get honey from a field of buckwheat. They are very partial to the buckwheat bloom. Bees have a most delicately developed scent. When a bee leaves its hive it rises in the air and scents honey bearing flowers in the wind and follows the scent to the flowers.

Changes in National Features.

Whether we look at portrait galleries, like Hampton court, or turn over illustrations in old books, it is evident that some physiognomical change has been taking place. The stout, plethoric, muscular, ruddy faced man of stolid expression is becoming exceptional, and his place is being taken by a thinner, more alert, active type. The modern face is more keen, leaner and of less coarse mold than that of the older pioneers who laid the foundation of their country's greatness.—"Aspects of Social Evolutions."

Cough.

A correspondent of an English paper points out nine ways of pronouncing the letters "ough." These are, written phonetically, as in coff, cauf (each is allowable), cauff, thaut, tho, three, hiccup, the Irish lough and the Scot's pronunciation of sough, "such," the two final consonants in the last two words representing the corresponding gutturals in German. The editor in comment adds, "There is one other—'hough.'"

Forever Silenced.

"Does your husband find any fault with your cooking?"

"Certainly not," answered Mr. Meekton's wife. "My husband has the chafing dish habit and is not in a position to find fault with anybody's cooking."

She Wasn't Eighty-one.

This conversation took place over the telephone line at Richmond: "Hello!" "Hello!" "Are you 81?" "No; I'm not sixty yet." She hung up the receiver like hitting the box with a rock.

His Unbeauteous Past.

"He talks a great deal about his family tree."

"That may account for the tales I've heard about his shady past."

When the heart is woe, the understanding is easily convinced. — Simmons.

Birds and Their Beaks.

Why do birds live so much longer than mammals, which are often a hundred times their size? Possibly, among other things, because they have beaks instead of teeth. All carniverous beasts become weak and liable to starvation as their teeth drop out or break. Neither are the herbivorous animals in much better case. Old horses would probably die of starvation if wild, for their teeth would fall them; indeed, in some stony countries old horses have to be killed because their teeth are worn away by cropping grass close to the rock. Rodents constantly die from injuries to teeth. But a bird's beak neither wears out nor drops off, and as it constantly swallows fresh grit to aid in grinding food in the gizzard that needs no repairing either.

A Remarkable Tree.

The most remarkable tree yet discovered flourishes in the island of Fierro, one of the largest of the Canary group. This island is so dry that not even a rivulet is to be found within its boundaries, yet there grows a species of tree, the leaves of which are narrow and long and continue green throughout the year. There is also a constant cloud surrounding the tree, which is condensed and, falling in drops, keeps the cisterns placed under it constantly full. In this manner the natives of Fierro obtain water, and as the supply is limited the population must of necessity be limited also.

Had Made a Change.

"Isn't there something in my policy," asked a caller at an insurance office the other day, "about my having to report any change of residence?"

"Yes, sir," said the man at the nearest desk, picking up a pen. "Where have you moved to?"

"I haven't moved anywhere," rejoined the caller. "I have made a change in my residence by painting it a light straw color and putting a chimney pot on the kitchen chimney. I think that's all. Good day!"

THE COCOON CRADLE

HOOK OF WRAPPING UP THE LITTLE REDSKIN PAPOOSE.

Bead Bedecked Buckskin Bag In Which the Indian Baby Bunting Grows and Thrives—Origin of This Queer Cramped Cradle.

Fancy a tiny copper colored papoose buckled up snugly in a queer buckskin bag that resembles nothing in nature so much as the cosy cocoon cradle of a baby butterfly and then draw upon your imagination still further, picturing this odd receptacle swinging from the leafy canopy of an Indian wickiup or brush arbor, and you have before you an Indian baby and his wonderful cradle.

Gorgeous yellow butterflies and brown Kiowa babies are seldom linked together in song or story, yet in real life their wrappings while in the chrysalis state bear a remarkable resemblance to each other.

The cocoon cradle proper and its various modifications as found among the different tribes of North American Indians are constructed from the skins of animals. And right here we may pause and trace the origin of another famous nursery rhyme to the Indian cocoon cradle, for did not the father of Baby Bunting go a-hunting to get a little rabbit's skin to wrap that mythical baby in? All full blood Kiowa babies are born into the pho-li-yo-ye, or rabbit circle, and are taught to dance in the mysterious circle of rabbits as soon as they learn to toddle, belonging to the rabbit order of the Kiowa soldiery.

Hence a rabbit skin would be a very appropriate wrapping for a Kiowa Baby Bunting, though neither large enough nor strong enough for his cradle. The red deer of the forest, quarry of the redskinned hunter, gives of his beautiful covering to make the cradle that is to swing from the tree top, literally tree tops cut from the cottonwoods and elms that fringe the clear little streams rippling through the Kiowa reservation and piled high on a framework of poles to serve as a "summer parlor" in front of his father's tepee.

The crude deer hide is carefully dressed by a tedious and secret process known only to these Indians, and when finished is as soft and pliant as the most expensive chamois skin. Then loving fingers skillfully embroider with quills beautiful beadwork designs upon the delicately tinted deerskin. Kiowa cradles are more ornamental than those of other tribes, and Kiowa squaws excel in that marvelous Indian beadwork now the popular fad of their paleface sisters. Some of this beadwork embroidery is not only very beautiful, but very elaborate. The Sioux squaws, who alone rival their Kiowa sisters, ornament the cradles of their little ones with bands of deerskin, upon which are wrought in colored beads gorgeous patterns of men, horses, birds, fish and flowers. Instead of a wooden framework they substitute a basket work frame of reeds and sometimes they use seed and grasses instead of beads.

The Cheyenne, Apache and Comanche Indians all use cocoon cradles patterned after the Kiowa cradles, but theirs are not ornamented as elaborately as those of the Kiowas. In truth, the grim and warlike Comanche of the plains wastes very little time in decorating the receptacle of his offspring. A stout piece of deerskin, fastened to an equally stout wooden frame and laced up securely with rawhide thongs, suffices his simple need.

The origin of the cocoon cradle itself, like that of the redskins, seems wrapped in mystery, though we might with reason trace this primitive cradle back to the Lapps of northern Europe, whose babies sleep in little hollowed out affairs swung down from the lower limbs of trees. They are lined with moss and laced up, and in shape are exactly like the primitive Indian cocoon cradle from which the modern cocoon cradle, beautified and improved, has been evolved.

After the beadwork embroidery is completed the deerskin pouch or bag is fastened securely upon a strong board whose two upright handles, projecting above the headpiece or hood, are strengthened by a crosspiece at the back. These handles are very convenient when the mother is busy about her many tasks; if it be warm weather, baby is swung from the top of the brush arbor, his round, brown face peering smilingly from out its trappings of gayly beaded deerskin, his bright little eyes blinking at the sunbeams shining through the leafy roof, or the flames of the nightly campfire leaping up to mingle with the moonlight. When "trading" at the agency stores, the squaw props the cradle, "baby and all," against the counter and goes calmly about the important business of laying in a supply for her family in their tepee far out on the reservation.

Mother love fills the heart of a poor squaw as completely as it does that of her more fortunate paleface sister. Her clumsy fingers fashion playthings of shells, odd shaped bones, carved wooden beads, bright pieces of tin, china or glass, which she hangs about the head of the cocoon cradle in reach of the chubby brown fists. Baby soon learns to rattle these primitive playthings gleefully.

Strange as it may appear, the redskinned Baby Buntings seem to thrive in their cramped quarters, but they enjoy as a famous treat a change to the blankets upon their mothers' backs, when the toiling squaws are forced to go down to the scant timber stretches along the creek to bring up firewood and water for the camp.—Los Angeles Times.

Children's Noses.

One of the most prominent physicians in town has been giving me a bit of homely advice for the benefit of mothers.

"If children were taught to blow their noses properly," says he, "the work ear specialists have to do would be reduced by half at least. Next to learning how to gargle the knowledge of how to blow the nose without injuring the ears is the most important thing a child can be taught. The violent blowing of the nose when a child has a cold is very likely to strain the drums of the ears and to set up painful troubles which frequently result in permanent deafness. Every child and every grown person, too, for that matter, should be taught to blow one nostril at a time only. In this way the ear drum is not endangered. It isn't an elegant thing to include in the infant curriculum, but the child who learns it will be spared a great deal of pain and will be far less likely to have its hearing impaired."—Washington Post.

Laundry Lore.

There are many substances which may be added to starch to help produce a luster. Among these substances are sugar, salt, borax, spermaceti and paraffin wax. I have found paraffin wax and salt very good. Make the starch in this manner: Mix one tablespoonful of starch with four tablespoonfuls of cold water and pour on this three quarts of boiling water. Boil for twenty minutes, then add one teaspoonful of salt and paraffin wax half the size of a nutmeg. Stir until the wax is dissolved, then cool and strain through cheesecloth. Have the table linen wrung dry and work well in the starch. Pass through the wringer and dry in the sun. When dry make very damp and roll in a damp cloth.—Ladies' Home Journal.

RECORD-BREAKING CROWD AT INDUSTRIAL EXHIBITION

One of the Largest Gatherings That Has Ever Attended on an Opening Day

EXHIBITION OF HORSES AND FARM STOCK

Graham Brothers, of Claremont, Have a Fine String of Clydesdales—The Speeding Events Watched with Great Interest—Some of the Events of Opening Day—The Directors Well Pleased With Results So Far

The Directors of the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition could not have wished for a more auspicious opening than that which marked the fair yesterday afternoon. His Honor the Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario, the Hon. Mortimer Clark, K.C., and Mrs. Clark, and other ladies and gentlemen who were on the platform during the opening ceremonies, looked out upon a sea of faces—probably the largest crowd that has ever been present on such an occasion. It was indicative of the important place which the fair has taken in the appreciation of the people of the district. The President, Mr. D. Hughes-Charles, stated: "We are endeavoring to place this fair on a good, sound basis," and the attendance was one that pointed to the assurance of the people's co-operation.

There were not many side attractions at the fair, but visitors took considerable interest in the magnificent horses and the splendid display of farm stock entered. Competition in many classes was very keen, and the work of the judges was by no means easy. Horses and cattle were particularly strong, but there was a too marked weakness in sheep and swine, considering the importance of the district. The poultry list filled up fairly well, but there was room for improvement. In agricultural products the showing was not as good as it might have been. The exhibition of ladies' work, though not large, contained some very fine specimens, and the ladies who yesterday attended the fair found great interest in the main building.

Apart from the opening ceremonies yesterday afternoon, the speeding events were the feature, and the grand stand was packed and the home precincts of the track lined when the bugle summoned the first event. Following is a summary of the races:—

2.50 Class, Trot or Pace.

Maud Keswick, O. B. Shepherd, of Toronto...	1	1	1
Jim X., Charles Fife, of Otonabee	2	2	2
King Van, Geo. Caldwell, of Perrytown	3	3	3

Donna Bell, owned by Dr. Johnston, took second place in the first heat, but was put back to fourth place and fined five dollars for holding back.

The time was 2.25, 2.30 and 2.32.

which was won by Catelaine, owned

There was a 1 1-4 mile flat race by C. Phair, of Toronto, with Zembra, owned by F. Fowler, of Carbary, Manitoba, second, and Michaelmas, owned by J. W. Fleming, of Toronto, third.

The hurdle race was won by Gray Cloud, owned by Woodruff, of Dundas, with Cheatham, owned by P. Clunan, of town, 2nd, and Fire Field, owned by W. Worthington, of Toronto, third. On the last heat Fire Field fell at a hurdle, and the rider, a young man named A. Polger, Toronto, was painfully cut and bruised about the head.

The officials for the day were Mr. J. G. Martin, of Stouffville, starter; Messrs. E. G. Patterson and Alex. Gibson, timers; W. Leaby, Lakefield, and W. Hendrie, of Hamilton, judges.

GRAHAM'S CLYDESDALES.

During the afternoon an opportunity was given to see Graham's three magnificent Clydesdale stallions. These animals are the kings of their class, with perfection of action and carriage, and noble appearance. One of these, Baron Sterling, three years old, a superb black with streaks of grey, took first prize at the Edinburgh Fair, before he was brought to this country, where he took firsts at Toronto and Ottawa, and has the distinction of being the champion of Canada. Royal Baron, a half brother of Baron Sterling, is five years old, and took first in the aged class at Ottawa and Toronto, while King Crest, four years old, took second in the same class at both Toronto and Ottawa. A handsome black hackney pony, Joe Rock, was also shown. This horse won over 20 prizes in England, and took first and champion at both Ottawa and Toronto.

The string of fine animals which Mr. Graham has been very kind in exhibiting here as an attraction, is as follows, with their pedigrees:—

Minnie McQueen, sired by McQueen, dam Minnie Malcolm.

Julie, sire Baron's Pride, dam Ellice, by Prince Romo.

Joe Rock, sire Lord Douglas, dam Princess, by Lord Darby 2nd.

Fairy King, sire Baron's Pride, dam Fortune, by McGregor.

Discoverer, sire Harbinger, dam Maggie, by Guildfinder.

Baron Sterling, sire Baron's Pride, dam, Queen of Branley, by McGregor.

Queen of Branby, by McGregor.

King's Crest, sire Up to Time, dam Tiara, by Lord Douglas.

Royal Baron, sire Baron's Pride, dam Royal Queen, by Mount Royal.

The first day went off, it can be said, without a hitch, and the Directors are to be congratulated accordingly.

It was regretted by many that some enterprising caterer did not erect a dining tent on the grounds. He would have done a rushing business.

The directors would have found a telephone a great convenience at the grounds.

The only instance of anything like bad management was that only one man was selling tickets at the first gate during the afternoon, thus causing a lot of delay in dealing with te rush of people.

An Otonabee farmer named Howson, brother of George Howson, of town, shed $35 on the grounds yesterday, and he claims somebody touched him. The matter was reported to the police.

Following is the entry list of horses, cattle, sheep, swine and poultry—and from this a good idea of the bulk of the entry list may be formed:—

PICKPOCKETS AT FAIR

HOW ALLEN M'CARTHY LOST $40. ON OPENING DAY.

Mr. Howson of Otonabee also Missed $35. O.B. Sheppard, Toronto, $125 and S. T. Andrews $12.

Pickpockets got in their work to perfection at the Exhibition yesterday afternoon. Several hauls were made, and the police have but little suspicion as to the guilty parties. There was a big crush of people on the grounds during the opening of the exhibition, and it would naturally be supposed that the pickpockets would have got in their work then, but enquiry reveals that the thieving was all in different periods of the day.

Mr. Allen McCarthy, who was a special constable on the grounds yesterday, heard in the afternoon that a man named Howson, from Otonabee, brother of George Howson, of town, lost $35, somebody having gone down into his pocket and extracted that amount. Mr. McCarthy went up to the grounds to see what he could do by way of detective work. He mingled with the crowd, and happened to meet a friend from Toronto, whom he had not seen for some time. They went to the photograph machine and exchanged pictures, and it was while he was hunting for the right change in his pocket, that Mr. McCarthy lost his purse in his pocket, containing $40. He is of the opinion that he shed the money while he was in a crowd on the grounds, some time about 4 o'clock. He did not succeed in discovering any clue as to the whereabouts of Howson's $35, and on the grounds today he was anxious to have an introduction to the parties who put their hands down into his pocket for his coin. Just before going to the Exhibition yesterday, Mr. McCarthy put $40 into the bank, thus probably escaping the loss of a much larger amount. Mr. Howson and Mr. McCarthy were not the only two who lost money. It was reported to the police that Mr. O. B. Shepherd, of Toronto, was touched for $125, and that S. T. Andrews, of North Monaghan, went home without $12, which disappeared from his pocket during the afternoon. In fact, the pickpockets seem to have done a big business yesterday, and of such an extensive character that it is a wonder suspicion has not fastened upon the operators.

FOOLED WITH HAND-CUFFS

And a Toronto Bell Boy Was a Prisoner for Two Hours.

Mr. Geo. Cochrane, High County Constable, tells of an amusing incident which occurred the other day in Toronto. He had gone there to arrest the man Christie, who was charged with creating a disturbance on a C.P.R. train in this vicinity. Mr. Cochrane had to go to the east part of the city, and left his handcuffs in the safe at the Walker House. While he was away, it seems that one of the bell-boys sought to form an acquaintance with the darbys, and in an unsuspecting moment they snapped and he found himself a prisoner. Nobody could release him, and for two hours he was denied the use of his hands. The constable was away from the hotel about that time, and when he returned the bell-boy was willing to be released.

OFFICE TO BE IMPROVED

ONE HUNDRED ADDITIONAL BOXES FOR THE POST OFFICE.

A Change in the General Layout Looking to Improvement.

Mr. Poquet, of the Public Works, Department, Ottawa, was in town yesterday, planning the improvements to be made in the Post Office, which, he states, are to be carried out forthwith. The proposal is to change the box plan of the office considerably by extending a series to occupy what is now the money order office. This will mean the addition of a hundred boxes. In the corner thus created, an angle being opposite the present stamp-vendor's office, it is proposed to place a parcel wicket, while there will be two general delivery wickets where now there is only one. The present door on Water street will be made a public entrance, and the money order office will have a situation near this doorway, or, in other words, it will occupy the postmaster's office, save for a space sufficient for the convenience of the public. The postmaster will have an office situated in a one-storey addition to be erected at the entrance in the yard where mails are received. Besides these changes in the general lay-out, the boxes are to be renewed with metal fronts, the old ones having become so old as to give dissatisfaction. They have not been changed since the erection of the Post Office in 1887. The stamp vendor's office is to be changed to a point in the Hunter st. front, near the angle formed by the main wall and the box elevation. New folding doors are to be placed at the entrances, and the post office is to be cleaned and painted throughout. It will be remembered that $4,000 was placed in the estimates some time ago for this work, and the changes can be made none too soon.

FAIR HAS KING'S WEATHER

GOOD SIZED CROWDS ATTENDED — EXHIBITION TO-DAY.

Over 5000 People in Attendance Yesterday — Street Railway Took up 7000 Fares — A Good Service was Provided.

King's weather has certainly set in for the Fair season. The Peterborough Exhibition had another fine day of it, the crowd on the grounds this afternoon being quite large. The judging in the horse ring was continued this morning and attracted the interest of exhibitors and all of those who like to see something particularly fine in horse flesh. The cattle rings were also busy during the morning, and this afternoon the big events were the horse races, and judging of roadsters. These, of course, attracted large crowds.

The receipts at the gates yesterday amounted to something like $1,000. This would go to show that there were at least 4,000 paid admissions, but this does not include the large number of members of the Exhibition who, of course, obtained their tickets of admission some time ago. But it is fair to assume, all things considered, that there were over 5,000 people on the grounds at the busiest period yesterday afternoon.

The people appreciated the street railway service. True to announcement, cars left Charlotte-st. and the fair grounds every five minutes during the afternoon, and as the result of a blocking system used for the occasion, no time was lost at the points of crossing. For instance, a phone at Charlotte street was connected with another near the fair grounds, so that the trains were run in such a manner that there would be no backing up or meeting at points on the system, where two cars could do nothing but back up or try to cross each other on the same track. The service was an excellent one. Five motors and two trailers were in service, and did the best they possibly could under the circumstances. An authorative statement is that the Company carried 7,000 people in connection with the Exhibition; this means, of course, 7,000 fares not that many different people. Owing to the crowded condition of the cars, it is altogether likely that the number actually carried was over 7,000, for the conductors would not be able to collect the total.

An accident was narrowly avoided yesterday afternoon at the gate. The crowds were rushing towards the cars, when a hack drove up with a gentleman and three ladies in it. The horses became frightened, and made a sudden dash. By a hair's breadth children escaped being knocked down, but fortunately as the cab rounded the corner, a wheel caught in a telegraph pole, and stayed further progress. The cab was slightly damaged and some people were badly scared.

The prize list of the Fair will be ready for publication tomorrow.

PORT HOPE GIRL ARRESTED

SHE AND HER HUSBAND CHARGED WITH DOING AWAY WITH A CHILD

The Girl is Ethel Bye, now Mrs. Alexander Martin, and one Time Worked in Peterboro—Excitement in Port Hope.

It now transpires that Mrs. Alexander Martin, who with her husband is charged with having done away with their child in Coatsworth Cut, Toronto, some weeks ago, is Ethel Bye of Port Hope, who worked for a short time in Peterborough as a hotel maid. The Port Hope Guide has the following:

Probably no arrest has occasioned so much excitement as that of the one in Toronto yesterday, when Alexander John Martin and wife Ethel were taken into custody in connection with the Coatsworth Cut mystery. They are held on the charge of murdering the infant found dead in the bay at the mouth of the Coatsworth Cut on the afternoon of Thursday, Aug. 4th.

It comes to light this morning, however, that the young woman who is held as one of the guilty parties is a Port Hoper, and just previous to the murder she was here with her child in company with her husband. Her maiden name was Ethel Bye, a young girl of only nineteen years of age, and a daughter of the late Mrs. Best. When in town she generally resided with her grandmother, Mrs. Bye, on Bramley street. She was engaged as dining room girl in one of our hotels, and on leaving there went to Peterborough. She finally drifted to Toronto and going to a boarding house on Peter street, met with Martin. A runaway match took place and they were married at Rochester, N.Y. They returned to Toronto, and on the 13th of January last the child, a baby boy, was born.

On the 2nd of June Mrs. Martin, with the baby, came here to nurse her grandmother. Martin followed on June 11th and remained here until July 28th, when he returned to Toronto. She followed him on August 2nd, and the following day, August 3rd, the tragedy took place. When she left here she took $17.00 with her which the grandmother had entrusted to her to pay off certain debts in town.

WHAT LED TO THE ARREST.

The shrewd and persistent work of Chief Bond of this town is in no small degree the cause of the capture. He was confident from the time he heard of the tragedy that he could locate the guilty party, and has worked unceasingly ever since. He traced one couple here not long ago to a boarding house, but upon examination found that they were not the guilty party. A few weeks ago he received a circular from Chief Grasett of Toronto, giving a description of the couple and requesting him to be on a careful watlook for them. The moment he read the circular his thoughts drifted back to the 16th of July, the day of the Forepaugh & Sells Circus, and he had pictured in his mind a young man, woman and child whom he had seen on the circus grounds. What attracted his attention to this couple was the booties on the baby, and when these were mentioned in the circular he felt sure that he had seen the guilty parties. He at once set to work and gathered valuable information from a number of the citizens of the town. He went to Toronto during the exhibition and you may depend he never lost an opportunity to secure more evidence. He finally had woven a net of the strongest kind of evidence, and yesterday afternoon he wired Chief Grasett to go to 141 1-2 King street, East, and he would be fully justified in arresting Mrs. Martin. Upon receiving the information Detective Cuddy visited this place and learned that Mrs. Martin would be found at the Jubilee restaurant, 169 King st., east. At the restaurant Mrs. Martin was asked to accompany the officer to the City Hall. She informed Inspector Stark that the infant was at her mother's in Port Hope. A telegram was then received by Chief Bond asking if the child was here, but the reply was that it was not. Mrs. Butler who gave evidence at the inquest, identified the person as the one with whom she rode to Munro Park on August 3rd.

Upon hearing Mrs. Butler's statement it is said Mrs. Martin broke down and told all the circumstances of the tragedy. With tears she related how with her husband she had gone out in a rowboat from Munro Park to dispose of the infant. Mrs. Martin thinks her husband struck the child with an oar and then threw it into the water. Then they rowed over to Ward's Island, and left the boat on the beach, where it was found a few hours later.

Shortly afterwards Martin was arrested at Stanley Barracks, where he was a private in C company.

The greatest credit is due to our Chief and the Toronto police are more than pleased with the masterly way he has handled his case.

THE HOLY CITY

Rev. John Pott's Eloquent Address To-morrow Evening.

It would be hard to conceive a more interesting trip than that taken a few months ago by the 800 delegates to the World's Sunday School Convention at Jerusalem. What inspiration would come from the actual sight of the Holy Land! What new interest would be added to the sacred story. The impressions received on this trip will be given by Rev. John Potts in the George st. Methodist church Thursday evening, Sept. 29, Admission 15c; do not fail to hear him.

—A street car went off the track yesterday, and blocked the line for 10 or 15 minutes. The accident did not occur, however, till most of the crowd was up from the fair.

VERY ENJOYABLE CONCERT

RENDERED BY THE MUSICIANS OF THE 42ND. HIGHLANDERS

Large and Appreciative Audience Present — Bag-Pipers Given a Grand Reception — Very Fine Military Band Creates Excellent Impression in Concert Program.

The big feature in connection with the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition, the concert given in the Hockey Rink by the band of the Forty-Second Highlanders, was one thoroughly appreciated by all lovers of music, and, judging from the applause with which each number was received, and the frequency of the encores, the audience was certainly made up of the people of Peterborough and vicinity who do love to hear in concert a crack regimental band such as the Black Watch. It was a large audience, the receipts of the evening being about $800.

The visiting band was escorted to the rink by the 57th regimental band, and it was a grand sight as the two organizations marched up George-st. with six stalwart pipers doing their very best. It was a sight such as to bring to mind the traditions of the regiment which was represented here for a few hours yesterday.

The programme rendered was one that gave the musicians opportunity to display their concert capabilities, and this they did in excellent manner. There are forty-eight men in the organization, and every part is very well balanced. The reeds are particularly strong, and are used to advantage in interpreting passages requiring nicety of expression, and tending to soften the harshness which is sometimes apparent with strong brass. Passages calling for sectional instrumentation were taken with an ease and symphony which emphasized the musicianship-merit of the band, and the ensemble was brilliant. There is the traditional military tone, and plenty of vigor. Though it is claimed by musicians that the Black Watch is hardly on a level with the Coldstreams as a concert band, the reception was equally enthusiastic, if not more so, the record of the regiment which they represented counting for a great deal, and it was a great night for the Scotch.

The opening number was a march, "Hail Europe," rendered in fine military style, and this was followed by an overture, "Egmong," by Beethoven. This is a piece introduced by an impressive sustained movement, the reeds being prominent. The second movement, an allegro, was effectively interpreted, and the finale brilliantly exected. The reminiscences from operas by Wagner was an arrangement by C. Godfrey, and in this the instrumentation was varied and well sustained throughout. It was one of the best numbers on the programme.

When the shriek of the bagpipes was heard at the rear of the hall there was a commotion, which developed into cheer on cheer when the six pipers marched up the side aisle playing the "Barren Rocks of Arron." It would hardly be straining a point to say that a large part of the audience went wild in enthusiasm over this part of the programme. The pipers marched back and forward in front of the platform, and gave two other numbers, "Miss Madeline Sinclair," and "Miss McLeod, of Pansy," a reel. There was something decidedly satisfying to the imagination in these men, with their waving busbies and red heckles, their gay plaids and fine costumes, their proud air and inspiring music—music to which brave fighting men have marched to battle. The pipers were indeed given a grand reception.

One of the numbers in which the musicians appeared at their best was in the Overture to William Tell, which was substituted for the number programmed, and a pleasing series of airs was the national fantasia "Under the British Flag," by Kappey. The introduction of vocal accompaniment in some of the passages met with great approval. A clarionet solo, "Les Alsacbiennes," by soloist Corporal Turbett, was excellently performed, and an encore resulted. The selection, "Robert Bruce," introducing several Scotch airs, caused a popular outburst. The second appearance of the pipers created another enthusiastic upheaval more marked than the first, because on this occasion there was the additional feature of an Argyleshire sword dance, by four of the pipers, and a sword dance and Highland Fling by Piper F. Thompson. The continued applause which succeeded these numbers was marked proof of their popularity.

The descriptive piece, "Smithy in the Wood," by Michaelis, was given with delightful effect, it being a musical representation of early morning in the forest, twittering of birds, five o'clock in the morning, the smith and family at prayers, and as a finale the smith at work. It was a number containing passages in which the soft music of the wood instruments was marked. A spirited two-step, "Mumblin Moss," with whistling and vocal accompaniment, and the regimental march, "Garb of Old Gaul," were given with a fine military vigor. When the strains of "The Maple Leaf" struck the ears of the audience during the National Fantasia, and again near the close, there was unanimous and prolonged hand-clapping. The National Anthem brought a delightful programme to a close.

An announcement was made during the evening that on October 20th, the band of the Grenadier Guards (England's oldest regiment), the finest and oldest military band in the worl, would visit Peterborough.

The Grenadier Guards band was selected to represent Great Britain at the World's Fair, St. Louis, being paid the unprecedented fee of $500,000 for five weeks' engagement, and will make a short tour afterwards. The number of musicians (60) greater than any band heard on tour in Canada, added to the magnificent skill and reputation, assure the fact that this will be truly the finest band music ever heard on this continent.

A SEPTEMBER WEDDING

WHEN STAMPS WERE NEW.

Trouble in Getting People to Stick Them on the Envelope.

"When postage stamps first came into use," said a veteran postal clerk, "the public didn't know how to handle them. You remember how, when tea and coffee first appeared among us, the people fried the tea leaves and the coffee berries and served them with salt and pepper? Well, the people treated sticky stamps as absurdly in 1854.

"Some folks would put the stamps inside their letters, out of sight. Here is the official notice that we issued to stop that practice."

The clerk took from the drawer an old bulletin that said:

"The stamps upon all letters and packages must be affixed on the outside thereof and above the address thereon."

He put back this bulletin and drew forth another one.

"People would pin the stamps on their letters instead of gumming them," he said, "and when they did gum them they would not do it right; hence this second bulletin," and he read:

"Persons posting letters should affix the requisite number of stamps previous to depositing them in the letter receivers, as when posted in a damp state the stamps are liable to rub off and thereby cause the letters to be treated as unpaid. Do not pin on the stamps.'

"Still," said the clerk, "the public didn't understand. Think of it—it didn't understand the simple matter of sticking a postage stamp on a letter. So we got out a third bulletin."

The third bulletin, in big, impatient letters, said:

"The simplest and most effectual method of causing stamps to adhere firmly is first to moisten well the outside of the stamps and afterward the gummed side slightly, taking care not to remove the gum."

The clerk said that a philatelist had offered him $12 apiece for these three queer bulletins.

CULINARY CONCEITS.

Before boiling milk or making any sauce with milk always rinse out the saucepan in cold water.

Lemon juice improves the flavor of scrambled eggs if a few drops are added while they are cooking.

Never use water for cooking in which potatoes or cucumbers have been boiled, as it has been found to be extremely injurious.

Orange juice with a little water forms an excellent substitute for milk in mixing tea cakes. A little more sugar should be used and not so much acid or cream of tartar.

When cooking turnips, cook them first for twenty minutes in boiling water to which a little baking soda has been added, then drain and cook in fresh water until tender. The flavor will be much improved.

Old Cuffs.

Wash out the starch from discarded colored cuffs. Sew a loop on one side and use as kitchen holders, hanging some near the stove, others by the table. Rip open the side of some, put in a layer of cotton, sew up, and you will have a flatiron holder that will hang up. Save the freshest to rip up for quilt pieces. Rip out the linen bosoms of white shirts, cut into squares, hem and use for baby's washcloth. As the skirts of colored shirts are usually good when the upper parts are worn out utilize them for the little folks' aprons. Cut the skirt off at the right length, allowing for a hem. Cut a large hand to slip under the arms of the child. Put straps across the shoulders, gather the skirt to the band, and as the apron has no front or back it will wear longer.—Housekeeper.

Sour Milk and Silver.

Here is a new use for sour milk: Put your silver into the milk when it is thick; let it stand for half an hour; take the pieces out and wash them in clear hot soapsuds; wipe dry, and you have clear, bright silver. It would pay a busy housekeeper who has to do her own polishing to buy two or three quarts and let it sour for the purpose.

That Kitchen Stool.

Don't forget to have a high stool in the kitchen and thus save yourself a great deal of unnecessary strain of back and limbs when ironing, washing dishes, cleaning silver, preparing vegetables, etc. Not only will your back be less tired, but your brain will grow less weary. Wholesome the back overturns the nerves.

Over the Border

By... ROBERT BARR,

Author of "Jennie Baxter, Journalist," Etc.

Copyright, 1903, by Frederick A. Stokes Co.

"Part of the way with you, I hope. Yes; I'm tired of waiting and so set out alone this morning, deviating from the main road and taking these lanes, the better to approach Rudby Hall without undue publicity."

"I see," said Armstrong thoughtfully. Then, as he fell into a meditation, there was silence between them for some time. The theme of his reflection was the accomplishment of the task which lay before him. Here seemed a heaven sent opportunity to win peacefully to Oxford and perhaps to return as far north as Carlisle.

Armstrong remembered that luck had often stood his friend, and the present encounter looked like another instance of it, so he resolved to journey with Wentworth as far south as Manchester, there to be guided by circumstances. Up to that point he need ask for no favor, for he had his own permit to lean upon. If the lad proved a true companion he might then venture to propose that they should keep together under protection of the pass for two.

"Do you move on to Oxford at once when you have seen this young lady?" asked Armstrong, breaking silence at last.

"Yes, and am willing to ride as hard as you like if you are pressed for time."

"Oh, I'm in no hurry. He's a churl who would not wait while a lover and his lass whispered, and I shall do aught that I can to forward your adventure if there is any obstacle."

"I thank you, but there is like to be no obstacle at this time of the day. I hope to have the good fortune to find her walking in the garden. This would simplify my quest."

"Are you forbidden the house, then?"

"In a measure I am. I have my enemies within the walls, but my good friends also. If I get a word with one of the latter, difficulties will dissolve."

Here the youth reined in his horse and sat for a moment anxiously scanning the landscape. A belt of tall trees bordered the lane, with thick undergrowth that seemed impenetrable to sight or movement. Over the tops of the bushes and between the trunks of the trees Armstrong gathered glimpses of a large mansion in the distance, extensive groups of chimneys being the most noticeable feature. Nearer was seen a carpet of green lawn, and beyond, the dappled glitter of the sunlight on a lake.

"Will you hold my horse?" asked the youth, almost in a whisper. "I must reconnoiter."

Armstrong sat silent, occasionally leaning over to stroke the neck of the steed he held in tether. He loved all animals, especially horses, and they reciprocated his affection. Suddenly the silence was shattered by a cry hoarse with rage.

"I have been watching your approach, perjured scoundrel! You shall not escape me this time."

"Sir, sir, I beseech you," came the entreating tones of Wentworth; "I cannot bear arms against you. Listen but a moment, sir."

"Draw, you dog, or die the death of one."

"Sir, I implore you; I cannot draw with you opposed. Sir, let me say a word— Oh!"

There was one clash of steel, then a brief cry of pain, and now silence again, all so quickly accomplished that first word and last were uttered in the time during which Armstrong leaped from saddle to earth. He searched hurriedly for the leafy tunnel through which Wentworth had passed, but before he found it the lad staggered into sight again, his left hand clutching his right, his right dragging the sword, his face pale as chalk.

"He has killed me!" he gasped.

"Scoundrel! You would spit now to on your foot if the wound were mortal. What is your assailant?"

"No matter for that. Help me inside."

"I shall first give the rogue a taste of his own surgery," cried Armstrong, drawing his blade.

But the other restrained his ardor, leaning heavily upon him.

"It is her father. Do not leave me; I faint. If—I—if I—I cannot direct you, take me down the lane, the highroad. My home—the house to the right."

The victim collapsed in a heap on the sward, reddening the grass with his blood.

Armstrong was no stranger to the rough art of the leech. He undid the doublet and flung it open; tore away the waistcoat and shirt, disclosing an ebbing gash.

"Well pierced," he muttered. "An inch to the right would have done the job. The poor chap parried, but not enough; the onslaught was too fierce and sudden. The old man's intention was good, but the deflection marred the thrust."

He stanched the wound with the torn shirt and tied a sash tightly round the body. Taking a leathern flask from his pouch, he forced some fluid between the gray lips, and Wentworth, with a long sigh, opened his eyes.

"It's nothing to boast of," said Armstrong carelessly. "I have ridden twenty miles worse mangled. Can you sit your horse if I put you on him?"

"O God! O God!" moaned the youth, near to weeping. "Fool that I was to risk all for the chance of a word!"

"Tut, there's no risk. You'll be right as Edinburgh in three weeks."

"Three weeks! Oh, my God! Would he had killed me outright!"

"What is troubling you? Anything in which I can help? I see you are no coward, and it is not alone the wound that hurts. Is it this Oxford journey?"

The prone invalid made no reply, but, groaning, turned his face to the turf.

"Harken!" cried Armstrong earnestly. "Although our acquaintance is of the shortest, I would dearly love to do you a service. I will go to Oxford for you and do there whatever you wish done."

The speaker reddened as he said this, and his conscience reproved him for thus making use of the other's infirmity, although he maintained stoutly to himself that he was honest in his proclamation.

The stricken youth was no less troubled in mind than in body, feeling himself a treacherous wretch, accidentally well punished; but he, too, inwardly braced his weakening purpose by the thought that he acted for the good of his country, an action tending toward the speedy return of peace.

"Help me to my horse," he pleaded, ignoring the proffer just made to him. "I must get home and learn whether this hurt is serious or not."

"It is far from serious, I tell you, and it means only a month's idleness. Lean you on me. There; make no exertion. I will lift you to your saddle."

The powerful Scot raised him as if he were a child and, with a woman's tenderness, set him gently on his horse. He got into his own seat so promptly that his steadying hand was on his comrade's shoulder before the swaying body could do more than threaten a fall.

"This way, you say?"

Wentworth nodded wearily, and the two set out slowly for the highroad. Despite their awkward going, the edifice they sought was soon in sight, situated in a park, to which a winding lane led from the main thoroughfare. The place seemed deserted, and as they neared it Wentworth showed a faint anxiety that he might reach his room unobserved.

"My sister must be told, of course, and a doctor brought, but I wish to avoid a rabble of gossiping servants if I can."

"I will carry you wherever you direct, and if we meet any one we must enjoin silence. Can you indicate the position of a private door through which we may enter."

"The most private door is the most public door. The front entrance will likely be deserted. I would walk but that we must hurry or be seen. Take me up the stair and to the second room on your right. That is always ready for me."

The Scot took the youth again in his arms and speedily laid him on his own bed. The jolting, despite the slow pace, had shifted the rude bandage, and the wound bled afresh. Armstrong, anxious for the safety of his burden, had not noticed that his own doublet was smeared with blood. With the better appliances now at hand, he did what was immediately necessary and revived the lad's ebbing strength with a second draft from the leathern bottle. A sound of singing came to them as he finished his ministrations.

"That is Frances, my sister," breathed Wentworth, with closed eyes. "Break it gently to her and say I am not dangerously hurt. She will know what to do."

CHAPTER XV.

ARMSTRONG stepped out into the hall, closing the door softly behind him. The melody was coming from the broad stairway and ceased as the singer seemed to pause on the landing. He remembered that landing as he came up with his burden. He stood hesitating, undecided whether to advance as far as the head of the stair or await the coming of the girl where he was. Then he heard her voice evidently calling through the open window:

"John, there are two saddled horses under the trees. See who has come."

Armstrong strode forward to the stair head.

"Your pardon, madam," he said. "One of the horses is mine; the other belongs to your brother. May I ask the man to look after them?"

The girl turned quickly, her dark eyes wide with alarm. Into the mind of the intruder, looking down upon her from his elevation, flashed the words of her brother: "It simply means you have not yet met the right woman. When you meet her, you will be in as great a daze as that in which I found you at the crossroads."

"She is magnificent," he said to himself. With her mass of black hair falling in wavy cascade over her shoulders, her midnight eyes appealing and dashed with a fear that swept the color from her cheeks, she looked a pallid goddess.

"My brother!" she cried at last. "What of him?" Then, noticing the blood on Armstrong's coat, she gave utterance to a startled exclamation, moving a step forward and checking herself. "Is he wounded? Has there been a battle? Where is he?"

"He is wounded, but not seriously. I brought him to his own room."

Without another word she sprang up the stair, past her interlocutor, and flew along the hall, disappearing into the invalid's chamber. Armstrong thought it best not to intrude at the moment of their meeting, so passed on down the stair and out to the horses, where he found an old servitor standing guard over them. Armstrong dispatched him for the doctor.

Then he led his own horse to a stall in the stables, took off saddle and bridle, then went to the well and removed the stains from his clothing as well as water would do it. Going toward the house he met the girl.

"My brother says you tell him the wound is not dangerous. Is that true?" she asked.

"Quite true. I've had a dozen worse myself," he replied, with encouraging exaggeration. "But he will have to lie still for a month or more."

"He says that is impossible, but I told him he shall do as the doctor orders, duty or no duty. I am going to send for Dr. Marsden, so pray pardon me."

"I have already sent for Dr. Marsden. I took that liberty, for it is better in such a case to lose no time."

The girl turned and walked to the house with him. He found the patient restless and irritable. The wan whiteness of his face had given place to rising fever. His eyes were unnaturally bright, and they followed Armstrong with a blanked look in them.

When Dr. Marsden arrived he went about his work in businesslike fashion. A physician of that day had ample experience with either gunshot or sword wounds, each being plentiful enough to arouse little curiosity respecting their origin. He brusquely turned Armstrong and the sister out of the room after having requisitioned what materials he needed, and the two stood together in anxious and somewhat embarrassed silence on the landing, within call if either were needed. The girl was the first to speak.

"I fear my brother's case is more dangerous than you would have me suppose," she said in tremulous voice.

"Not from the wound," he answered.

"From what, then?" she asked in surprise.

"I do not know. He has something on his mind. I saw that from the moment he was hurt. He is very brave, and this accident in itself would make little impression on him. My acquaintance with him is but a few hours old, yet I know he is a fearless youth. Are you aware of a mission that takes him to Oxford?"

"I have not the least knowledge of it. I heard no hint of his going, and he said nothing of his journey when we spoke together."

"He told me he had expected a comrade who had failed him. Cromwell himself gave him a pass for two. He said he was to see the brother of his sweetheart, who is with the king in Oxford."

"That is very likely. The two were great friends always, even when they took opposite sides in this deplorable contest which is rending our distracted country."

"There must be more than friendship in this journey; otherwise Cromwell would not have given him such a pass as he holds. If I can render service to him in Oxford I shall be glad to undertake his commission."

"Do you, then, go to Oxford?" asked the girl inscrutably, turning her disquiet and disquieting eyes full upon him.

"I had no such intention when I set out," stammered Armstrong, thinking of that for once his natural caution had forsaken him. "It matters little how far south I go, and I am willing to do an errand for a friend. I took him for a royalist at first and saw no danger in his purpose, but if he be a parliamentarian, then Oxford is a place to avoid."

"Did he not tell you he was a parliamentarian?" questioned the girl, now alarmed in her turn.

"No. You told me so."

"I? You must be mistaken, sir. I gave you no information about my brother."

"You said his friend in the king's forces had not thought the less of him because he took the other side."

"I am distraught with anxiety about him and gave but little heed to my words. I would have you remember only what my brother himself told you."

Their conversation was interrupted by the opening of the door and the reappearance of the doctor. The girl could not conceal her trepidation, for the nontechnical stranger's appearances had slight weight with her.

"Thomas is doing very well; very well indeed," said the old man. "You have no cause for alarm, not the slightest, if he can but be kept quiet for some days and rest where he is for a few weeks. You attended to him, sir, and I take it that you possess a smattering of our art."

"I have need of that knowledge, doctor," replied Armstrong, "for those who have done me the honor to run me through rarely had the consideration to make their attack within easy call of a surgeon."

Then, turning to the girl, the doctor said: "Your brother wishes to speak with you, and I have reluctantly given my consent. You will stay with him as short a time as may be, and I will be here to see that you do not overstep a reasonable limit. One word more. Do not argue with him or dispute anything he says, no matter how absurd it may seem. Agree to any proposal he makes even if you know it cannot be carried out. He is evidently disturbed about his duty. Soothe him—soothe him and concur. There is little use in telling a lad in his condition that duty must wait till wounds are healed, but he will recognize that fact when he is well again. Meanwhile humor him; humor him. Away, and I'll count the minutes till you are out again. I will find John and send him for a competent nurse."

Frances opened the door gently and met her brother's hungry eyes. She sat down beside him, taking his fevered hand between her cool palms.

"Oh, I'm a doomed man, a doomed man!" he groaned.

"Nonsense, Tom! The doctor quite agrees with the stranger that your wound is not dangerous."

"I was not thinking of the wound. That does not matter."

"What does, then, dear?"

"Sister, this morning at daylight I was to have been taken out and shot." The girl's hands tightened on his. "Cromwell himself reprieved me last night, but on conditions. The sentence still hangs over me, and now I'm helpless to avert it, and all through my own folly. Oh, I have been a goodless fool! With every incentive not to take risk I have walked blindly"—

"Yes, dear, yes. But tell me how I can aid you. The stranger says he will do anything you want done in Oxford, going there specially on your errand, and he looks like a man to be trusted."

"Trust him!" he cried impatiently, "Frances, Frances, it is against him I am going to Oxford! The man is a spy carrying a message to the king. He is interfering in a quarrel that should be no concern of his, and his life is already forfeit, as indeed is the case with my own. But the price of my life is the thwarting of him. The king will give him a commission to be taken to the Scottish nobles. It is that document I was to read from him, by force if necessary, by cunning if possible. I was to give him every aid to reach Oxford, but on the way back I was to gain possession of this commission and ride to Cromwell with it; then life and promotion were mine, and now I lie here helpless as a trussed fowl."

"A loathsome, treacherous task for a man to put upon the shoulders of a boy."

"But look you, Frances, 'tis but meeting treachery with treachery. Armstrong has no right in this contest, and his success means a new blaze of war, with the loss of thousands of innocent lives. It means the possible triumph of the kind who murdered our father and broke his pledged word to him and to you. And seeming trickery may be real mercy, as in this case it is, for if Cromwell cannot obtain the king's letter by stealthy means he will crush this Armstrong as ruthlessly as he would crush a gnat. By no possibility can this Scot ever see his hand again if he holds that fatal instrument, for the whole army is watching him. But once bereft of it, he is free to go as he pleases. This simpleton thinks he has deluded Cromwell and is blundering on through a fool's paradise that bristles with unseen swords. If I were his dearest friend I could do him no greater service than to pursue the document of doom he will carry when he turns his face north again."

"What do you wish me to do?" asked the girl in a low voice, her eyes staring into space, her hand trembling with apprehension at what she knew intuitively was to be required of her.

"Frances, dear, you once took a journey alone to London, to see our father. Again you went the same road, to aid him if you could, and failed, to our lasting grief, through the supineness of a thrice perjured monarch. Will you refuse to set out on a shorter expedition, not for my sake only, although the saving of my worthless life will be one effect of your success, but to overturn what is perhaps the final plot of our father's slayer, who has already deluged the land with blood?"

"I'll do it," she said quietly, rising, stooping over and kissing him.

"Frances," he said hurriedly, "remember you are protected by Cromwell's own pass, so have no fear. In case of need the army or any part of it must stand ready to aid you if you call upon it. Old John will ride behind and look after you. Although the pass mentions two only, it is so sweeping that they will doubtless take it to include a servant. Any subordinate will hesitate before he delays one carrying so broad a permit from Cromwell himself."

"Yes, yes. I shall meet with no difficulty, you may be sure. You have already talked too much, and the doctor will censure me. Goodby, Tom. Get speedily well, and that will be my reward, for I swear to you, by our father's memory, that my hand shall give into Cromwell's the king's parchment."

"Send Armstrong to me," were his parting words to her.

Armstrong entered the room shortly after Frances had left it.

NORTH NORFOLK VOIDED

Bribery By Agent Baker Puts Mr. Little Out.

Novel Way of Buying Votes—Made Presents to Electors—Chancellor Said of One Man, Who Received Ten Dollars That Five Would Have Been Accepted As Ramsby—The Chancellor's Summing Up.

Simcoe, Sept. 28.—In five hours yesterday afternoon Chancellor Boyd and Mr. Justice Teetzel uncovered enough bribery to void the election of Mr. Little, member for North Norfolk, who was elected by 190 majority at the bye-election of Jan 7 last year.

This was one of the three Norths that assisted in prolonging the existence of the Ross Government for a period.

Only seven cases were gone into. The first was dismissed. It was oath against oath, and Mr. Blackstock made no argument in behalf of his witness' credibility.

This is the record of bribery proven, and the respondent's counsel was unable to combat the testimony of the men who received the bribes or disprove the agency of the man who gave the money.

Charles Baker paid James Chambers $10 for his vote.

He paid Charles Waldie $10.

He paid Charles Chambers $5 for a Christmas present.

He offered Walter Grey $5.

He gave Alexander Schram $5, and offered $5 more if he would spoil his ballot.

He offered Alva Beemer $5, but Beemer refused. Baker and an unknown then got Beemer out of the way by sending him to Tillsonburg to drive cattle, and keeping him there till 5 o'clock on the day of the election. He drove no cattle.

The charge that failed was that Battenbury offered $10 to Peter Schram if he would spoil his ballot.

That of Beemer not being on the record was not allowed.

Some of the men who swore they got money were Liberals. One man got $10 when $5 would have been sufficient. There were 686 charges in the original petition and eleven others were added yesterday, making 696 in all.

The Chancellor's Judgment.

On Mr. Watson saying he could not combat the evidence, the Chancellor in voiding the seat said:

"We agree that upon the cases which have come before us there is at least one, there may be more, it is not necessary to consider minutely the details of the different cases in view of the statement that has been made by counsel—there is at least one case, the case of Alex. Schram, in which it appears from uncontradicted evidence that he recovered $5 in connection with the election. There is no manner of doubt of that. Baker is not here to contradict, and as against him and against the petitioner, we think it has proved that $5 was paid by him for a corrupt purpose, which was in short bribery. Now, it is conceded by Mr. Watson that he cannot successfully deny that Baker was a subagent, for which acts and conduct the candidate was responsible, although he did not appoint him and even though he did not know of actual misconduct. That no doubt is the law, that if there is an agent or series of agents who are acting in the interest of the candidate and his election is promoted by their acts, he cannot disavow their illegal acts while he takes the benefits of their legal acts. So by Schram it is proved that there was a corrupt act committed by Baker, who is admitted to be the agent of the candidate. That by law in old time was, and now is, enough to void the election. The law is that the seat shall be declared void unless it is saved by the cases mentioned in section 172, and these cases are where it appears that the corrupt practice was of such trifling nature or extent that the result could not have been effected or reasonably be supposed to be affected by it. We, as judges, have to be satisfied of that. Mr. Watson does not claim the benefit of section 172, he knowing much more about the case than we do. We have only heard certain portions of it. He knows exactly what can be, and what cannot be, proved, and he does not propose to claim the protection of section 172.

Not A Trifling Act.

"I think we as judges should be satisfied that the act was not of such trifling extent that the result could not reasonably be supposed to have been affected. The act is of a serious character. It is bribery. If it stood alone I think further evidence should be given, but certain evidence has been given in connection with the other charges, and while it does not exactly fit the particulars, still if it fails there are others which might be made particulars by an amendment showing that there was some one with him. The particulars state it was a man named Cunningham, but he was not called, according to one of the witnesses who knew Cunningham, it was not he but some one else. Baker was accompanied by an assistant in making a good many of these visits. We have heard from James Chambers of Baker going to him with one who was a stranger and giving him $5 on one occasion. We have from Charles Waldick that there was what is called a loan of $10 by this man called a stranger, but who nevertheless was accompanied by Chas. Baker and introduced by him. Then the evidence of Charles Chambers that he had another of these transactions of making Christmas presents, which was $5 given to him, although he states it was in connection with his vote. Still it is given by this man Baker. Then the Walter Grey who speaks of Baker making him an offer of $50, although that may not have been so serious as he puts it, still there was the speech on Baker's part when he was spoken to about buying votes that he was not buying them, only making presents.

Some One Had Money.

"Now, there was the other case of Alex. Schram, which, to my mind proves sufficient for the purposes of the enquiry now, that there was $5 paid to him by Baker. So that we have not only Baker, the agent, but we have one in company with Baker whose name we do not know, but who was a man evidently possessed of money which he spent freely. One would think from Baker's condition that he was a rich man, who was able to spend this out of his own pocket on account of political zeal. But he was accompanied by this man who had the money, and money was, I should judge, lavishly spent. One man got $10 where I have no doubt he could have been bought for $5. Looking at what we have heard and what Mr. Watson states that he cannot claim the benefit of section 172, knowing the case as he does. I think we can say that we may reasonably suppose that the election has been effected by these transactions. That being so, the result is void with the effect that such costs, unless you agree about the costs, such costs as are occasioned by this action, will be borne by the respondent, no costs of witnesses on charges not dealt with being allowed."

Mr. Blackstock asked for the dismissal of the petition, which Mr. Watson agreed to, saying that the evidence did not warrant pursuing the personal charges against Dr. Snider.

The English Party Whip.

Reverting to the duties of a whip and patronage secretary, it is an astonishing fact that gentlemen of birth and social position can be found to fill the post. The junior whips' duties are not only onerous, but irksome. They sit or stand in the outer lobby of the house from 3:30 to 12:30 at night, and they ask every member who passes where he is going, whether he is paired and when he will be back. If he is not paired, they have either to find a pair for him or to prevent him from passing out by coaxing or threats, the former for preference. When their party are in, these gentlemen have to attend to their office from 12 to 3. Their hours of duty are, therefore, from 11 a. m. to 12 p. m., or thirteen hours, with intervals for lunch, and this they do for £1,000 a year. When their party is out, they do it, minus their office work, for nothing.

In addition to keeping an eye on his juniors, the chief whip, who has £2,000 a year, deals with the members on their more touchy side. It is he who practically distributes ribbons and titles and sees that cards of invitation are sent to this man and that; that no one is given undue preference, a delicate duty which requires much tact and skill.—London Standard.

When Visiting Is Pleasure.

After all is said and done, visiting friends must always be the most delicate of pleasures. Of all forms of social enjoyment, a well chosen house party is perhaps the most complete and satisfactory. It is only during such short vacations (and on board ship) that the galling harness of every day routine drops completely from one's weary shoulders; it is there only that we escape entirely from the myriad little caresand worries that lie in wait for us outside. On looking back many of us will be surprised to find how most of our truest friendships date from the occasion offered by a visit. One may go on meeting people for a decade at formal entertainments, and at the end of that time know less of their real selves than is revealed by one short "weekend" passed together under a congenial roof—especially if it be a home where the welcome is sincere and the liberty is complete, and where the host and hostess have taken the trouble to sleep from time to time in their guest chambers.—Eliot Gregory in Century.

Your Learning.

Wear your learning, like your watch, in a private pocket and do not pull it out and strike it merely to show that you have one. If you are asked what o'clock it is, tell it, but do not proclaim it hourly and unasked like a watchman.

His Malady.

Tom—She's a professional nurse, I believe. Jess—Not at all. What gave you that idea? Tom—She remarked that she sat up last night with a sick man. Jess—Love sick, that was all. It was that fiance of hers.—Exchange.

By Himself.

Friend—I didn't know you painted. Host—I don't. Friend—But your portrait says, "Thomas Newrich—by himself." Host—Well, ain't I by myself? There ain't nobody else about.

He who can conceal his joys is greater than he who can hide his griefs.—Lavater.

DEATH DUE TO ACCIDENT.

Insurance Manager Hamilton of London Was Trying to Extract Cartridge From Revolver When Shot.

London, Sept. 28.—Coroner MacLaren made further inquiries concerning the shooting of George R. Hamilton, district manager of the Imperial Life Insurance Company at London, and it is now evident that the first suspicions that the unfortunate man had taken his own life deliberately were not true.

The doctor removed the bullet from Hamilton's body and discovered that, if the shot had been fired with suicidal intent, then Hamilton had held the revolver in a position not only unlikely but almost impossible in order to inflict the wound. The bullet had entered to the extreme left of the body, just at or over the heart, and had taken a diagonal course, lodging some inches beneath the right shoulder. Thus it had taken a slanting course almost directly across the body.

It has also been made clear that the revolver with which the fatal wound was inflicted was not the property of Hamilton. It came into his possession through a loan of money which he made to a friend, Rev. J. Dagg Scott, one of the agents of his company. Hamilton objected to receiving the revolver. The weapon was of double-action.

Was Extracting the Bullets.

The police now believe that Hamilton was endeavoring to extract the bullets when the revolver was discharged. His stenographer, Miss Wright, who last saw Hamilton, says he remarked to her that he thought he would remove the bullets and he was handling the revolver when she left for the day.

T. Bradshaw, secretary of the Imperial Life Insurance Company, arrived in the city yesterday morning, together with William Hamilton, formerly of London, a brother of the deceased, and also prominently connected with the company, and C. J. Burchard, brother-in-law of deceased. Mr. Bradshaw made this statement: "The late Mr. Hamilton had been with our company for six years and during the whole of that time his duties have been performed to our entire satisfaction and his reports have always been sent in promptly. To our knowledge there is not a single thing that requires explanation, or that is out of order. I can say this unhesitatingly."

The deceased was born in Hibbert Township, Perth. When 10 years of age he, in company with A. F. MacLaren, M.P., of Stratford, went to Colorado, where he remained for four or five years. On his return he lived in Winnipeg for probably two years. Then he removed to Orillia and later to Toronto, coming thence to this city some four and a half years ago.

Martin Fined Ten Dollars.

Toronto, Sept. 28.—The police court room was filled yesterday when Magistrate Denison called the names of Alexander and Ethel Martin. The formal proceedings only lasted a few moments. The man stood up in the dock and the woman was brought in. The charge of murdering their infant on Aug. 3 last was read to them. T. C. Robinette, K.C., on behalf of the man, entered a plea of not guilty. The woman, who was not defended by counsel, said nothing. They were remanded for a week. Both parties have been identified by several people.

Kenneth's English.

Kenneth had a remarkable mastery of English. This story shows how he strengthened his knowledge of our difficult tongue. Speaking at Concord, Mass., Kenneth wished to express the figure of the Austrian eagle reading the young freedom of Hungary. The word escaped him. Stopping for a moment in the full flight of eloquence, he asked a matter of fact American who sat near him, "What you say when man tear his coat?" "Hole," was the reply. That word did not satisfy him, and Ralph Waldo Emerson, who had overheard the question, whispered "rent," with poetic sympathy for euphony, and the stately sweep of the sentence was completed. He learned the language after his arrest in 1837, when he was sentenced in 1838 to three years' imprisonment, during a part of which he was cut off from all communication with his friends and was denied the use of pen and ink and even of books. In the second year he was allowed to read, but as all political books were interdicted he selected an English grammar, Walker's pronouncing dictionary and Shakespeare. Without knowing a single word he began to read "The Tempest." He was engaged for a fortnight in getting through the first page.

Why Japan Has No Fence Posts.

In Japan when a farmer permits a telegraph or telephone pole to be erected on his land he has made a great concession to modern reform. Only the exceedingly rich have fences around their farms in Japan, not because of the cost of the fence, but because of the value of the square inches the posts and pickets would consume. If a border is desired around a field it is customary to plant mulberry trees. The total area of ground in Japan thus devoted to the silkworm tree, which otherwise would be taken up with fences, amounts to about 190,000 acres. This has no reference to the mulberry farms and groves, the area for which is over three times as much. The fact that a Japanese farmer is forced to figure on the amount of ground a fence post would occupy and the interesting fact that the government in its statistical enumerations has had the areas covered by individual mulberry trees on farm boundaries carefully computed demonstrates the great value of arable land.

A Handwriting Expert on Poe.

In an odd way a Baltimore journalist has settled for himself the still disputed question of Edgar Allan Poe's personal character and habits. Having several autograph letters of Poe's, letters written in the youth, the manhood and the later life of the unhappy poet, he cut off their signatures and submitted them for analysis to a handwriting expert.

The expert reported on them as follows: "These letters were written at different periods in the life of the same person. They indicate a temperament at once imaginative and methodical, firm nerves, great courage and aesthetic tastes. You ask if they point to drunkenness or alcoholism. I reply that most decidedly they do not."

Decidedly Cool.

A friend of the late Bishop Huntington was spending a Sunday in Edinburgh and followed the crowd to the church of a celebrated preacher. At the close of the service he said to the clergyman, "That was a remarkably fine sermon." The minister, puffed up with pride, said, "Thank you, thank you." "But," said the Boston man, "I have heard it before; it is one of Bishop Huntington's sermons." "Ah, yes, I dare say, to be sure, but Huntington could never have got it off as I did." The anecdote is related by the Congregationalist, whose only comment is that "for consistent and unblushing plagiarism this beats the record."

Killing a Fashion.

The muff reached its highest point in the reign of Louis XV. Then fashion declared for a cloth muff instead of fur, and the furriers made a great uproar. They petitioned the pope to excommunicate the wearer of a cloth muff, but to no purpose. Finally some ingenious merchant bribed the headsman to carry a cloth muff on execution day. The women shrank from such association, and the fur won the day.

Refreshments In Church.

Family pews were introduced at the beginning of the seventeenth century. Some of these had a table and fireplace, also curtains and window blinds so as to secure the utmost privacy. This led to abuses. In some of the closed pews card playing was not uncommon, and the tedium of a long service was sometimes relieved by light refreshment.—Reliquary.

All For the Best.

"Why do the roses fade slowly, away?" she inquired poetically.

"Well," replied the bald-headed young man, "when you think it over it's all for the best. It's more comfortable to have them fade slowly away than to go off all of a sudden, like a torpedo."

Merely Wished to Know.

"Miss Penny," he said, "there is something I have for some time wished to ask you."

"Oh," she gasped, "I'm so glad—that is, I—I mean, is it anything personal?"

TORONTO LIVE STOCK.

Receipts of live stock at the City Market were 71 carloads, composed of 1981 cattle, 511 hogs, 1207 sheep and lambs, 98 calves and 25 horses.

There was little or nothing doing in shipping cattle, only one car-right load being offered, and there was no one who seemed to want them, altho offered at less than $4.15 per cwt. The drover calling the load obtained space for a friend, and shipped them himself. Several export bully sold at $3.75 to $4.20 per cwt.

The bulk of the butchers' cattle on sale was of common to medium quality; only a limited number could be classed as good to choice. One picked lot of six, weighing 1180 lbs. each, were sold by McDonald & Maybee at $4.20 per cwt., which was the highest price reached. This firm also reported another lot of 19, weighing 1275 lbs. each, at $4.20 per cwt. George Rowntree reported having paid $4.25 for good steer cow for the Harris Abattoir Company. Picked butchers' sold at $4.05 to $4.10; loads of good at $3.80 to $4; medium at $3.60 to $3.75; common at $3 to $3.35, and inferior, rough, at $2.50 to $2.75 per cwt.

There is a good demand for chicken-broody queens, weighing from 900 to 1000 lbs. each. These would be worth from $3.75 to about $4 per cwt. The bulk of feeders offered to-day were mixed, rough, unsorted-lots lacking in quality. The undermade class of the feeding of cattle wants to waste 1100 lbs. on; that is, if he can get better quality. Trade for these was dull, and some of them were reported as being carried over at the close of the market. Feeders weighing from 800 to 1000 lbs. sold at $3.30 to $3.60 per cwt. Stockers, 600 to 700 lbs. each, sold at from $2.90 to $3 per cwt.; calves sold at $2.25 to $2.50 per cwt. Picked lambs sold all the way from $3.80 to $3.87½ per cwt.

About 40 milch cows and springers, generally of medium to good, but few choice, sold to farmers' buyers from $30 to $50 each. The bulk sold at $35 to $45 each, with a few as high as $50 to $55 each. Prices ranged from $20 to $25 each.

About 200 veal calves sold at unchanged quotations, the market ruling steady to firm at $3.50 to $3.75 per cwt.; something extra choice would be worth $3.80 per cwt.

fresh air is made to pass through small flues, over the top of the oven, just back of the hot fire box. Thus heated, it enters the oven and by a direct current of air the impurities and cooking odors are carried up the chimney.

Mrs. H. Trollope, 820 Water st., Peterboro Que., states:—"I have used two boxes of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills and found them an excellent medicine. I had severe pains across the back which came from my kidneys being out of order, and after using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills for a time I began to feel a wonderful improvement in my health.

"I have no more pains in my back now and am feeling as well as ever I did. Consequently, I am glad of an opportunity to recommend Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills."

The Newest Card Cases

One of the latest decrees of fashion is that the card case shall match in color the costume of milady. These can be easily and quickly made from velvet leather, and when lined with silk of the same or a contrasting shade, they look very pretty. The Review Stationery Department has a full line of velvet leather in the popular shades of browns, green, gray and red. The leather for the cases costs but a trifle, and it may have a design fashioned upon it, or a pretty silver initial fastened on to make it more elaborate.—The Review Stationery Department. 2d

REVIEW OF THE MARKETS

The following review of today's market was received by Messrs. W. F. Bowar & Co., 'phone 416:—

New York, Sept. 28—Although the market seemed to have gone ahead too fast at opening, and was checked by profit taking in first hour, tone was still very strong. Traders sold moderately but reported stocks as well taken. U. S. Steel made another new high record for the year this morning, viz., 71 1-4 for the preferred, and the street is apparently as bullish as ever on it. Reading was another strong stock, gaining a point from low price; the coal stocks seemed to be strongest on board, but with the exception of Reading, they did not do much. Metropolitan St. Ry. and Metropolitan securities were quite active and strong in the first hour and a half, but lost all the gain by twelve o'clock. The market seemed to get very dull in spots and quite active in others, giving the idea that the big people were unloading in one quarter and holding the market up by pointing some other stock a quarter or a point while the unloading was going on.

Grain was quite erratic, gaining a cent from low, and then losing it, but held strong. Liverpool closed 1-2 higher, with corn unchanged.

RECORD-BREAKING CROWD AT INDUSTRIAL EXHIBITION

durable rigs of the day. Mr. Taylor also handles every class of harness, which is exceptionally well made and beautifully mounted. He will be pleased to see all visitors at the big fair either at his tent on the grounds or at his establishment on George street, which contains everything in the line of high class goods in carriages, sewing machines, harness, blankets, robes, etc.

Mr. C. Wilhelmy's Good Display

Mr. C. Wilhelmy, 337 George street, had an interesting display in the main building, which was the centre of a large crowd. Many were interested in O'Donnell's steam washing machine for which Mr. Wilhelmy is the sole agent. It is the only machine made which will wash clothes clean without rubbing and yet in so simple in construction that a child can work it. In brief, it saves the clothes, time, labor, soap, fuel and money. It is certainly something new and has come to stay. Mr. Wilhelmy made a number of sales. He also handles the Chamberlain metal weather strip which, when applied, becomes part of the house. It never loses its effectiveness and is the best and cheapest means to make window sash weather tight. For general use in buildings its excellence and value lie in the fact that it will keep out the cold, save fuel and is invisible and indestructible. The strip can easily be applied to new or old windows and will last a life time. It is reasonable in price and has never failed to give the greatest satisfaction wherever used. It is a great protection from the wind, cold and rain and the rattling of windows. Mr. Wilhelmy also shows the famous "Star" stove, which is adapted for either hard or soft coal. It is the only gasoline stove made, with a pipe at the back for the escape of gas. Be sure and see it at the Fair or Mr. Wilhelmy's place of business, 337 George street.

Fitzgerald's Fine Carriages

In the manufacturers' tent on the grounds, which, and comprising the largest display in the carriage line is the exhibit of Fitzgerald & Co., corner of Water and Brock streets. The showing in carriages is the best ever made by the firm and consists of twelve rigs altogether. There are eight top buggies, four being equipped with rubber tires. There is in addition a pneumatic tire runabout, a very attractive conveyance—and a stanhope, rubber tired. Messrs. Fitzgerald & Co. have also a light running, excellently built, general purpose farm wagon in the tent which shows that the firm can build heavy rigs equally as well as light ones. Now a word or two as to the conveyances turned out by Fitzgerald & Co., who have been established in Peterborough thirty-five years. In that time they have built up a constantly increasing trade, which extends from one end of the Midland district to the other. All the goods turned out are hand made and the purchaser can visit their shops, see the buggies in course of construction and know just exactly what he is getting.

Every rig is guaranteed, while the best of seasoned timber, leather and other material enters into their make up. Mr. Fitzgerald is not afraid to place his rigs in the market in competition with any and believes that their many points of excellence will be appreciated in more ways than one—particularly in wearing quality. For style and design they are unique while their easy riding qualities appeal to all. In their show rooms on Brock st. Fitzgerald & Co. have a much larger display of carriages than at the grounds. They will be pleased to have off exhibition visitors call. They also turn out a very superior class of artistically finished and elegantly upholstered cutters and are making preparations for a big season's trade in this line. Fitzgerald & Co. are a local concern. Their rigs, whether on wheels or runners, are all made and sold on merit, and as a local industry, it has held its own year after year until now it is recognized as one of the most progressive, reliable establishments, whose products can be depended upon every time. Messrs. Fitzgerald & Co. made a number of good sales at the fair, and are well pleased with the exhibition and its results.

The Peterboro Cement Roofing Co

A neat exhibit, and one that drew favorable comment, was that of the Peterborough Cement Roofing Company, in the shape of a small cottage in miniature, the roof covered with a sample of the products of the Company's works. As is well known, the old time shingle is passing away, and the call for something more permanent and lasting is now very great. This want the products of the Company fill. Their roofing is a thoroughly reliable thing, and is finding great favor with builders and contractors. The Company's head office is at Peterborough, and the exhibit, which is being shown at all the local fairs and extensively advertised, is a good object lesson in the lines indicated. Among the claims made for the roofing are the following, all of which can be thoroughly substantiated:—1st, It is absolutely fireproof. 2nd, It does not contract or expand with the heat or cold. 3rd, It can be used on a flat or pitched roof. 4th, It is pliable and will not crack with expansion or contraction of the roof. 5th, It has no equal for covering and repairing leaking and old tin roofs. 7th, It has a smooth, even surface, and any defect can be detected and repaired with very little trouble.

Brevities.

—Grafton & Co. were giving out handsome note books at the fair yesterday.

—The Ladies' Auxiliary of the Y.M.C.A. will meet to-morrow afternoon, September 29th, at 3.30 sharp.

—The farmers from away back were with us yesterday, and country cousins were numerous on the streets.

—Seven street cars were waiting at the corner of George and Brock sts. last night when the Black Watch Band Concert was over.

—Mr. W. H. Simpson, proprietor of the Simpson House, Lindsay, and manager of the Lindsay baseball team, took in the fair yesterday.

—The agent for the Sylvester Manufacturing Co., of Lindsay, had a busy time yesterday, distributing pocket mirrors and other advertising matter at the fair.

—The street car service yesterday was very good, considering the size of the crowd and the number of cars that were running. Mr. Learmouth deserves great credit for his energetic efforts.

—The police have a pair of baby's boots at the police station, picked up on George street last night. Being a shade too small for any member of the force, the Chief would like to find an owner for them.

—Visitors to the Framery will do well to remember that the Framery is the name of Peterborough's new and only store devoted entirely to picture framing and artists' supplies. 429 George street.—2d.

—A gentleman who lives near the exhibition grounds had a number of choice melons stolen from his garden on Sunday night. If the parties who committed the theft had visited the garden the following evening they would have met with a pretty warm reception.

—The Chief wants an owner, also an explanation, in regard to a bay mare and a toy buggy, with red gear, found at large on the road near Nassau this morning. A farmer going out early for the cows, found the horse and vehicle deserted. Word was sent in to the police, who are looking for an owner.

—The police have gathered in a youthful band of burglars. It appears that on Saturday night the premises of the Peterborough Hardware Co. were broken into, and a small sum of money, about $4, taken from the till. The Company decided to keep on the lookout, and last night Joseph Hobbins and Fred. Hubble were found in the store. These two youths, in company with Herbert Cooney, appeared in Police Court this morning. Hobbins and Hubble are charged with stealing $4 from the Company, while Hobbins and Cooney are charged with breaking into the store last night.

GREAT INTEREST IN CORDAGE DISPLAY

AN EXCELLENT AND ARTISTIC EXHIBIT AT THE FAIR.

Binder Twine of all Grades and Qualities — Something About the Goods of the Cordage Co.

A display, that won wide attention and was of special interest to farmers, stockmen and others at the exhibition, was the excellent and artistic exhibit of the Canadian Cordage and Manufacturing Company, Limited.

It consisted of binder twine of all grades and qualities, and constructed in pyramidical form, the design being particularly effective and striking. Surrounding the twine were neatly arranged bunches of lath yarn, manila and sisal rope, all displayed to the best advantage and arresting the eye of the passers-by. The showing also comprised manila hemp, which is largely used by the Company in the manufacture of their Royal Manila binder twine—conceded by all to be the best twine in the world. The splendid exhibit was designed by Mr. A. L. Sykes, the aggressive general manager of the Company, and the decoration of flags gave a pleasing touch to the display. The exhibit here was an exact duplicate of the magnificent one made at the National Exhibition in Toronto. The foregoing but gives the reader some conception of the splendid and effective manner in which it was arranged. It is not easy to adequately describe the nature of such an imposing exhibit, or to properly set forth the merits of the particular lines of goods. The Canadian Cordage and Manufacturing Company's products have been speaking for themselves in all parts of Canada and the United States. The Company's travellers now cover every territory, and in both the Dominion and the States has a wide market been found for the output of the Company. The Cordage Company, as it is popularly known, is an industry in which Peterborough takes just pride, and in which over 200 hands find constant employment. The Company's plant is one of the most complete and up-to-date cordage factories on the continent. It's capacity, which has always been taxed to the utmost, is ten tons of binder twine per day, eight tons of rope and two and a half tons of lath yarn. The greatest efficiency is obtained by combining the business of marketing binder twine, rope and cordage, and the men who are at the head of the respective departments, are experts, having had years of practical experience in the largest cordage factories in the world.

The market for cordage of every kind is growing rapidly in Canada from year to year, owing to the developing pulp-making, ranching, farming and shipping interests, and the company can compete on equal terms with manufacturers across the border in that class of twine, which enters the United States ports free of duty.

The machinery in the factory is the latest extant, and the materials entering into the manufacture of the twine and rope are the very best, thus ensuring a product of the highest quality.

During the past year about 1,500 tons of standard twine were sold in the United States by the Canadian Cordage and Manufacturing Company at a profitable price. The shareholders are evidently satisfied with the progress that has been made, and the still brighter prospects for the future. Stock in the Company is regarded as a safe and paying investment. The men back of the organization are all solid, progressive and public spirited citizens of the town and surrrounding district.

Visitors to the town are invited to call at this large and flourishing establishment and inspect the different departments, see how the high grade products are turned out, witness the labor saving devices of the company, and examine the quality of the sisal and manila cord, lath yarn, binder twine, tarred rope, etc.

Jobbers all over Canada handle these goods which are sold on merit, and are superior productions in every way. The best evidence of their excellence is that, wherever sold, the demand is increasing and word comes from many quarters every week, bearing testimony to the genuine worth of the Canadian Cordage and Manufacturing Company's products.

The capital stock of the Company is $800,000, which is divided into 32,000 shares of $25 each.

The officers are: Adam Hall, President; John Lang, M.P., and W. H. Meldrum, Vice-Presidents; R. M. Glover, Secretary; Jas. S. Latimer, and J. A. Bennett, directors.

MINSTRELS ORGANIZED

Two First Class Shows Are to be Held — Officers and Committees.

At a meeting held on Monday night several local men took the first step towards arranging two first class minstrel shows, the date of which will be announced later. The meeting was held in Mr. A. L. Davis' office and was a most enthusiastic one. It was the opinion of those present that there is plenty of material in town to form a strong chorus, and there is also plenty of talent for the specialities. Two entertainments will be given in the market hall, which will be fitted up for the occasion. The company will practise in the rooms adjoining the opera house, and the first rehearsal will take place in two weeks' time. The practices will be held on Monday evenings. Everything connected with the entertainments will be up-to-date.

The following committees were appointed, the first named in each case being the chairman:

Musical—Messrs. J. Crane, F. A. Lount, A. Scott, J. Legg, R. Gliddon, R. N. Jolliffe.

Hall and Decorating—Messrs. R. M. Roy, H. Neill, F. H. Dobbin.

Specialities—Messrs. McEwan, Jas. Halpany.

Executive—Messrs. F. H. Dobbin, R. E. Layfield, R. H. Shepperd, A. L. Davis, A. Elliott.

Entertainment—C. N. Brown, H. Neil, T. Bradburn, Smallpiece.

Mr. T. Crane will be the conductor, which is a sufficient guarantee that the music rendered will be first class in every respect.

RUGBY.

The local team will practise this evening at the exhibition grounds at 8 o'clock. Captain Crowley wants every man who possibly can to turn out. The lights will be placed in the grounds before this evening, and the team will be able to have a good practice in the open air.

The Argonauts are not feeling any too confident of winning Saturday's game, judging by the following despatch from Toronto: Ex-Manager Fred Thompson took a very active interest in the Argo practice last night. There was a scarcity of men or material out, but Mr Thompson put what men did turn out in uniform through some warm work. Tremmer was the only member of last year's senior team out, and the outlook for a good senior team is decidedly gloomy. Eric Humber who will in all probability captain the team, is absent in the west and will not be back for two weeks at least, and the chances are that he will be away longer than that. There is a remarkable dearth of backs. "Pussy" Darling says that he will not be out, and now that Keith Belfour has gone back to the Torontos the only man left who has any chance is Smith, and he has not played for some years. No attempt has yet been made to get in any signal work. With a game scheduled for Saturday with a strong team like the Peterboroughs the outlook is the reverse of bright.

'Tis sad to think of this great truth,
"There are no birds in last year's nest."
But oh, the gladness when one finds
A quarter in his last year's vest.

Hunt up last year's waistcoat, find the quarter, attend next Saturday's game, and you will be handed out the best 25 cents' worth of rugby you have ever had.

The expenses of a team in the senior series are very heavy, so the people of Peterborough should do their best to turn out in large numbers on Saturday. The local team is a good one and deserves good support. The attendance should surpass all previous records.

The game on Saturday with the Argonauts is causing considerable excitement among local rugby enthusiasts. It certainly will be a corker. The locals must win this game to have much of a chance for the championship, so they are going into the game with the determination to win. The line-up is not definitely known yet, but Ford will appear at fullback, and Simpson, Morgan and Shaw on the half line. Who will play quarter is not yet decided on. Chris Graham is out of the game, so another quarter back will have to be selected before Saturday. The make-up of the wing line will be a hard matter to decide, but at all events a very strong line will be found in the game.

HOCKEY.

The question among local lovers of the great winter game seems to be, "Are we going to have a team this winter?" It is a question very hard to answer just at present. Those who pretend to be "in the know" shake their heads and look wise, as much as to say "you will see something doing before long." Surely such a good hockey town as Peterborough will have some kind of team on skates when the season opens.

BASEBALL.

The Young Quakers will be represented by the following team in their game at Bobcaygeon tomorrow with the Kawartha League team of that town, and will try to land another victory:—Wilson c, McCorry p, Conroy 1b, Duncan 2b, Gilman ss, McMillan 3b, Distin rf, Kendry cf, Curtis lf.

THE OLD FOLKS AT HOME
Are Never Without Peruna in the House for Catarrhal Diseases.

W. D. WATSON, Clovis, Fresno County, Cal., writes:

"God bless you for what you have done for me. The rheumatism has all disappeared, and to-day all exclaim, 'How well you look!' I tell them yes, and I owe it all to Dr. Hartman for his good advice to me. To-day finds me as free from pain as I ever was. The rainy season has set in here, but the change hasn't affected me as it used to. I am very thankful that I have found out that you can and will help the suffering ones that will follow your advice. Several have asked me what cured me, and I tell them. They get the medicine then. We keep Peruna in the house. My daughter has two sons, and they keep well and go to school, and they take the medicine every day.

"My wife was troubled with a pain in her side for years. Now she is taking your medicine and is real smart. I will do all I can for you and for those who need your advice."

Mr. Jno. O. Atkinson, Independence, Mo., Box 373, writes:

"Your remedies do all that you claim for them, and even more. Catarrh cannot exist where Peruna is taken according to directions. Peruna completely cured my wife and I of catarrhal troubles of twenty-five years standing. In my rounds as a traveling man I am a walking advertisement of Peruna."

Mrs. Alla Schwandt, Sanborn, Minn., writes:

"I have been troubled with rheumatism and catarrh for twenty-five years. Could not sleep day or night. After having used Peruna I can sleep and nothing bothers me now. If I ever am affected with any kind of sickness Peruna will be the medicine I shall use. My son was cured of catarrh of the larynx by Peruna."—Mrs. Alla Schwandt.

Why Old People are Especially Liable to Systemic Catarrh.

When old age comes on, catarrhal diseases come also. Systemic catarrh is almost universal in old people.

This explains why Peruna has become so indispensable to old people. Peruna is their safeguard. Peruna is the only remedy yet devised that meets these cases exactly.

Such cases cannot be treated locally; nothing but an effective systemic remedy could cure them. This is exactly what Peruna is.

If you do not receive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

Address Dr. Hartman, President of The Hartman Sanitarium, Columbus, O.

FRUIT TRANSPORTATION REDUCED.

As a Result of the Evidence Given Before the Royal Commission.

It will be announced in the October issue of the Horticulturist, that as a result of the evidence given recently before the Railway Commission, by representatives of the fruit interests, the Railway Company have voluntarily made some material concessions. A reduction has been made in the rate of mixed car lots of fruit, from the principal shipping districts to the larger centres of distribution, such as Toronto, Montreal, Ottawa, Quebec and Winnipeg. A special rate for one half car lots, of 10,000 lbs. or over has also been made. In addition the flat rate for icing cars, destined for Manitoba, has been abolished, and hereafter shippers will only be charged for the actual amount of ice supplied.

While these concessions are by no means all that the fruit interests asked for, they are, however, considered to be a considerable measure of relief to a very serious situation.

Price of Apples.—As a result of reports received from all parts of the Province, the Canadian Horticulturist will announce in its October issue that the apple crop of the Province this year is not nearly as large as last, and that the same is true throughout the United States generally. There is little reason for the bearish reports of buyers concerning the large crops. While there is a large amount of poor fruit throughout Ontario, the general quality is good, and growers should realize better prices than are being offered. For No. 1 and No. 2, which is good, growers should not accept less than 75 cents to $1.00 per barrel on the tree, where considerable quantities of fruit can be given the buyer. Reports received by the Horticulturalist show that buyers are offering from 25 to 75 cents per barrel for fruit.

The Pick of the Stylish Fabrics

Here are the answers (hundreds of them), to that burning question of the hour, "What shall we make our Fall Suits of?"

The major part of the stylish costumes this fall are made of "man goods," the rough-and-ready, warm and comfortable tweeds and homespuns, hard twisted worsteds, full of half-hid stripes and checks.

As usual you will expect the GOLDEN LION to have the pick of the stylish fabrics, and so we have.

This list is a partial indication of the completeness of our stocks—the further proof is the seeing them at our store:

ZIBELINE FLAKE TWEED SUITINGS, very special cloth, 52 in. wide, per yard 40c

FANCY TWEEDS and Hopsackings, 48 in. wide, all the new colorings and designs, special value at 50c

LIGHT AND DARK GREY TWEED Mixtures, proper weight for shirt waist suits, 48 in. wide, per yard 75c

ALL WOOL FANCY HOPSACKING, polka dot effect, in green, brown, navy, cardinal and pearl grey, per yard 90c

ALL-WOOL SCOTCH TWEED SUITINGS, just opened up this week, 54 in. wide, very stylish material, worth regular $1.50, for $1.00

JAPANESE SUFFERED GREATLY

Their Losses at Port Arthur Amounted to 7000.

THEY HAVE 45,000 WOUNDED

The Activities of Wednesday Consisted Largely of Skirmishes—There may not be a Big Battle at Mukden after all—More Torpedoes for Russians

London, Sept. 29.—Outpost skirmishes constitute the sum total of disclosed activities of the Liao and Taitse Rivers, in Manchuria. Gen. Kuropatkin is reported to be keeping in contact with the entire Japanese front. Russian scouts report that the main Japanese force is centred in the vicinity of the Yentai Mines. Fresh troops and convalescents are arriving at Mukden in large numbers. The railway north from Mukden is proving of much value to Gen. Kuropatkin in bringing supplies for his army, as well as reinforcements. Chinese arriving at Che Foo report that Japanese attacks on Port Arthur have resulted in 7,000 losses to the assailing forces, while the Russians suffered comparatively little.

St. Petersburg, Sept. 29.—A despatch from Gen. Kuropatkin, dated yesterday afternoon announces that numerous skirmishes have occurred along most parts of the Russian front. The Japanese have not altered their positions east of the railroad and confine themselves to outpost attacks to the north, all of which so far have been repulsed.

The Sick and Wounded.

Tokio, Sept. 29.—Unofficial estimates place the number of sick and wounded Japanese soldiers under treatment in Japan at forty-five thousand. The military hospitals at Tokio, Osaka and Hiroshima contain ten thousand each. Nine thousand have recovered sufficiently to be sent to mountain and health resorts. The system of handling and treating the sick and wounded is working splendidly and the death rate is exceptionally small.

May Not Battle At Mukden.

St. Petersburg, Sept. 29.—In summing up the situation yesterday the military expert of The Russ says it is evident from all indications at the front, that the Japanese are engaged in a big turning movement on the eastward. This would give them the advantage, as heretofore, of operating largely in the mountains to which their artillery is better suited than for movements in the open. But, in the present movement the units of the Japanese army are necessarily losing touch with one another. Their strategic position is, therefore, less satisfactory than at Liaoyang. The Russ says it is a question whether a decisive or even serious engagement will occur at Mukden. Such an event will depend entirely upon Gen. Kuropatkin's view as to the exigencies of the situation.

More Torpedoes For the Russians.

Paris, Sept. 29.—A despatch to The Temps from Toulon says: The Russian Government has negotiated for the construction of 11 torpedo boat destroyers of the latest model, by a French company.

International Disarmament.

St. Louis, Sept. 29.—At the initial meeting of the first universal congress of lawyers and jurists, held under the auspices of the American Bar Association, former U. S. Secretary of State John W. Foster urged that the United States Government should hold itself ready to enter into an agreement for international disarmament.

20 School Boy Pickets.

Chicago, Sept. 29.—Fifty boy pickets, none of them over 15, stationed about McAllister Public School here, prevented pupils from entering yesterday. Outside the picket cordon, a crowd of 700 boys and girls hooted and yelled at the teachers looking from the school doors. The picketing was a result of a "strike," which was caused by a mistaken belief of the children that the assistant kindergarten teacher was colored. About 80 per cent. of the "strikers" went back to their classes on learning their mistake.

Trades and Labor Resolutions.

Ottawa, Sept. 29.—At yesterday's session of the National Trades and Labor Congress a strong resolution of censure was passed on the Senate for killing the alien labor law introduced by Sir William Mulock last session. Another resolution asked the Government to take steps to prevent a repetition of the large influx of foreign immigrants who were in evidence this year. The Government will also be asked to have an inspector for scaffolding in each city and an inspector of dynamite and other explosives.

FOUR MEN WERE KILLED

Possibly Five, and One Injured, So Badly That He Will Die.

Head-End Collision Between G.T.R. Freights At the Village of Eastwood—Station Was Burned, and There Was Very Heavy Damage to Rolling Stock—The Switch Had Been Left Open—Inquest Opens and Adjourns.

Eastwood, Sept. 29.—As a result of one of the most disastrous freight wrecks in the history of the Grand Trunk Railway, through a rear-end collision at this village, five miles from Woodstock, at 4 o'clock yesterday morning, four men are dead and possibly five, and one injured so severely that he could not survive the night.

The dead: Thomas Heron of Toronto, engineer; Harry Fallis of Hamilton, conductor; C. B. Benedict of Hamilton, brakeman; Alexander Kirkland of Hamilton, engineer.

Late last night it was learned on good authority that a Buffalo driver, who was riding in the caboose of the through freight, is missing, and is believed to have perished. His name could not be ascertained.

Cameron Will Likely Die.

Simon Cameron of Parkhill, living at 413 West King street, Toronto, fireman, was severely scalded and burned and injured internally and will likely die.

About twenty cars of meat, stock and general freight were consumed by fire, together with Eastwood Station, which was wrecked by the collision and afterwards destroyed by the burning of the wreckage. One new locomotive of the "900" class is a complete loss. Three hundred yards of track were torn up and rendered useless. Auxiliaries with a force of 200 men labored since early morning until late last night, and the track was not clear till 10 o'clock.

Inquest Opens and Adjourns.

Dr. McLay, coroner, opened the inquest at 5 o'clock last evening. He empanelled a jury who viewed the wreck and discovered that the switch had been left open. As the conductor and brakeman of the freight on the siding, and an Engineer Heron of the second freight are dead and his fireman is dying there is little hope of accurately determining who was responsible for the disaster. The inquest now stands adjourned until Monday.

The remains of the dead were only a few charred bones and ashes, the first being recovered about ten o'clock.

Collision on the G.N.R.

Winnipeg, Sept. 29.—Four men were injured in a collision at Oak Point, on Lake Manitoba, yesterday morning on the G.N.R. A couple of work cars, a boarding and dining car were standing on the track when a work train coming down the line backed into them, doing considerable damage to the train and injuring William Breen, Thomas Marks, Ernest Breen and Joseph Richardson. The injuries of the two former are internal and may prove serious. The accident occurred about 6 o'clock in the morning.

Knelt to Meet Train.

Sault Ste. Marie, Sept. 29.—A Canadian Pacific work train coming into the Soo from the east struck and killed an unknown man a couple of miles from town about 6 o'clock last evening. Deceased, accompanied by two other men, named O'Reilly and Banister, all drinking considerably, was walking along the track. When first seen by the engineer they were to one side, but when the train came near the deceased stepped between the rails and got down on his hands and knees.

Train Cars Derailed.

Toronto, Sept. 29.—An accident resulting in the derailing of ten freight cars occurred on the C. P. R. line, just east of the old Streetsville Station, at about 6 o'clock yesterday morning. The cause was the breaking of a defective wheel. The loss will run to several thousands of dollars.

M.C.R. Censured By Jury.

Niagara Falls, Sept. 29.—The coroner's jury, investigating the death of J. W. Mill, a Michigan Central engineer, who was killed on Sunday, found a verdict censuring the railway company for the defective condition of the siding where the accident occurred, and for the lack of wrecking appliances by means of which Mill might have been rescued.

Blame For Wreck Fixed.

Chicago, Sept. 29.—Responsibility for the wreck of the Sunday school excursion train on the Chicago and Eastern Illinois Railroad at Glenwood, Ill., July 31, when 18 persons were killed and more than 100 others injured, has been fixed by the grand jury. It indicated for manslaughter Frank H. Hoxie, engineer; Frank Cooper, conductor, and Chas. H. Wright, brakeman of the train which caused the accident. Frederick Whitman, train despatcher, and Patriot Costello, fireman of the freight train, were exonerated. Disobedience of orders was given as the cause for the indictments.

Seven to One

That is about the ratio. About seven times as many persons are injured as die from all causes yearly.

Accidents are a more prolific cause of death than any disease except lung diseases.

Twice as many people are accidently killed as die of old age. Does it not seem reasonable to you as a business man that it would be to your interest to carry an accident policy?

YOU are subject to over two hundred diseases, and liable to accidents without number.

Official figures prove that One Man in Five carrying an Accident and Sickness Policy makes a claim for indemnity each year.

YOU have no guarantee that you will not be the One Man who will be disabled this year.

THURSDAY, SEPT. 29, 1904.

THE BYE-ELECTIONS

The bye-election trials are now over, with the exception of the adjourned case in North Grey, and the general result can be seen. It has been an almost unbroken series of disasters for the the Ministry. Of the five protests against their candidates four have been successful and one is still in doubt. In Sault Ste. Marie the most appalling series of electoral crimes was revealed, the Attorney-General being in charge of the proceedings, and giving patronage and shelter to the machine men. In North Perth and North Norfolk bribery was proved and was admitted to be extensive, the sponge being thrown up to avoid furtbeq revelations. In North York there was again proof of extensive bribery, the Minister of Crown Lands being unseated for employing a machine man already reported for electoral offences in another constituency. In North Grey there was again the proved corruption, the only question being as regards agency, in accordance with the accepted Ministerial plan of sending into the constituencies members of the machine who are agents of Mr. Ross and his colleagues, rather than of their candidates.

On the other hand the three cases against Conservatives have been dismissed. In Centre Bruce there was not even a suspicion of any irregularity on the part of Mr. Hugh Clark, who fought single handed a host of the machine men from the Premier down. In Muskoka attempts to prove corruption signally failed. In North Renfrew the position is less satisfactory, for there was an arrangement that no evidence should be offered, on the understanding that Mr. Dunlop would resign, he having been advised by his counsel that technical offences might vacate his seat. We strongly object to these bargains affecting seats as leading to evil, but it is absurd for the Ministerialists to claim this as a set-off to the mass of organized official corruption and fraud which reeked in their five constituencies. Mr. Dunlop had for more than a year to fight against the crime of Mr. Ross, the tyrannical and unconstitutional disfranchisement of the riding, because it would return a Conservative. This necessarily put him to great expense, and made it very difficult to ensure that some over-zealous friend might not commit an illegality. If they thought they could disclose anything of consequence the Ministerialists would have pressed the charge.

The net result is that Mr. Ross in an incomplete House has no majority on its floor, but only the casting vote of the Speaker. As the only disputed point in North Grey is that of agency, he is likely to be in a minority even before the bye-elections, which will give him his quietus.

A feature of the North Norfolk case, as of others, was the mysterious stranger dispensing the Ministerial corruption funds. This is the manner in which, by means of his machine, Mr. Ross utilizes the rake-offs which he obtains in return for grafts of the public property.

The Ottawa Free Press has acknowledged the complicity of the Government in the corruption carried on by the grafters and healers working for it. As a remedy it suggests a reconstruction of the Addministration. The defect of this plan is that it is Premier Ross, the patron and head of the corrupt official machine, who most needs reconstructing.

One of the most unsatisfactory results of the incomplete investigation of the election protests is that the hiring of the Buffalo crooks for the Government service by their well-paid agent, Capt. Sullivan, has not been probed to the bottom. In North Perth and North Norfolk, where sections of them operated, the sponge was thrown up to balk full enquiry. In North Perth indeed there was oath against oath between the foreign and domestic wings of the machine, neither as unsupported being conclusive proof. There is strong evidence that Capt. Sullivan hired these men, corroborated by their appearance on the scene, and not the slightest attempt was made to refute this, though he was in court if they had ventured to call him.

The Hamilton Street Railway Co. has prepared lists of those to whom they will or will not sell workmen's tickets with rather comical results. A jeweller may buy these tickets, but not an optician. A milliner or dressmaker may, but not if she sells one of her hats or dresses. A window dresser may, but not if he sells anything thus displayed. An engraver or lithographer may, but not a photographer. A draughtsman may, but not if he calls himself an artist. A nurse may but not if she is also a "clerical worker," as some are. A stenographer may, but not a clerk. A telegrapher operator may, but not a piano tuner. An engineer may if he is not a civil engineer. It is a queer jumble. The fact is we are nearly all working men in Canada, and these attempted distinctions are both absurd and mischievous.

MINISTERIAL COMPLICITY

Cabinet Ministers Accessories in Crime when not Principals.

We suppose some people will wonder how the Ross government may manage to "clear themselves of complicity" for by this time a good many facts come awkwardly close home.

One cabinet minister, Mr. Gibson, is told that the most outrageous corruption is planned and about to be perpetrated in a constituency in which he is campaigning; he says he is not a common policeman, declines to interfere, the trip of the Minnie M. comes duly off, Mr. Gibson welcomes a supporter, elected by the aid of the rascality, and when the courts a year later unseat his supporter and report the names of many corruptionists, Mr. Gibson, Attorney-General, leaves the prosecution of them to private money and effort. Another cabinet minister, the premier, is found President of a company employing abroad Duncan Role, who fled from Canada to escape prosecution for electoral corruption, reported by the judges. Another cabinet minister, Mr. Davis, is found employing in his election work convicted corruptionist Robinson, and when warned about it does nothing. Another cabinet minister, Mr. Stratton, is accused of paying several thousand dollars to Conservative member Gamey, to get his support, and whatever may be thought of the proof of actual payment of money, no doubt exists from Mr. Stratton's own letters and evidence that he was secretly offering inducements and patronage to the legislator for his support.

These are specific instances. They apply to four ministers out of the seven in the cabinet. Behind them exists a history, years long and province-wide, of deliberate, persistent and systematic corruption, and fraud by a central Liberal "machine," which, despite frequent exposure in the courts, continued all along to enjoy the confidences of the government—else the machine could not have gone on working—and to have command of a large amount of money. Where did the money come from? And perhaps, worst of all, despite exposure after exposure of corruption and fraud, the detection of many offenders and the reporting of them by the judges, no offender has ever been prosecuted effectively—none ever punished—by the law of the province. The machinery of the law being practically under the control of the government and its appointees, this is one of the most damning facts in the indictment against the provincial cabinet.— Ottawa Journal, Indep.

In Our Grandfather's Youth

Paralysis was almost unheard of in the youth of our grandparents, and now nearly every newspaper contains a record of someone being stricken with this dreadful form of helplessness. Paralysis is in reality a starving of the nerves, and can always be prevented by the timely use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, a preparation which has no rival as a creator of nerve force.

REPUDIATED BY LIBERALS

Honest Men of the Party Refuse to be Responsible to Ross.

The Liberal Halifax Chronicle voices the opinion of many honest men of the party, who object to be disgraced by the corruption of Mr. Ross and his colleagues. It says:—

"Canadian Liberalism has the best of reasons for extreme indignation and resentment because of the disgrace which the conduct of a section of the party in Ontario has brought upon it. The very name of Canada itself has been grossly besmirched.

"But there is one good thing about it: no Liberal will attempt to palliate much less to defend, such impudent rascality. If Liberals of standing in Ontario have countenanced it, they personally, must abide the consequences. If the local Liberal party in Ontario can fairly be held responsible for it, so much the worse for the Liberal party in that province.

"The whole thing is utterly disgraceful and humiliating. If the Liberal Government of Ontario cannot clear themselves of complicity, direct or indirect, in it, there is but one thing for them to do, and that is to resign and hide themselves from public scorn as promptly as possible, so as to free Liberals elsewhere in the Dominion from the ignominy which has been brought to their doors by even outward connection with such doings."

For Over Sixty Years

An old and well-tried remedy.—Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup has been used for sixty years by millions of mothers for their children while teething, with perfect success. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, cures wind colic, and is the best remedy for diarrhoea. Sold by all druggists in every part of the world. Twenty-five cents a bottle. Its value is incalculable. Be sure and ask for Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup, and take no other kind.

E. R. WOOD INTERVIEWED

AN OLD PETERBOROUGH BOY'S OPINION REGARDING ANOTHER TRANS-CONTINENTAL LINE.

Says there is Plenty of Room in the West for Another—Most Costly Part Through British Columbia

An interview with Mr. E. R. Wood, an old Peterborough boy, with reference to the new transcontinental railway appeared in last night's News. The paper says:—

Mr. E. E. Wood, of Toronto, who, with the other directors of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway Co., has just completed a six weeks' trip of inspection through Western Canada, has arrived home. Four years had elapsed since Mr. Iood visited the West before, and the development of the country during that interval impressed them strongly.

"The observations of my fellow-directors and myself," said Mr. Wood to the News, "were such as to leave absolutely no doubt in our minds that there was plenty of room in the West for another transcontinental railroad. The construction of the Grand Trunk Pacific will be started as soon as possible, and if it can be completed in less than the seven years' limit stipulated by the Government, that will be done."

THE TERMINUS.

In answer to a question, what the terminus would be, Mr. Wood said that the party spent fifteen days cruising along the coast from Vancouver to Port Simpson for the purpose of investigating the possibilities of each inlet as a terminal port. This said, he parenthesized, was the most delightful from a pleasure standpoint he had ever enjoyed, the scenery among the numerous islands being magnificent. In choosing a terminus two things had to be considered, the security of the harbor, including such matters as anchorage, freedom from possibility of gales, safety of passage to the open sea, and the cost of bringing the line to the port from the inland. Engineers and surveying parties were now at work finding out how the different possible terminal ports would compare in choice and desirability, and the final choice would no doubt depend on their report.

COSTLY PART.

The most costly part of the railroad, Mr. Wood said, would of course be that through British Columbia, a distance of about 800 miles. Here some engineering problems would no doubt have to be solved, but it was expected that the mountain grades would be much more satisfactory than any other of the American transcontinental roads. There were rich deposits of coal and iron and other minerals in the mountain region, which the new railway would open up, as well as abundance of good timber lands.

"Across the prairies the road would follow as straight a line as practicable from Winnipeg to the foothills between the Canadian Pacific and the Canadian Northern. There would be feeders running into it from the more fertile parts. It would not do for a transcontinental railroad, he said, to turn aside for every obvious piece of territory.

STEAMSHIP LINE.

"Will you have a line of steamships on the Pacific?" he was asked.

"You could not run a transcontinental without one," he replied.

Referring to the general prosperity in the West, Mr. Wood said:

"I was struck by it as soon as we reached Port Arthur and Fort William. Both towns are scenes of bustling activity. As an example, the Canadian Northern have erected at Port Arthur the largest grain elevator in America, with a capacity of nearly 7,000,000 bushels.

"Winnipeg was a revelation. There is more building going on there now than in any other city in the country. You notice many new wholesale and business buildings, and numbers of new residences.

"In regard to the wholesale houses, one of the signs of the times is the addition of several stories to the old buildings, quite noticeable by the new brick. The railway yards of the Canadian Pacific are said to be the largest in America, and both the C.P.R. and C.N.R. are spending money freely on all parts of their lines.

"The same activity characterizes the smaller towns, such as Brandon, Prince Albert, Regina, Calgary, Edmonton, etc.

MORTGAGE SITUATION

"The farm mortgage situation I found to be very sound. The farmers are becoming well off, and are redeeming their mortgages. The real estate market is active, but I do not think there is any undue speculation in farm lands.

"From the opinions I heard expressed by bankers, loan company officials, and business men, I judged that the wheat crop this year would amount to fully 50,000,000 bushels. If that is the case, it will bring to the West considerably more money than that of last year."

The Gunpowder Plot.

The Orangemen of Peterborough are making preparations for an entertainment to commemorate the frustration of the Gunpowder Plot. It will be held on Friday, Nov. 4th, 1904, in the Foresters' Hall. Rev. Mr. Wallace, of Omemee, D.G.C., Ontario East, will give an address, and Rev. E. A. Langfeldt will act as chairman. An excellent programme is in preparation. Remember the date.

A BIG STEEL PLANT

Representatives of United Steels Corporation Collecting Information.

The following despatch relates to an industry of a very important character which is seeking location in Canada. It was rumored some weeks ago that a representative visited Peterborough to look over the field here and it was reported at the time that he was favorably impressed.

New York, Sept. 27. — The Herald says it is stated that the rumors that the United States Steel Corporation proposes to build a plant in Canada have a basis in that information is being collected by agents of the corporation with a view to determining whether such a venture would be profitable or not. Officials of the corporation state that a plant such as would have to be built in Canada would cost about $12,000,000. The plant would comprise not only a steel rail mill but giant furnaces and the finishing departments. Officials of the corporation state that inasmuch as a Canadian plant involves a large outlay of cash it is not altogether decided whether or not one will be built. Their agents are, however, collecting data as to the consumption, demand and production of Canadian markets, together with other information, such as location, etc. No reports have been filed in this city. The reason the Steel Trust is considering the advisability of extending its business to capture the Canadian markets is because of a recent measure placing a duty of $7 a ton on steel rails. This duty, the steel Trust men say, effectively bars from Canada all American steel rails.

Medicines You Can Trust

There are no family medicines that have such a firm hold on the confidence of the people as those of Dr. A. W. Chase, the famous physician and receipt book author. The superior skill as a physician and the intelligence of character for which Dr. Chase is everywhere known stand as a guarantee for his medicines, on every box of which are found his portrait and signature

The Senator's Italian.

A prominent senator, who claims to be rather more cultivated than some of his colleagues, prides himself on his knowledge of Italian. During a recent visit to New York he patronized a street bootblacking stand and as he got into the seat directed the bootblack in his best Italian to make haste, as he was trying to catch a train.

The bootblack stared at the senator for a moment in apparent perplexity, then answered briefly:

"Me no speak English."

A newsboy standing on the corner had witnessed the incident with interest.

"He ain't no Frenchman," he observed confidentially as the senator got down from the stand. "He's a bloomin' Dago. Talk Italian."

Long Winded.

There have been many terms of reproach and ridicule applied to interminable and wearisome talkers, but here are two that seem to be particularly pat:

One is the comment of a politician on a Washington orator, "He has a good train of thought, but it lacks terminal facilities."

The other comes from the village humorist, who said of the village orator, "He's the only feller I ever knew who could set his face talkin' an' then go off an' leave it."

A HARD BED.

Its Use Will Make the Flesh Firmer and Improve the Form.

"No matter how comfortable a soft bed and large, soft pillows may be," said Dr. A. S. Barnes, Jr., "they are not healthy, and women especially would do well to avoid them, for they assist materially in injuring her physical appearance. When the body sinks down in a soft bed a portion of her skin is robbed of its proper ventilation and the circulation is interfered with. It also helps to make the muscles flabby. A hard bed will make the flesh firmer, and the form must therefore appear somewhat better as a result. The large pillows are not good to sleep on because the head is too high when it rests on them, and this prevents that deep, regular breathing which gives good lungs and in consequence a better appearance to the bust and shoulders.

"One ought always to sleep on the left side, and preferably with the arms at the back. This may be a little awkward at first, but as soon as one becomes accustomed to it he will find it not only the most restful and easy, but the position in sleep is more easily conduced. The pillow ought to, of course, be small and the bed hard, or at least firm. The body is then in the correct position for sleeping and for helping the physical appearance of the person while at rest. The arms at the back threw the chest forward, make the shoulders broader and the back straighter, so that material assistance toward a good carriage is thus obtained. When one lies on his back, even though the pillow is small, it has a tendency to crook the shoulders."—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

SHE MADE A FORTUNE.

Showing How a Woman With Gumption Can Make Her Way.

A Massachusetts woman who was trying to introduce an American invention found herself left alone in London by her husband's sudden death, says the Youth's Companion. She had $250 after the funeral expenses were paid, and rather than go home to be dependent she resolved to seek fortune on the spot. For a time she cast about for a promising opening, some occupation for which she was personally fitted and which would pay her enough to live on. At length the chance remark of a fellow countrywoman gave her an idea. She sent most of her money to the United States to pay for a supply of beans and cranberries, set up a cook stove in her room and mailed cards to American residents in London stating that after a certain date she would supply them with baked beans and brown bread on Wednesdays and Saturdays and cranberry pies every day. Orders came before she was fairly ready. She supplied food that "tasted like home." In three months she moved to larger quarters and employed five assistants, and at the end of a year she opened a regular shop, where she sold not only beans and cranberry pies, but every American thing the exile longs for, from shoes to confectionery, not omitting ice cream soda, which had been unknown in London. She is now a rich woman.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS.

Olive oil should be put into a dark corner of the cellar where light never penetrates.

Don't use a galvanized iron lemon squeezer. When brought in contact with the lemon it forms a poisonous salt.

Dry powdered whiting put thickly over an oil stain on a wood floor and left for twelve hours will absorb all the grease.

To clean nickel scour with pulverized borax, use hot water and very little soap. Rinse in hot water and rub dry with clean cloth.

Soap ruins the appearance of painted or varnished woodwork. It may be necessary to use it occasionally, but it should be done quickly and lightly and be well rinsed off.

Potato water is a thing that the most economical housewife throws away, yet it has its use. After scraping the potatoes allow the water to settle and then strain it. This liquid sponges dirt out of silk.

Pumice Stone For the Teeth.

Once a week the teeth should be cleaned with the finest pumice stone. Take a little of the very finely powdered pumice and place it on the tooth brush. Brush the teeth lightly and remember that while pumice is good in its way it will take off the enamel if used too vigorously. Just how much of the pumice to use is a question of judgment, but women who lightly touch the teeth with it once a week are never in need of having the teeth cleaned at the dentist's.

Children's Feet.

The feet of small children should be attended to more solicitously. Remember that the cuticle is more sensitive and provide your little ones with fine hosiery, which they should not wear badly mended, for roughness and unevenness of the darns will cause corns and blisters, says the Gentlewoman. Every mother should personally supervise the cutting of her children's toe nails in order to avoid ingrowing nails.

When Phyllis Took Me Seriously

By Robert McBean Johnston

Copyright, 1904, by Robert McBean Johnston

"Phyllis," I asked, "will you marry me?"

"Seven!" said Phyllis.

I looked at her in astonishment.

"Seven?" I questioned. "Seven what?"

"Why, the score, you silly," she responded demurely. "Some one has to keep track of it."

That's the trouble with Phyllis. If her sense of humor were not so highly developed, I'm quite sure I should have had her ages ago. She never will take me seriously.

"Bother the score!" I cried desperately. "Anyway we'll not count the other six times."

"But I would very much rather."

Phyllis was staring into the fire. I didn't know just what she meant. I never was much good at guessing.

"Well," I answered indifferently, "just as you please. Count them if you like. All I meant was that none of them mattered so much as this time."

"Positively your last chance, ladies and gentlemen!" she cried gayly.

I assented in my most dignified manner. Phyllis laughed. I do wish she would take me seriously once in awhile.

"Why do you keep on proposing to me like this?" she asked me.

I shrugged my shoulders.

"If you must have it," I replied flippantly, "I suppose it's my little form of diversion—my hobby, if you will. We all have our hobbies more or less, you know."

Phyllis frowned. I like that frown immensely. Then she looked at me quickly when I was not expecting it.

"You appear to be enjoying yourself," she complained.

"Me?" I queried in mock innocence. "Oh, I protest! Really I'm not!"

Phyllis frowned again.

"Well, then, you ought to be."

"I know," I agreed; "I ought to be. Seven times ought to be productive of more than it has shown so far. I wonder," I concluded dreamily to myself—"I wonder if eight will do it."

"You haven't been answered for seven yet," said Phyllis.

"No," said I, "nor for any of the other six either."

"Now, there was Darcy Graham," said Phyllis inconsequentially. "He asked me to marry him nineteen times and swore eternal devotion each time whether I would have him or no. There's a man for you!"

"And then went and married Kitty Macpherson," said I almost to myself.

"No," corrected Phyllis. "Kitty married him."

"Willie Atkinson came next," I ventured.

"He only ran up to thirteen," said Phyllis.

"Which accounts for his failure," I suggested.

"I think the little fellow from the bank whom I met in the summer came after that?" she murmured interrogatively.

"Surely you don't count him?" I questioned in surprise. "Why, you told me yourself that he only lasted till the second round."

"He would probably have stayed longer if you hadn't come down that Sunday," said Phyllis in a vexed way. "You always do turn up at the most inopportune moments."

"Had I only known you didn't want me"—I began.

"I can't remember who was next," said Phyllis quickly. "Do you know?"

"I think," said I reflectively, "I added about two to my own score that day. I always liked you in white, you know."

"One," said Phyllis, consulting her tablets.

"Hold your head that way again," I said. "What long eyelashes you have!"

Phyllis deliberately turned the other way.

"Hold it round," I commanded. "I want to look at it."

Phyllis held it round. Phyllis likes to be commanded at times, only a fellow's got to know when to do it.

"A rather pretty mouth, too," said I gravely, "and your color is also very fair yet. One would never guess you were getting up in years."

"I'm not," denied Phyllis, with a certain assumption of dignity. "I'm only twenty-three."

"Tell don't show it," I responded gallantly. "Were I asked to make a guess I should say 'sweet sixteen and'"—

"Quite so!" said Phyllis dryly.

"How awful it must be to be laid on the shelf!" I remarked sympathetically.

"I'm not!" asserted Phyllis indignantly.

"The very idea!" I murmured in a surprised sort of way. "I never even insinuated such a thing. But you know," I concluded dismally, "you haven't had a proposal in three weeks."

"I have," insisted Phyllis. "I had one just tonight."

"Oh, but that doesn't count!" said I. "You told me so yourself. These are only sort of trial heats to keep you in form, you know."

"Oh!" sniffed Phyllis.

"Besides," I added, "I need material for my stories."

"What a risk you are willing to run for the sake of material," said Phyllis.

"It is necessary that one make some sacrifices for the sake of art," I explained.

"Suppose, though, I were to accept you some time?" queried Phyllis in an awful tone.

"I would have a new climax for the next one," said I. I flatter myself I said it indifferently.

I had expected Phyllis to be affected. Instead she burst out laughing. That's the trouble with Phyllis. She never will take me seriously.

"You're a goose," she complimented me.

"Aw, thanks," I murmured. "Be good of you."

Phyllis regarded me gravely. Now, it's an odd thing, but whenever Phyllis looks at a fellow just like that he feels sort of funny all over, you know. I don't just know what it is. I think it must be what they call personal magnetism.

"Jack," she said, "you have some gray hairs."

"It's not polite of you to remind me of it," I said.

"And your complexion isn't as good as it used to be," she continued. "Besides, there are a lot of little things, particularly about your clothes."

"Nothing serious, I trust?" I asked in alarm.

"No; nothing serious," said Phyllis. "But an awful lot of little things. I think you need some one to take care of you."

"Parks is an exceptional valet," said I in his defense.

"Now, a wife"— began Phyllis meaningly.

I laughed.

"Yes," said Phyllis, taking no notice, "I think you need a wife. Why don't you propose to some nice girl, Jack?"

"I have," said I stoutly.

"Huh!" snorted Phyllis in disbelief. "How many proposals have you ever made?"

"Seven," said I.

I think Phyllis was pleased. Anyway she smiled a little.

"There was the Rawshaw girl," she said warningly.

"Nice girl," I assented warmly. "Nothing particularly queer-like about a girl's carriage, though, when she's only five feet three."

"And Bessie Fleming?"

Phyllis was getting back at me.

"A sweet creature," I agreed. "But I really prefer blonds."

"And then there's a whole host of others you might have if you wanted them. You're a catch, you know."

"I know," said I wearily. "You might have been nicer, though, and said that I was very popular. It all means the same, perhaps, but there are prettier ways of saying it."

"Oh, no," said Phyllis sweetly. "You're rather nice as well."

"Thanks," I replied. "But with a score of seven it does not seem to have benefited me greatly. Will it do me any good to make it eight?"

Phyllis toyed with the corner of the sofa cushion.

"You might do a great deal better," said she deprecatingly.

"Then I don't have to make it eight?" cried I, for once in my life comprehending.

"I did not say just that, sir," said Phyllis smartly.

I don't believe I ever saw Phyllis look so beautiful, and the odd part of it was I couldn't see her eyes either. She was staring full into the fire all the time. If it makes her look that way I wish she would look into the fire always.

"But I do make it eight, Phyllis," said I soberly.

I took hold of her arm and turned her round so that she was facing me, but she still held her head down and I could see only her eyelashes. Phyllis has long eyelashes.

"And you'll marry me, Phyllis?" I whispered. I don't know whether I raised my tone interrogatively or not. I hadn't the same control over my voice that I had the other seven times.

Phyllis looked at me, with a funny little smile. She never will take me seriously.

"I suppose this will make a new climax," said she.

But her looks belied her words, and for once I was bright enough to see.

"No," said I as distinctly as my throat would let me. "This is not a climax. This is a beginning."

The Youth of Mozart.

Mozart played the harpsichord at three! At six he and his sister, who was but eleven, went with their father on a musical tour round Germany. At nine he took London by storm by his organ playing, while all the symphonies which he played at his farewell concert there were his own compositions. Before he was ten he composed for the dedication of the Church of the Orphans at Vienna a mass and conducted the concert himself. Through it all the child Mozart seems to have remained unspoiled, unaffected, the plaything of queens.

At the age of six in Vienna, while he amazed the imperial household by his genius, he charmed them by his childishness. The emperor sat by his side as he played and called him his "little magician." The empress was delighted when at the close of the performance the little fellow sprang upon her lap and kissed her. When he slipped and fell on the polished floor the archduchess, Marie Antoinette, afterward the hapless queen of France, lifted him up and was amused at being thus thanked: "You are very kind. When I grow up I will marry you." In London also the royal family made much of him, and the child even accompanied the queen in a song.

EAST DURHAM'S RECEPTION TO CONSERVATIVE LEADER

Mr. R. L. Borden Enthusiastically Greeted at Port Hope--Magnificent Mass Meeting Heartily Approves His Strong and Convincing Arguments--Peterborough Deputation Takes Prominent Part in Paying Honor to the Esteemed Leader.

(By a Staff Reporter.)

Nothing could exceed in cordiality or enthusiasm the great reception accorded Mr. Robert Laird Borden, the popular and aggressive leader of the Conservative party last night in the picturesque town of Port Hope.

It was a tribute of which any public man might justly feel proud and the good old Conservative stalwarts of East Durham never massed in greater numbers or more heartily acclaimed the hold which their Chieftain enjoys in their confidence and affection than they did last night.

Mr. Borden's visit was triumphant in every sense of the word, from the welcoming cheers at the time he stepped off the train in the afternoon to the splendid torchlight procession which was tendered him after the mass meeting in the opera house.

The Conservative chief was never heard to better advantage. He spoke with a directness, a force and an earnestness that appealed to all and his remarks were cheered again and again. Point after point was scored and the great gathering evidenced its appreciation times without number as he showed up the hollowness of Liberal performances as compared with their professions and scored the Government for its failure to punish political malfeasance; for its burdensome and one sided railway policy, its attempted party manipulation of the militia and its rewards to men whose character and lack of personal fitness should disqualify them from holding any public office.

Mr. Borden exposed the efforts of the Liberals to break down the provisions of the audit act, and to throw wide open the public treasury, and condemned the duplicity and vagueness which characterized the Laurier administration's stand on the tariff.

All this was discussed and much more in a masterly speech which was followed with the closest interest, and met with unanimous approval. Lt.-Col. H. A. Ward, M.P., received an ovation, while Mr. W. B. Northrop, M.P., of East Hastings, and other speakers were given an appreciative hearing.

The assembly broke up at eleven o'clock, every man, woman and child in the hall remaining until that hour. Many ladies graced the audience and Mr. Borden assured Col. Ward that as he had the fair sex with him, there was little doubt of his being returned in the coming contest.

RECEPTION TO THE LEADER.

It was 3 o'clock when Mr. Borden's party reached the station. The esteemed leader and his wife were met by a large reception committee composed of Col. Ward, M.P., C. A. Hagerman, President of the Liberal-Conservative Association of Port Hope, F. C. Philp, secretary, and the following gentlemen from Peterborough: James Kendry, M.P., J. A. Sexsmith, the Conservative standard bearer in East Peterborough, Mr. T. E. Bradburn, president of the Liberal-Conservative Association in West Peterborough, Messrs. G. W. Hatton, J. W. Miller, J. Hampden Burnham, A. P. Poussette and C. S. Wallis.

At the town hall the interior decorations, consisting of flags, bunting and Chinese lanterns, were tastefully and effectively arranged.

The band of the 45th Battalion provided lively music and the chamber was crowded with persons anxious to greet Mr. and Mrs. Borden.

In a happy little address President Hagerman welcomed the distinguished leader and assured him that they were all deeply grateful for his visit.

Mr. Borden, replying, paid a compliment to the picturesque town of Port Hope and said his tour throughout the province had been of the most delightful and enjoyable character. He felt that he was among friends. They were all fellow Canadians—whether Conservative or Liberal—deeply interested in the welfare of their country. He would postpone until the evening any remarks of a controversial character, but before resuming his seat he desired to again thank the people of Port Hope and East Durham for their generous welcome.

Afterwards four pretty little girls presented Mrs. Borden with handsome flowers and were kissed in turn by Mr. Borden for their thoughtful and gracious act. The two little daughters of Col. Ward—Misses M. E. and Madeline Ward—Dorothy Smart and Hilda Merrifield made the presentations.

Mr. and Mrs. Borden then held a reception assisted by Mrs. Ward, and a large number of people shook hands with Canada's coming Premier and his charming wife. While in town they were the guests of the genial member for East Durham and Mrs. Ward.

THE EVENING MEETING.

The Port Hope Opera House was filled to the doors at the night meeting and several were turned away unable to gain admission. Standing room was at a premium, and the decorations, while simple, were effective. The band of the 45th Battalion was stationed in the gallery across the front of which was the motto, "Hail to the Chief." Portraits of Mr. Borden, Sir John Thompson, Sir John A. Macdonald and others were prominently displayed while representative men from the town and all parts of Durham and adjoining counties, occupied seats on the platform. The entrance of Mr. Borden and party was the signal for prolonged applause.

The chair was ably occupied by Mr. Evan McLean, of Newcastle, President of the West Durham Conservative Association, and associated with him on the platform were Messrs. Jas. Kendry, M.P., West Peterborough and all the visiting delegates from Peterborough; Mr. J. A. Sexsmith of Havelock, the Conservative nominee in East Peterborough; Col. Sam. Hughes, M.P., Lindsay; W. B. Northrup, M.P., East Hastings; Mayor Quinlan, of Port Hope; T. Dixon Craig, ex-M.P.; J. J. Preston, M.P.P., East Durham; Dr. Beatty, Gordon Hill; ex-Mayor Henry White, Port Hope; J. Harcourt, Rev. E. R. Lancaley, R. W. Smart, J. Johnston, Dr. Might, R. Grandy, F. Outram, R. Chalk, W. King, N. O'Neil, C. A. Hagerman, president, F. C. Philp, secretary of the Port Hope Conservative Association, and many others.

Mr. McLean, the chairman, referred to the redistribution act of the Liberals in uniting East and West Durham. The latter in the last election had gone Conservative by 40 majority. The Liberals by pursuing such tactics as they had in the "Soo," in South Oxford and other places, had managed to win the by-election and place Mr. Robert Beith in parliament. Mr. Beith had never delivered a speech in three sessions of the House. While he might be an excellent breeder of tuneless horses, that was not necessarily a good attribute to a member of parliament. The chairman warmly welcomed Mr. R. L. Borden, who, amid applause, he styled "the worthy successor of Sir John A. Macdonald." He said West Durham was behind him, and he believed that old East Durham would again rally around the popular candidate for Durham, Col. H. A. Ward.

MR. WARD SPEAKS.

The gallant Colonel was given a rousing reception and paid a grateful tribute to Mr. Borden, who, since his election to the leadership, had grown in the confidence, esteem and affection of all Conservatives. "We have confidence in his judgment, ability and persevering attacks on the government and we have confidence that, after the next election, he will be Premier of this Dominion."

Touching upon the Trent Valley Canal issue, he said he had strongly advocated its construction, and added, "I would be glad if the government would take such an interest in this scheme as would insure its immediate completion. I brought up the matter in the House on three different occasions, and we were promised on two occasions a survey. Last year in answer to me and to the Canal Association of Port Hope, Mr. Blair promised to act and have the survey made. Did we get it? No. We had an examination of the Port Hope route and the Trenton route; figures we objected to were taken, Mr. Rogers' figures being taken by by Mr. McLeod. We could get no satisfaction from the government. Last session I again brought the matter up and urged that a comparative survey of the Port Hope and Trenton routes be made.

I know that some of our friends from Peterborough are here, and they are perhaps divided as to which is the proper outlet for the Canal. Well after another appeal from the Port Hope deputation for a comparative survey, a corps of engineers was sent down for that purpose, but the instructions to these gentlemen seemed to be an utter failure to do what they should do to meet the wishes of the Port Hope people. The only instructions are that a survey of the Port Hope route shall be made, and no comparative survey which is what we desire. I have not time to tell you tonight why comparative surveys are required, but I say we cannot get justice unless we have a comparative survey. We apparently cannot get it from the present government. I am sure, although I will make no promises, that we will get fair and honorable treatment from Mr. Borden when he comes into power and that what we desire will be speedily granted."

CORRUPTION IN ONTARIO.

Mr. J. J. Preston, M.L.A., East Durham, spoke briefly expressing his pleasure at meeting Mrs. Borden and her husband, the talented leader of the great Conservative party. He would like to take the able leader to the northern part of the county and introduce him to many of the stalwarts of the party who would be as loyal to Mr. Borden as they ever were to Sir John Macdonald. He had not the time to talk provincial politics to-night, and, perhaps, it was just as well as the politics of the province were "rank and smelled to Heaven." Mr. Whitney would soon come into power and the day of the heeler — Here the laughter drowned Mr. Preston's voice and Mr. Whitney's name was received with wild applause. The best Liberals of the party would unite in putting out the corrupt agitation of Toronto. In 37 years there had been seen very little bribery in East Durham and both parties had stood for pure and honest contests in the riding. He hoped that the same record would continue in the enlarged constituency of Durham.

MR. BORDEN WELCOMED.

On behalf of the Conservative Association of East Durham Mr. F. C. Philp read an appreciative address to the popular and gallant leader, who on responding was tendered an ovation.

Three cheers were heartily given the audience rising and cheering again and again.

Mr Borden expressed his appreciation of the kindly reception and the flattering words referring to him in the address of the Conservative Association. He spoke of his selection as Conservative leader three and a half years ago. He had preached the doctrine that no true Canadian should refuse to answer a call in the interest of his country, and since accepting the position, he had given all his energy, attention and ability to the task before him. He appreciated the loyalty of the Conservatives of Ontario—he was glad to say that out of the noble band of Conservatives sent to Ottawa there was none more loyal or respected than Col. Ward (Applause.) He ventured to predict that, when the battle was fought, Harry Ward would again represent the riding in the Commons of Canada. If he had the ballots the side he need not pay much attention to what the opinions of the men were. It was a good thing for the public life of Canada that women took an intelligent interest in the affairs of the country. The standard of public life, it had been said, was not what it should be, but it must be remembered that it was just what the people of the Dominion made it. If the standard was low it must be remembered that each man and woman was to a certain extent responsible for it.

(With reference to the ballot frauds in West Huron and Brockville Mr. Borden said he had been told by the by the Premier no subject could be more worthy of the attention of the House of Commons. He was, however, barked in the committee of privileges and elections and the investigation was clogged off and strangled by Liberal leaders, who felt that the inquiry would not be in the interests of their party. For the manipulation, stealing and falsification in the matter of ballots since 1896 how many had been punished? Not one. He charged that the Liberal leaders had accepted the stolen goods and protected the perpetrators of the crime. The one matter which should engage the attention of the Conservative party in the coming election would be to see that the ballots as placed in the boxes were properly counted, that there was no stuffing and that so far as Conservatives were concerned there should be a clean, pure election. They should be vigilant to see that the honest voice of the electors was not defeated.

THE AUDIT ACT.

Mr. Borden then touched upon the Audit Act passed by the late Alexander Mackenzie, and the appointment of Mr. J. L. McDougall as Auditor-General, who was a fearless and faithful officer. Mr. McDougall never knew the thirty part of duty until the Liberals came into office and in 1902 he asked for an amendment to the act to extend his powers. The Liberals in 1902 tried to pass an act to lessen these powers, but finally withdrew it. Mr. Borden then read the resolution he had moved for a committee in the House to report on the Audit Act, to extend the powers of the Auditor-General and protect the public treasury.

Mr. McDougall had announced his intention of resigning or having additional powers, although he was a staunch Liberal. Mr Borden asked any Liberal if there was the slightest objection to his resolution. He next referred to the appointment of certain notorious persons to offices as a reward for party service—men like Jackson of South Oxford, who was recognized for his crooked work by an appointment in the Old Country. Yet Sir Richard Cartwright, that exemplar of purity, had defended Jackson's course. Sir Richard's only condemnation being that he had not been "sufficiently discreet." Mr. Borden had informed that gentleman that he and his party had better abolish the deadhouse and substitute therefor, "be discreet and you shall not be found out." (Laughter and applause.)

"Now," exclaimed Mr. Borden, "do you believe the public treasury of Canada should be safeguarded? Then vote for Col. Ward. Do you believe that appointments made to office should be on the basis of personal character and capacity only, then vote for Col. Ward. If you wish the public treasury to be wide open and if you believe in party service such as Jackson rendered the Liberals and that a man of his character should be rewarded then vote for Col. Ward's opponent."

THE RAILWAY DEAL.

Touching on the Grand Trunk Pacific, Mr. Borden said no special control of freight rates was obtained other than that ensured by common law. The only guarantee on the company's part was on $14,000,000 for the construction of the west part of the road. The cost to this country in guarantees and construction of the eastern line was between $155,000,000 $170,000,000, so that the G. T. P. supplied only one tenth of the capital required. Canada built the eastern section and gave it to the company for seven years free. On the eastern section the people of the country supplied three fourths of the credit and also a great deal of cash for the western section. Canada did not come in at all in the profits although supplying nine-tenths of the entire capital. Canada should go one step further, supply one-tenth more of the cash and credit and own the line from one end of the country to the other. (Great applause.)

Mr. Borden believed if politics was kept out of the Intercolonial railway it would show better financial results. It was said you could not keep politics out of a Government railway administration. The people could, at least, try, and the Conservative party, if returned to power, would do all they could to free the Intercolonial from party political management and partisan influence. It was said this railway bargain had been closed. The Conservative party had asked that the matter be left over until the people had been given a chance to declare their decision in the matter. If the Conservatives came into power next election they should have the privilege to expropriate the G. T. R. and pay them adequately for what had been undertaken (but for no more. "And," continued Mr. Borden, "although the attempt has been made to close the door in your face on this question, I assure you it is still open for you to decide whether you are in favor of this so called transcontinental railway built under my control from the Government, with no restrictions or stipulations as to rates or routes of freight and with its terminal in the United States, or are you in favor of having

MANY GOOD MEN FOR CANDIDATE

NAMES LIKELY TO GO BEFORE EAST RIDING CONVENTION.

There Will be a Large Attendance at Conservative Gathering at Norwood on Monday to Select Standard-bearer for Legislature.

The Liberal Conservatives of East Peterborough will meet at Norwood, in the town hall, on Monday next, October 3rd, to nominate a candidate for the Legislative Assembly.

The gathering will be held at one o'clock, and it is expected that there will be a large attendance of delegates from all parts of the constituency.

The names of several excellent men are being freely mentioned as candidates, and whoever secures the nomination is sure of election, as the existence of the Ross Administration is only a matter of a few days, or weeks at most. With its majority completely effaced and its disgraceful campaign's corruption and wholesale trickery, the Conservatives of East Peterborough never stood a better chance of carrying the seat in favor of clean, honest and progressive government under Mr. Whitney.

Among those who will probably allow their names to go before the convention are James Andrews, ex-Reeve of Asphodel; County Councillor Henry Moore, of Dummer; Joshua Smith, of Otonabee; George J. Sherry, of Norwood, and Dr. Shaw, of Keene.

Whoever is successful in capturing the convention will be made the unanimous choice of a thoroughly united party on Monday afternoon next. All the probable nominees are representative men, well-known and esteemed throughout the riding.

HOW R.K. BROWN WAS KILLED

Motet Cable of a Mine Broke and he Fell 800 Feet.

A despatch from Vancouver, British Columbia, gives some details with reference to the accident which resulted in the death of R.K. Brown, son of Mr. George Brown, of Smithtown Hill. The despatch states that the scene of the fatality was at Ymir, and was caused by a break of the hoist cable in the shaft of a mine. Brown was employed as a nipper, and was taking used steel to the surface to be sharpened, when the accident happened. He fell from the 800 to the 1600 foot level, a distance of 800 feet, and death was instantaneous.

It is expected that the body will arrive here tomorrow or next day.

Brevities.

—The Canadian Pacific Railway announced yesterday at Montreal that this year they would have a total of 35,000 cars and 395 engines to handle the grain and cattle trade of the North-West. Placed along a single track this would mean 177 miles of freight cars and seven miles of engines.

EXHIBITIONS GREAT LUCK

FINE WEATHER CHASED WITH THE CLOSING OF THE GATES.

Directors are Well Satisfied with the Receipts — Yesterday's Stock Parade was a Popular Feature — The Horse Parade.

Peterborough Industrial Exhibition is over, and with it evidently went the fine weather. People on the grounds yesterday pointed to the sundogs and prophesied a change of menu by the weather man. Should the disagreeable spell be protracted it will cause a lot of anxiety throughout the district, for this assuredly is the open season for fall fairs.

Another Peterborough Exhibition has gone down to history, and while it was not the success it should have been in so large a centre as this, still there was much about it that was exceedingly satisfying to the Directors. Mr. K. Eardley-Wilmot, Treasurer, when asked this morning regarding the financial outcome, stated that there would be a small surplus, after the prizes and everything else had been settled for. The receipts of the first day were about $1,000, while yesterday they ran to something like $300, meaning an attendance of 1,300 people on the second day.

The judging of horses, cattle, sheep and swine was completed by noon yesterday, and one of the big features of the afternoon was the parade of prize winning horses. Headed by Graham Bros.' elegant hackney pony, Jos Rock, and the magnificent Clydesdales, the turnout was withal a grand one, consisting as it did of the very best in the classes entered. By the time the parade was called, however, not a few of the exhibitors had removed their animals from the grounds, and thus detracted from the showing in this final act. The horses passed in front of the grand stand. Unusual interest was taken in the display made by local hack drivers, and when two little pony equippages, each containing two dainty little ladies, drove past, there was an outburst of applause. Mr. R. M. Roy secured some very fine views of the parade. Spirited roadsters, heavy agricultural animals, strenuous looking general purpose horses, cute-looking colts and splendid saddle horses constituted was was considered a very fine parade, and a decidedly popular feature.

The other prominent feature of the afternoon was the trials of speed. There is nothing the average man likes better than a horse race, and the races yesterday afternoon were thoroughly enjoyed by the spectators. The first speeding event was the 2.23 trot or pace. Three horses entered this race, Minnie Keswick, owned by G. Curtis, Lindsay; Petroleum, owned by W. Fanning, Cambray, and John R. Gentry, owned by J. Brooks, Peterborough. Minnie Keswick won the three straight heats, though Petroleum gave her quite a race in the first two heats. The latter is very speedy, but behaves badly, going up in the air several times at critical moments. John R. Gentry was completely out of it. The score in this race was as follows:—

Minnie Keswick, G. Curtis, Lindsay	1	1	1
Petroleum, W. Fanning, Cambray	2	2	2
John R. Gentry, J. Brooks, Peterborough	3	3	3

Time, 2.24, 2.19 1-4, 2.22.

A field of six horses faced the starter in the 3-4 mile running race. Considerable difficulty was experienced in getting the bunch off, and the need of a barrier was apparent. Chatelaine won in two straight heats, though Zebra pressed her close in both. The second heat was a very pretty one. The leading pair could have been covered with a blanket all the way round. Following is the summary:—

Chatelaine	1	1
Zebra	2	2
Victoria	3	3
Golden Contrado	4	5
Lady Russell	5	4
Sea Song	6	6

Time, 1.16 1-2, 1.16 1-2.

Only two horses started in the 1 1-2 miles' hurdle race. Grey Cloud, owned by Woodruff, of Dundas, and Fire Field, owned by W. Worthington, of Toronto. Grey Cloud had no trouble in winning. Fire Field repeated the exploit of striking the hurdle and threw her rider, a lad named Chas. Jamieson, of Toronto, at the first jump. He had a very bad fall, but was not severely injured. Another rider finished the race in order to go second money.

CAPT. LEON DION

Death of an old Resident — A Notability in our Inland Navigation.

News comes from Point Levi yesterday day of the death on the previous evening of Capt. Leon Dion. He had for some time been in poor health, and his death was not unexpected. He leaves a widow, who was Elmire, daughter of Clement Guerin, of Peterborough, Tennie and Clement Guerin being her brothers. There are a son and a daughter, Albert at Point Levi, and Harriet, who is married and also lives at Point Levi. Capt. Dion left this neighborhood some years ago. He was well known as Captain of H. Calcutt's boats on the river and as an hotel keeper here and in Lakefield. He had the unique experience of running his boat the Golden-eye down the river for a trip on New Year's Day. Capt. Leon Dion was qualified as engineer as well as master and was one of the features of river life. He was widely known and highly esteemed.

Less of It to Mind.

He liked to mind the baby.
It seemed a peaceful life,
So restful, for at other times
He had to mind his wife.

Just a Little.

Whoever it was that first made himself famous by discovering that man wants but little here below must have referred to work or quinine or boarding house hash.

These are a few of the things of which a little will go a long way with the average man. You sometimes run across a man who is said to be a fiend for work, but if you will just cut off his pay check you will observe how soon he will lose interest and begin to look for a quiet spot in which to go fishing.

Of the things that are worth having man wants a whole lot, and then he will pass his plate for the second helping, so that it has become a saying that you can't have too much of a good thing.

It may be that contentment stalks abroad in some countries, but in the United States it is not at all likely that there are more than 20,000,000 or 60,000,000 men who if they were offered the earth done up in a neat package and tied with pink ribbons would refuse it.

Waived the Judge.

Maud Miller on a summer night
Rested on the gate arrayed in white.
The judge rode up and, with a wink,
Said, "Maiden, may I have a drink?"
Maud Miller, "If you've the price to pay
Step into mamma's down the way."
"Oh," said the judge, with manner bland,
"I wanted water from your hand."
Said she, "Well, I can please your whim,"
And as she turned the hose on him.

Over the Border

"This will never do," cried the Scot cheerily. "The doctor is in despair over the time your sister spent with you, and he is at this moment chiding her. He has threatened with direst penalties if I exceed a scant minute. So I shall just have to bid you farewell and be off, wishing you quick recovery."

"Armstrong," said the boy huskily. "My sister must take to the Oxford road and remedy my default. Will you be her comrade there and back?"

"As faithfully as ever belted knight attended fair lady," replied Armstrong, his eyes suddenly ablaze with joy.

"John will attend her, and I am sure your good sword will protect her if need be."

"You may take oath on that."

"I give you the pass which is safe conduct for you both, and I think it will serve to cover John as well. If not, your own might shield him as far as Manchester."

"My own will shield me as far as Manchester, and this will, more appropriately, convey your sister and her servant. After Manchester we will manage some way. Be not uneasy about that. I give you the word of a Scottish gentleman I will care for your sister as if she were my own."

Armstrong took the pass, which was now ominously stained red. He grasped his supposed friend by the hand, bade him farewell and wished him quick healing. Wentworth's throat choked, for a feeling of strong liking for the man almost overpowered him, but a stinging sense of his own perfidiousness held him silent. Remorse was already biting worse than the wound in his side. The stranger turned for a moment at the door, waved his hand and called to him to be of good cheer. A sob broke from the lad's throat, and weakly he cursed the exigencies of war.

CHAPTER XVI.

When Armstrong left the room where the wounded boy lay he found Dr. Marsden alone, pacing up and down the long hall, visibly impatient. However, he appeared gratified that the stranger had contented himself with so short an interview.

Armstrong bade the practitioner farewell, and this proved the last he was to see of him. The young man went to the stables to feed and water Bruce, not knowing how soon he might have need of him.

Returning to the house he met Frances Wentworth evidently in search of him. It seemed to him she had been weeping, and there was a perceptible change in the cordiality of her manner toward him. He feared this was perhaps to be accounted for by the admiration of her beauty which his glances might have betrayed, and he resolved to be more careful in future, although it was difficult to repress the exultation he felt at the prospect of being her companion on a long and possibly dangerous expedition.

"Has my brother spoken to you of my visit to Oxford?" she asked.

"Yes."

"Would it be as convenient to you to set out tomorrow morning as this afternoon?"

"Quite. It would be better, in fact, for my horse had a hard day of it yesterday, traveling I don't know how many miles. Perhaps you can tell me where I am. I could get no information from my surly inferiors."

"You are in the southern part of Durham, near the Yorkshire border."

"We have come even farther than I thought. A day's rest will do no harm to the horse."

"I thank you," the girl said somewhat primly as she turned away. Then, pausing and hesitating a moment, she continued, with face half averted, "My brother and I are twins, and perhaps the more devoted to each other on that account. I would do anything for him. I wish to say and see the matter heralded."

"I thoroughly understand the situation, and I wish I were able to tell you how completely I sympathize with you. Although I know your brother so short a time, I am only too glad to be of the slightest assistance to him."

This gracious avowal did not appear to have the effect it merited. Some trace of a frown marred the smoothness of the girl's brow, and her lips became compressed. If a stranger is to be robbed and thwarted it is embarrassing to hear friendly protestations from him, especially when there is no doubt about their truth."

"I thank you," she murmured again and left him abruptly.

It was very early next morning when Armstrong stood by his black horse in the lane under the trees, waiting for his fair charge, who seemed to exercise the privilege of her sex in being late. Old John was already mounted on an animal that, besides carrying him, was pack horse for the luggage required by the young lady on her travels. When the girl appeared Armstrong stepped forward to offer his assistance, but he was a fraction of a second too late, for, ignoring him, she was in her saddle and away before he could utter a word. He admired the light ease with which she accomplished this act and saw at once she was a practical horsewoman, on as good terms with her steed as he was with his own. She rode down the lane to the main road, then turned south, never looking again toward the house she was leaving—hurrying, indeed, as if it were her purpose to get out of sight as soon as possible.

After an hour of this Armstrong began to wonder where he was going. Nothing had been said to him regarding the route to be taken, and the girl went on so confidently, never turning her head, as if she and not he were to be the leader of the expedition. He laughed quietly at this. Then, gathering rein, Bruce, requiring no other hint, stepped out and overtook the horse in front.

"Have you any plan marked out with reference to the roads we may take or the towns we are to pass through or avoid?" he asked.

"Yes. We will reach York tonight, then follow the London road as far as Stamford. After that we branch southwest through Northampton to Oxford."

"It is all settled then," he said, smiling.

"I know the way well, and you told me you were a stranger. I have passed between York and London four times," she answered seriously, and with a chilling tone of finality which seemed to indicate that further discussion was unnecessary. The infection may have been too subtle to impress itself upon the young man, for he continued with obvious geniality:

"You have wandered far afield for one so young."

To this remark the girl made no reply. Her eyes were fixed on the road ahead, and Armstrong, being at a loss to continue a one sided conversation, found nothing further to say. He was vaguely conscious of the constraint that had come between them, for she had talked with him freely enough the day before, but he could not account for the change. He had always been accustomed to the free spoken communion of men and knew little of the vagaries of the other sex, whom he had ever regarded as the more talkative. And so through Yorkshire the silent progress continued.

"This is not unlike some parts of Scotland," he said at last, in an ill fated attempt to revive a conversation which he did not recognize as dead and beyond his power to resuscitate. The girl reined in her horse, and Bruce stopped through sympathy, old John halting, that the respectful distance he kept might not be decreased. Frances held her head high, and there was a sparkle of determination in her eye. It was best to begin right, and she would put this persistent man in his place, a task already too long delayed. And perhaps the putting of him in his place would lessen the clamor of her own conscience.

"Sir, who are you?" was her amazing inquiry.

"Me?" gasped Armstrong. "I'm a Scotsman."

"Perhaps I should have said, what are you?"

"You mean— Oh, I'm a drover—a dealer in cattle."

"Did my brother tell you who I am?"

"He told me his father was the late Earl of Strafford."

"Yesterday I was grateful to you for the aid you afforded my brother, as I should have been grateful to my servant if he had occupied your place, but I should not have forgotten the distance between that servant and myself. Strafford's daughter does not recognize a drover as her social equal. I ask you to take the position I set for you when I began this journey."

"Do you mean, madam, that I am to ride with your servant?"

"That is what I mean."

"I have no objection in the least. From the conversations we had together he shows himself a man of knowledge and a lover of horses, which is an easy passport to my liking."

"I am glad his company is so much to your taste, and I shall be obliged to you if you fall back with him, as I wish to ride alone."

"That will I not do under command, for, although I may cherish old John's conversation, I cannot admit the claim of superiority you set up. I am a drover, I said, and so your ancient King Alfred might with equal truth have dubbed himself a baker, if old tales are true. I am William Armstrong of Gilnochie Towers, lord of the lands of Langholm, Dalbeight, Stapil-Gortown, Shield and Dalblane. I can trace my lineage as far back as any noble in England and come to my ancestral thieves as soon as they. In courtesy we Armstrongs are the equals of any Englander, and in battle we have never turned our backs on them. The castles of my clan line the river Liddel, and when I ride with my friend, the Earl of Traquair, I ride by his side and not with his followers."

"Sir, you overwhelm me with your grandeur," said the girl loftily, rejoiced to find herself in what promised to be a quarrel. She was human, and thought it would prove easier to rob an enemy than a friend. "I thought the crowns of England and Scotland were united, but I see I was mistaken. I travel with the king of Scotland, and he is doubtless on his way to Oxford to confer with his brother, the king of England."

"Madam, I go to greet his majesty Charles, and if he dare to address me as you have done I will tell him I am more king of the border than he is king of England, and my saying will be true."

Frances Wentworth bowed low in mock humility.

"Your highness of the border, will you permit me to ride in your train? I know I am not worthy, but I ask the boon that I may seek consolation in communion with my servitor."

"Madam, you may ride where you please," gruffly replied the thoroughly angered Scot, tingling with wounded pride.

"Sir, I thank you," replied the maiden, bowing again, "and I am delighted that you should exhibit to one so lowly as I an example of that courtesy of which you just now boasted."

To this the indignant man made no reply, thus changing his former relations as regarded conversation. He urged on his horse, and she, after pausing awhile and seeing that John would approach no nearer, also went on, and thus the three kept for the day their new relative positions. Unheeded, the sun passed the meridian, and at last she was roused to a sense of her surroundings by the stopping of her ungraided horse before a roadside inn. Armstrong, his black steed brought to a standstill across the highway, sat rigidly upright, and he said when she thus unexpectedly looked at him with something of startled appeal in her eyes:

"We stop here for rest and refreshment."

SIR WILFRID AT SOREL

Prime Minister Promises News of Election Date Soon.

Reviews the History of His Government Since 1896, and Says the Conservative Governments Preceding Him Were Composed of Respectable Men But That They Were Discordantly Related—Against Government Ownership.

Sorel, Sept. 29.—"I have been asked to tell you when we are to have a general election. I will not answer that now, but I will give you a reply in a few days."

The above declaration was made here yesterday by the Prime Minister of Canada, Sir Wilfrid Laurier. Sir Wilfrid was accompanied by Hon. J. R. Prefontaine, Hon. L. P. Brodeur, Hon. R. Lemieux and about all the Federal members from Montreal and the Richelieu district.

The Premier's Claims.

The Premier's speech was listened to by 4,000 to 5,000 people and was a lengthy review of the acts of the Ministry since after the elections of 1896. Speaking of the retirement of the Conservative Government, Sir Wilfrid said it had been composed of respectable men, but there had been so much discord that their fall gave pleasure to friends and enemies alike. He was called to power, and claimed that as heaven helps those who help themselves, the Laurier Government had been the instrument in the hands of Providence to bring about a development the like of which had never been seen. His Government had been one of reconciliation and in the past eight years had brought peace and happiness to the Dominion.

Tariff Not Perfect.

Referring to the tariff he said it was not perfect, but it had given general satisfaction. Every tariff should be investigated every seven or eight years, and it was the intention of the Ministry to make a second investigation and reform the tariff according to the wants of the country. Sir Wilfrid then eloquently defended the tariff of preference as well as the superiority of the English market over the American. He had given his answer on this question when at the heart of the Empire and surrounded by his colleagues, he had told the Imperial authorities that Canada was ready to make a treaty of commerce with Great Britain, and would discuss with them the details of such a treaty.

Tarte Remains His Friend.

He then defended the Government's policy of transportation and added that he had always been in accord on this question with Hon. Mr. Tarte, who, although no longer his colleague, had remained his friend, and Sir Wilfrid said he wanted to acknowledge what the ex-minister had done for Sorel. After declaring that the South Shore Railway would soon be completed to Point Levis, the Prime Minister took up the question of the Grand Trunk Pacific, claiming that it would not really cost the country more than $13,000,000.

Sir Wilfrid added, "I believe I will live long enough to see the Grand Trunk Pacific completed from the Atlantic to the Pacific, and I hope to see a steamer leaving Quebec loaded with merchandise from Asia and a train going west loaded with merchandise from Europe destined for the Orient."

C.P.R. Not Adequate.

He declared that the C.P.R. would not be able to meet the requirements of the Northwest, which was filling up at the rate of 100,000 a year. The Premier also said that the new trade would take west the manufactured goods of the east, for he wanted Canada and not the United States to supply the future population of the great west. He believed that the Grand Trunk Pacific would be the shortest route to the Orient. The Premier referred to Port Simpson as the point of departure, but Sir Wilfrid evidently spoke in a general sense.

Against Public Ownership.

He maintained that Mr. Borden's railway policy was not a serious one, and as a matter of fact the Conservative leader had not the support of many of his supporters. Sir Wilfrid said that if the Government system had been extended to the Pacific, that road would ruin the company-owned railways or the latter would ruin the Government road. Although the I.C.R. had been administered by both parties, Sir Wilfrid felt that the result had been far from fortifying Mr. Borden's policy.

Before concluding the Liberal leader spoke of the decadence of the Conservative party since the days of Sir John Macdonald, and he lauded his development of the party he had conducted to power.

He then announced that Mr. Bruneau was the Government candidate, and proceeded to make the brief declaration quoted above. General election addresses were also delivered by Hon. J. R. Prefontaine, Hon. L. P. Brodeur and Hon. R. Lemieux.

STILL UNANSWERED.

The Question: Where Did the Money Come From?

Simcoe, Sept. 29.—The town was again crowded yesterday with election witnesses who were not aware that the trial of the petition against A. M. Little was concluded on Tuesday night and his seat vacated. About 100 of these got off the east-bound train in the morning, and a large number drove in from near-by towns. They had been subpoenaed by the Conservatives to give evidence on the charges that were to have been investigated yesterday. [illegible] receiving their day's allowance [illegible] returned home. The costs for these witnesses will rest upon the petitioner unless the judges concede the point raised by Mr. Blackstock on Tuesday. The calling of so many [illegible] bears out the statement of the Conservative counsel that they were fully prepared to enter upon all branches of the case. The question: "Where did the money come from?" it is regretted has not been answered to the satisfaction of anybody.

Dunlop's Resignation Received.

Toronto, Sept. 29.—The Speaker of the Legislature received yesterday the resignation of E. A. Dunlop as M.P. P., for North Renfrew, and according to the act must "forthwith" address his warrant for the issue of a new writ to the Clerk of the Crown in Chancery. Whether the Clerk of the Crown in Chancery shall "forthwith" do his part, or wait for three months, the public may guess at for the present.

FAIRS OPENED.

Sunderland, Sept. 29.—Mr. R. R. Gamey, M.P.P., opened the Brock Fair here yesterday. He delivered an address on New Ontario. 4,000 people listened to him.

Chatham, Sept. 29. — Yesterday Hon. Sydney Fisher, Minister of Agriculture, opened the Peninsular Fair here. He made some suggestions to the farmers present, and was well received.

Health of the Province.

Toronto, Sept. 29.—The report for August of the condition of the health of the Province shows an increase of 43.1 per cent. in infectious cases and of 20.5 per cent. in deaths, due to typhoid, diphtheria and tuberculosis. There were typhoid outbreaks at London, St. Thomas and North Bay. Comparative tables show:

	1904.		1903.
	Cases.	Deaths.	Cases.	Deaths.
Smallpox	3	...	15	1
Scarlet fever	122	9	163	14
Diphtheria	173	25	122	24
Measles	3	1	32	6
Whooping cough	19	15	44	16

Wife Dead Three Days.

Brantford, Sept. 29.—The wife dead in bed and the husband in a near-by chair in a state of drunken debauch, was the sight that met the police officers yesterday, when they forced an entry into the home of Allan S. Donaldson, 20 Wellington street, this city. The woman had been dead about three days. Donaldson was arrested. An inquest will be held on Thursday night. As no marks were found on the woman's body it is supposed the woman died a natural death. Mrs. Donaldson was about 80 years of age. The couple were only recently married.

Will Fight On.

Buenos Ayres, Sept. 29.—Notwithstanding the general feeling of satisfaction in Uruguay over the conclusion of a treaty of peace between the Government and the revolutionists, eight revolutionary leaders, including two members of the family of the late General Aparicio Saraiva, have announced that they decline to recognize the action of Gen. Munoz, who claimed to act for the revolutionists, and that they will continue hostilities.

Ask Provincial Audit.

Essex, Sept. 29.—A number of property owners, dissatisfied with the showing made in the finances of the town, have petitioned the Ontario Government to make an audit of the books of the Council. The rate for some time has been 30 mills on the dollar; no permanent improvements have been made and all that is being taken care of are current expenditures and debentures falling due.

C.P.R. Strike Over.

Winnipeg, Sept. 29.—By all intents and purposes the C.P.R. strike ended yesterday morning, the machinists and blacksmiths, the two chief orders out, receiving satisfactory advances, while the allied mechanics and moulders reached a settlement during the afternoon.

Brother of Tolstoi Dead.

Moscow, Sept. 29.—Count Sergius Tolstoi, the brother of Count Leo, is dead. He was the very antithesis of Count Leo, residing on his estate in lordly style and living the life of a veritable epicure, while his brother, clad in homespun, leads a life like an ascetic.

Lake Simcoe to Sail.

Montreal, Sept. 29.—The SS. Lake Simcoe, mined here a few days ago by the Dominion Government, will be cleared to-day and will sail Friday at the latest.

—St. Andrew's congregation will hold a reunion on Friday night.

RIOTOUS NAVVIES.

Took Possession of C.P.R. Train and Shot the Engineer.

Winnipeg, Sept. 29.—A gang of Italian navvies employed by the C. P.R. drove the engineer and crew from the work train upon which they were employed near Caristadt station yesterday. One of the cars was derailed and several of the Italians were injured. The uninjured men secured a gun, and, going to the locomotive, shot the engineer in the arm and back. The train crew interfered, whereupon they were chased from the train by the Italians. Special police were ordered to the scene from Fort William, and the ringleaders of the gang were arrested. Engineer Towne's injuries are painful but not serious. He was taken to Fort William Hospital.

Guilty of Murder.

Toronto, Sept. 29.—The jury which inquired into the death of Marcus H. Perryman at the Dunn avenue crossing brought in a verdict that the evidence shows that the said crossing is a most dangerous one, and that in the opinion of this jury whoever is responsible for the public safety, whether it be the Mayor, the Board of Control or the City Council, is morally, even if not legally, guilty of murder; and further, that the mayor should immediately cause gates to be erected at Dunn avenue crossing, and maintained at the city's expense if necessary."

Fire Causes Panic.

Brighton, Sept. 29.—Fire broke out at 10 last night in the pressing department of W. N. Davidson's tailor shop, but was quickly extinguished. A panic was narrowly averted at the opera house, where some one foolishly gave the alarm during the progress of an entertainment. The crowd rushed out without any serious injuries though.

Might Be Worse.

Horrified Mother—I just this minute saw Mr. Nicefellow's arm around your waist. It's perfectly awful. Repentant Daughter—Y-e-s, mother, but it would be a great deal more awful to see his arm around some other girl's waist.

Hue Trouble.

First Boarding House Mistress—I've been it figured out that people can live on 12 cents a day. Second Boarding House Mistress—Ah! But you can't get them to do it.

Yesterday morning it was found that the earth above the coffin had been removed to the depth of several feet. Tools from the sexton's store-house had been used for the purpose. The stone slabs covering the remains lay bare, but had not been disturbed. It is thought that the perpetrators of the outrage were disturbed in their work and made off. This is the second attempt to remove the body during the past week.

The Heaviest Card Cases

One of the latest decrees of fashion is that the card case shall match in color the costume of "milady." These can be easily and quickly made from velvet leather, and when lined with silk of the same or a contrasting shade, they look very pretty. The Review Stationery Department has a full line of velvet leather in the popular shades of brown, green, grey and red. This leather for the card cases is but a trifle, and if any have a design fashioned upon it, or a pretty silver initial fastened on to make it more elaborate—The Review Stationery Department.

ANOTHER GOOD PRACTICE

RUGBY MEN HAD A WORKOUT ON EXHIBITION GROUNDS.

There was a Good Turnout and the Team Will be in Great Shape for Saturday's Match.

The local bunch had another great practice last night on the exhibition grounds. The light was very good, and the players were able to have a great work out. About twenty players were out in uniform, and were put through some warm work by Capt. Crowley. The following players were out:Crowley, Ford, Morgan, Shaw, Gillespie, Burnham, Bickay, Gilbert, Meagher, Noble, Cameron, Hartubaine, Green, Dillon, Craig, Seaver Hook, O'Brien, Whitney. The team although they did not have much practice with the signals, went through the different plays very well last night, and should be more in signals when the referee's whistle blows on Saturday. A notable feature of the practice was the tackling of the team. They seemed to take to it like a baby to a bottle and almost every time they got the man they went after. Gillespie, a product of the City League, was found out at quarter last night, and in all probability will fill that position on Saturday. He plays a very nice game, and should easily make good. Gilbert is playing better every practice, and will also likely hold a position on the wing line. His tackling is superb; he catches his man low and brings him down hard every time. The halves worked well together last night, and displayed some great combination work. They also seem to keep the Carnegie's back division guessing all the way through. The way Noble will be very strong, also talking about two good candidates for each position on the line, and the management will have their own troubles in picking out the lucky ones. A few of the players took a run from the exhibition grounds up to the Y.M.C.A. after the work out.

NO REDUCTION FOR SCHOOL BOARD

THE NEW ACT DISCUSSED BY A JOINT MEETING.

The Members of the Board of Education do not Favor an Sweeping a Reduction of Numbers as the Act Provides for.

Last night at a joint meeting of the Town Council and the Board of Education there was brought to light another of the questionable advantages which Peterborough enjoys as a large town rather than as a city. The meeting was called to discuss the new act relative to the election of members of Boards of Education. Under this measure Peterborough, with her 14,000 or more people, but a town nevertheless, is entitled to just the same sized Board as the smallest town in the country, namely seven, elected by the people, and one representative from the Separate School Board. Ald. Morrison presided at the meeting and other gentlemen present were Mayor Roger, Aldermen H. Best, R. F. McWilliams, E. Mason, R. Hicks, F. Adams, W. Scott, W. J. Johnston, R. Clinkscale and H. Rush and the following members of the School Board—Messrs. J. J. Hartley, (chairman) W. H. Hill, H. Morgan, R. B. Rogers, Wm. Pringle, F. J. Jamieson, and Jas Stevenson.

The resolution introduced at last Council meeting by Ald. McWilliams was read. Its passage meant the necessary steps on the part of the council to have the reduction made in accordance with the Act. Mr. McWilliams explained that it was along the lines suggested by the Board at the beginning of the year, and he agreed with the opinion then expressed that the business could be performed by a number much less than seventeen as at present. He had no fault to find with the present policy of the Board, however, and he was inclined to the belief that, on a general vote of the people, the best of the present Board would be returned, and hence business on hand would be little effected. The election under the new act, similar to that for Aldermen, would make members of the Board more directly responsible to the people.

Mr. Jas. Stevenson, the father of the Board, expressed the opinion that a reduction at the present time would be unwise; the business was now done well and to create a change might interfere with plans under way. Mr. J. J. Hartley held to this opinion also. No change should be made at the present time, because of very important matters in hand such as the introduction of the free text book system and the proposed erection of a new Collegiate.

Mr. W. H. Hill was inclined to regard the Act as in the light of an injustice as applied to Peterborough This place, as a town, was only entitled to a Board of eight ,while other smaller centres, incorporated as cities, were allowed ten. His opinion was that the council should apply in January for special legislation allowing the town ten members. Eight, he considered, did not form a sufficiently large Board. He agreed with others that there were important questions now being worked out by the Board, and any interference for purposes of reduction might cause complication. In reply to Ald. McWilliams, who suggested that, seven of the best men already on the Board might be returned in an election under the new Act, Mr. Hill was inclined to the belief that an election was a very uncertain thing and might upset the entire personnel of the institution. At present there were 17 members, but there was very seldom a full attendance, so that if a reduction were made, the number present to do business might dwindle down to be pretty small. The necessity for a strong Board was emphasized in reference to the new plan of free text books in public schools. This plan had to be carefully worked out; it was easy to have a failure and these cause the town considerable loss. The system was one which was very greatly appreciated by those interested in schools, especially the poorer people; it was a good system involving the best from towns in which it was adopted. Mr. Hill stated that he did not hold the present Board to be the best, but it might be very easy to get a worse one.

Mr. H. Morgan expressed the opinion that the present Board was too unwieldy. Seven or eight, men now did the work anyway, and he thought they could always do it. Mr. Jamieson did not consider the matter of reduction a serious matter. He was inclined to favor the reduction but held that the present was hardly an opportune time.

Mr. R. B. Rogers agreed with Mr. Hill that the Act did not do justice to places the size of Peterborough, and held that if a change should be made it would not do wise at the present time. Mr. Pringle saw things in this light also, referring to the importance of a careful initial operation of the text book system, and the carrying out of plans looking to increased accommodation for pupils by the erection of a new High School.

Ald. McWilliams pointed out that it was very doubtful whether the town could get legislation granting the right to have 10 members. On a former occasion when application was being made for the town, the attitude of the Legislative Committee was significant of the fondness expressed by one of the members. "The trouble with Peterborough is that she wants to ridicule a town with the advantages of a city and that cannot do that." Ald. McWilliams stated that he had no desire to press the resolution if the desire of the meeting was that no action should be taken at present.

Ald. Adams pointed out that a vote on the question of incorporation might be taken at the next municipal contest and if the people were favorable the town would eventually be entitled to the ten members under the Act.

Ald. Best's opinion was that in case of an election for school trustees there might be thirty members nominated and probably none of the present members would be returned.

It being apparent that a resolution in favor of reduction should not be acted upon at the present time, the one introduced by Ald. McWilliams was withdrawn.

The Mayor read a letter from Mr. Robert Stuart stating that he could not be present on the Muldrum sidewalk question until next week. In the meantime, therefore, the Mayor will endeavor to arrange a meeting on a date favorable to all, of the C.P.R. and the Canal Co's representatives and Mr. W. H. Muldrum.

EAST DURHAM'S RECEPTION TO CONSERVATIVE LEADER

ing a transcontinental railway under the control of and built and owned by the people of Canada as their own road. It is for you to say and I have not much doubt as to what your verdict will be. (Applause.)

NO POLITICS IN MILITIA.

Touching upon the Dundonald incident the Conservative leader strongly advocated the keeping of the militia free from political influence and he paid a tribute to the memory of Col. Arthur Williams with whose two sons he was well acquainted. The leader said the Conservative party had always hoped that so far as the judiciary and the militia of Canada were concerned partizanship would not enter into them.

"We have lost Lord Dundonald," Mr. Borden went on, "whose only object was to make the militia force of the Dominion so efficient that we could repell an invasion at any time. But, perhaps, we are to congratulate ourselves that we have Sidney Fisher yet with us." (Laughter.)

Taking up the fiscal policy of the Liberal party Mr .Borden asked if any Conservative present could tell him what that policy was. "If so," he declared, "that gentleman is able to do more than the leaders of the party in power have been able to do during the last three or four years." The Conservative party stand for adequate protection—protection such as would protect and give the Canadian people control of the Canadian market. What had been the result of the Liberal attitude on protection? In 1901 the imports of all kinds from the United States to Canada were $107,000,000. The past year they were $151,000,000—an increase of $43,000,000 [illegible] on imported commodities. These might just as well have been manufactured in Canada and the $100,000,000 paid out in wages in the making of the products orientated in the Dominion. Canada was the third best customer of the United States and bought from them more manufactured goods than any other country. But look at the other side. What had the United States bought from Canada? In 1901 our sales were $67,000,000. During the past year they were $90,000,000. The falling off in four years had been over a million dollars, while our imports from across the border had increased from across the border had increased $42,000,000 in the same period. This was not good business for the people of Canada. It is in the interests of our people that a large portion of the goods now bought from the United States should be manufactured in this country and the money circulated here, giving employment to our own people. What the great Conservative party proposes is much a revision of the tariff as will accomplish this result. We stand for a national fiscal policy of adequate protection and a national transcontinental railway policy—public ownership."

Mr. Borden closed with an eloquent per-oration in which he appealed not to Conservatives alone, but to all independent thinking men — and he believed that the appeal would not be in vain as from responses received by him from every province came the glad tidings that the tide was in their favor and the grand old party would be once more returned to power by the free and independent electors of this great Dominion.

NATIONAL PICTURE GALLERY.

Mr. W. B. Northrop, M. P., East Hastings, closed the speech-making with a rattling fine address that was well received. He sketched some political pictures which had been presented to the people of Canada during the eight years of rule under the present administration. He also contrasted the divergent utterances of the Premier at different times and those of his colleagues, especially on the tariff question; and their profession and performances in the matter of appointments to offices where personal character and fitness were not considered in party gifts of places at the public trough. The Liberal party had kept one promise in the matter of tariff revision—that was as nearly as they had kept any pledge. They had removed the duty on agricultural implements to the delight of the Western Canada farmers. Artificial limbs were [illegible] duty free. This of course included wooden legs and Mr. Northrop commented his hearers that wooden legs were nothing more or less than stumping machines, so that, at least, the duty remained. (Laughter and applause.)

Mr. Northrop closed by predicting a Conservative victory—the party now being thoroughly united and ready for the fray.

The gathering broke up with rousing cheers for the King and Mr. Borden, who was afterwards entertained to Mr. Ward's residence accompanied by the band and surrounded by scores of enthusiastic admirers.

THE FIRST ACCIDENT

Harry Edmonson's Close Shave with a Street Car.

The first accident which has occurred in connection with the street cars, took place yesterday, a little after 5 o'clock. It appears that Mr. Harry Edmonson was driving on the right side of George street, and went to cross the track to go into the yard o. the McDonald Lumber Company. He heard a street car coming and tried to turn his horse around and cross to the right side again. The horse got clear of the track, but the car struck the wagon and threw Mr. Edmonson out. The front wheels of the trunk went over Mr. Edmonson. The car was quickly stopped and the unfortunate man was placed in it. He was taken to the home of his daughter, Mrs. W. Cunningham, London street. Drs. Caldwell and Morgan were summoned and attended to Mr. Edmonson's injuries. It was found, upon examination, that his hip was broken. The injured man is progressing as favorably as could be expected. He wishes to make clear to the public that the accident occurred through no fault on the part of the motorman of the car, but was entirely due to his own carelessness.

FUNERAL OF MRS. HALL

Many Tributes of Regard from the Societies with Which she had Been Connected.

The funeral of the late Mrs. Sheriff Hall took place at three o'clock yesterday afternoon, from the family residence, Hunter street, to Little Lake cemetery. The services were conducted by Rev. Dr. Torrance and Rev. J. A. Wilson, pastor and assistant of St. Paul's Presbyterian church. For many years Mrs. Hall had been a member of that congregation, and that her active interest in different departments of work was appreciated, and her memory cherished, was emphasized by the large attendance of friends at the funeral, who thus paid a last tribute of respect. The floral offerings were very beautiful, several being from those societies with which Mrs. Hall had identified herself for many years. The gentlemen who acted as pall-bearers were Messrs. W. H. Moore, G. M. Roger, J. W. Bennett, R. M. Donaldson, J. D. Collins and H. C. Rogers.

Mrs. Hall's body reposes in the same plot where is situated the first lot in Little Lake Cemetery—where the late Samuel Allen was interred 54 years ago.

TURNER'S TENTS

Decorated the Fair Grounds on all Sides and Pleased Everyone.

One firm was in evidence everywhere on the fair grounds during the Peterborough exhibition, and that was the old established and thoroughly reliable house of J. J. Turner & Sons. They supplied all the tents for those making special exhibits and running booths of various descriptions. Their goods gave the best of satisfaction to all. The neat and artistic reception marquee, where His Honor, the Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario and Mrs. Clarke met so many of their friends in Peterborough, was put up by Messrs. Turner. It was gaily decorated and richly upholstered for the occasion. This canvas apartment was certainly an attractive one.

Near the main building was another pretty tent of the firm's, while a striking sign, executed by Mr. Reg. Turner, set forth in bold letters the various goods of the firm, including waterproof horse blankets, lap covers, horse blankets, rugs of various kinds. Messrs. Turner & Sons ship goods from one end of Canada to the other, and among the tents made by them, now having a particularly large sale, is the consumptive tent, which is provided with special doors, windows and ventilators. It is exciting great interest, especially among the medical profession. Then there is what is known as the double hospital tent, for the special treatment and isolation of all contagious diseases.

The firm are at all times prepared to execute orders on the shortest possible notice. They carry a large and well assorted stock in their capacious establishment. Visitors to Peterborough are cordially invited to call and inspect the sources of their wonderful business house, the quality and high class character of whose goods are known from one end of Canada to the other, and are each season more widely sold and largely distributed.

MR. ORVILLE SHORTLY MARRIED

The Bride was Miss Mabel Louise Howe, of Toronto.

Yesterday at two o'clock, a wedding of interest to friends in Peterborough was solemnized at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. E. T. Howe, 82 Charles-st., Toronto. The bride was their second daughter, Mabel Louise, and the groom Mr. Orville R. Eberly, of Peterborough. The officiating clergyman was Rev. John Neill, D.D. The bride was attended by her sister, while Mr. Arthur Piper was the best man. Mr. and Mrs. Eberly will arrive here this evening, and it is their intention to leave to-morrow to spend a few weeks at Stony Lake.

A NEW CHOIRMASTER

Mr. Mark Wilson of Toronto for St Andrew's.

Mr. Mark M. Wilson, tenor, of Toronto, has been appointed choirmaster of St. Andrew's church and will assist the choir on Saturday night instead of to-night this week.

Mr. Wilson comes very highly recommended as a leader and his conduct of the praise service in St. Andrew's last Sabbath was appreciated.

Mr. Wilson's father was for some twenty years leader in one of the largest churches in Hamilton and the son as a result has taken a deep interest in the Presbyterian Service of Praise.

CONGREGATIONAL RECEPTION

An Entertainment to be Held in St. Andrew's Friday Evening.

The members and adherents of St Andrew's church hold a reception tomorrow (Friday) night in the school room. The programme committee through its convener reported success in providing a first class line of artists, among whom are the following: Miss Lora Lamb, whose work in physical culture and oratory has been highly complimented by the press; Miss D. MacGregor, vocalist, concerning whom the Toronto Globe said, "This young lady possesses an exceptional voice both in quality and compass."; and the excellent qualities and abilities of Mr. Gilbert Markle, violinist, Miss Florence Miller, soloist, Mr. Jos. Legg, tenor, and Master Herb Stewart, boy soprano, are too well known to need special comment.

JAPANESE CAPTURE DA PASS

Mikado's Men Again Begin to be Offensive.

RUSSIANS LEAVING MUKDEN

Japs Are Pressing Hard on Kuropatkin's Left Flank—Several Other Passes in the Da Range Also in the Hands of Japanese — Emergency Ordinance Force Increases Japan's Fighting Force by 200,000 Men.

St. Petersburg, Sept. 30.—News has been received here from Mukden to the effect that the Japanese have at last begun the offensive. They have captured Da Pass and are pressing on General Kuropatkin's left flank. The War Office is unable to confirm this officially, because Kuropatkin's despatches are following the Emperor, but the Associated Press is informed by the general staff that all indications point to the news being correct.

It is believed the Russian abandoned Da Pass without serious resistance. Several other passes of the Da range, eastward of Bentsiaputze, twenty miles southeast of Mukden, are also in the hands of the Japanese.

Kuropatkin is evidently drawing in his forces to the less mountainous country northwestward, where he may decide to give battle. In the meanwhile, sharp fighting is regarded as imminent southeast of Mukden, whence the Japanese are expected to deliver their main attack, the flank movement from the west being of secondary importance.

Increased By 200,000.

Tokio, Sept. 30.—The emergency ordinance amending the army conscription law was gazetted yesterday. It extends the service of the second reservists from five to ten years and abolishes the distinction between the first and second reserve conscripts. Reservists will be retired at the age of 37.

A contemplated increase in the army involves a new scheme of divisional organization, the plan of which has not yet been disclosed.

At the Foreign Office last evening it was stated that the new conscription regulations will augment the available Japanese fighting force by about 200,000 men.

Leave By Embrasure.

Mukden, Sept. 30.—Gen. Kuropatkin has issued an order of the day to the officers on the lessons of the ten days' fighting at Liaoyang, pointing out the shortcomings of both armies, as exposed by the battle.

Russians Leaving Mukden.

London, Sept. 30.—Telegraphing from Newchwang, Sept. 30, The Daily Mail's correspondent says: "The main force of the Russian army has retired to the north of Mukden. Strong bodies of troops have been thrown out to defend both flanks, and the southern approaches to the city have been carefully mined. The indications are that no serious attempt will be made to hold Mukden."

Attack Mukden Nov. 4.

London, Sept. 30.—There is again to-day a noteworthy absence of news from the Far East, accompanied by the activity usual in such cases of rumors concerning the condition of Port Arthur. Reports from Chinese sources at Harbin fix Nov. 4 as the date for a Japanese attack on Mukden. The Daily Telegraph's Shanghai correspondent gives a vivid account of terrible ravages of beriberi among the Japanese, and especially among those besieging Port Arthur, asserting that deaths from disease exceed the number of those killed in the fighting. The Daily Telegraph's correspondent at Simintin learns that on an average 150 railroad trucks per month are reaching there laden with supplies for the Russians.

Japs Pushing Before Simens.

Da Pass, Sept. 30.—The Japanese armies around Liaoyang are reported to be decimated by epidemic due to decaying corpses.

Official News Scarce.

St. Petersburg, Sept. 30.—The absence of the Emperor, who has gone to Odessa, is causing an even greater dearth of official news from the front than has been experienced heretofore.

Communication with Mukden has been practically suspended and St. Petersburg is therefore awaiting another period of anxiety and suspense, just when the intimation had been given that important developments were imminent between the armies of Kuropatkin and Oyama. Port Arthur is more isolated than ever and the only news from that place comes by way of Vladivostock. It contains, however, the hopeful information that the garrison is confident of being able to hold out until the first of the year.

ELECTIONS NOVEMBER 3

Cabinet Meeting Held At Ottawa Decides Upon the Date.

Lord Minto Appointed of the Front By Sir Wilfrid Laurier—Premier Went Immediately On His Return From Seoul Into Cabinet Meeting—Sir Wilfrid Expected to Start At Once On Extensive Campaign Tour.

Ottawa, Sept. 30.—The Prime Minister, Sir Wilfrid Laurier, returned from Seoul yesterday morning, accompanied by Hon. Raymond Prefontaine and Hon. Rodolphe Lemieux, and immediately proceeded to the Council Chamber in the eastern block, where a Cabinet meeting was in progress.

In the afternoon the Premier called on the Governor-General, and it is expected that as a result dissolution will be announced officially this morning with nominations October 27, polling Nov. 3rd.

It is understood that the Premier will start at once on an extensive campaign tour, covering as much territory as possible.

Told to Get Ready.

Meanwhile every preparation here and elsewhere is being made for the appeal to the country. Last night the word was sent broadcast to Liberals all over Canada to get ready.

News was received here yesterday afternoon from Vancouver, B.C., that Joe Martin has announced his intention to run against Ralph Smith, M.P., in Nanaimo, B.C.

The date of polling, No. 3, is later than usual, though not so late as it was in 1900, when it was Nov 7. Previous elections for the House of Commons have been held on the following dates: 1867, Aug. 7—Sept. 20; 1872, July 20; 1874, Jan. 22; 1878, Sept. 17; 1882, June 20; 1887, Feb. 22; 1891, March 5; 1896, June 23.

Le Patrie Learns It.

Montreal, Sept. 30.—A special to Le Patrie from Ottawa states that polling day will be Nov. 3.

MR. BORDEN CONFERS IT.

Addresses First Political Meeting of the Campaign At Napanee.

Napanee, Sept. 30.—A large and representative crowd of the electors of Lennox and Addington greeted the first appearance of R. L. Borden, K. C., M.P., leader of the Conservative party in Canada, at the Opera House here last night. The distinguished visitor, who was accompanied by Mrs. Borden, arrived here at noon and was met at the depot by a large number of supporters. The Opera House was filled in the evening. An address to the visitor of the evening, Mr. Borden, was read.

First Political Meeting.

Mr. Borden in his opening remarks said he had the honor of addressing the first political meeting of the campaign, as he had received a telegram since coming on the platform from a friend in Ottawa, which read: "Parliament dissolved; nominations Oct. 27, polling Nov. 3."

In referring to the local member, he said that Mr. Uriah Wilson was not heard very often in the House, but when he did speak it was to the point, as your worthy representative is well informed and has given the Government some warm arguments on the question of immigration.

The speaker then referred to the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway, which Sir Wilfrid Laurier has been trying to "railroad" through Parliament. He did not think it was necessary for this country to burden itself in the manner proposed by the present Government. He also spoke of the policy of the Liberal Government as being unsound and unfair to the people of the country at large. Sir Wilfrid went to Great Britain and said this country wanted no preference in British markets and, in consequence thereof, we have, as you have been unable to get any.

Face to Face.

In closing, Mr. Borden said that the Conservative party were face to face with the great questions of the day. The issues he left to the good of the electors. He had done his duty and trusted that when the returns came in on election day the good news of Mr. Wilson's return to Parliament would be heralded throughout the country.

Mr. Broder of Dundas, Mr. Pringle of Stormont and Mr. Avery of Addington also spoke. After giving three cheers for the King, Mr. Borden and Mr. Wilson the meeting, which will long be remembered in Napanee, came to a close.

Seven to One

That is about the ratio. About seven times as many persons are injured as die from all causes yearly.

Accidents are a more prolific cause of death than any disease except lung diseases.

Twice as many people are accidentally killed as die of old age. Does it not seem reasonable to you as a business man that it would be to your interest to carry an accident policy?

YOU are subject to over two hundred diseases, and liable to accidents without number.

Official figures prove that One Man in Five carrying an Accident and Sickness Policy makes a claim for indemnity each year.

TOWN COUNCIL

The Daily Review.

FRIDAY, SEPT. 28, 1906.

WATCH!

It may safely be assumed that a general election for the House of Commons is near at hand, and it is well to be prepared for it in every way. The friends of Sir Wilfrid Laurier will try their utmost to disassociate themselves from the mass of corruption and fraud that has been exposed in the Provincial election trials. No confidence can be placed in these disclaimers. Mr. Ross has on previous occasions lent his organized machine to Sir Wilfrid and his friends, as in the flagrant cases of Brockville and West Huron. They in return have used their patronage to reward crimes committed in the Provincial arena, as in the instances of Preston and Jackson. The well known operators for the Ross machine may be expected in the different constituencies at their old tricks just as if it were an election for the Legislature. Indeed Mr. Ross has promised Sir Wilfrid that he will give him a majority from Ontario, and we know what that means. It is like his promise to f-i-g-h-t, of which we have seen the fulfilment. There should be a sharp watch kept for these well-known leaders of the machine and they should not be allowed to pursue their criminal avocations.

THE LIEUTENANT-GOVERNOR.

It is seriously proposed that the office of Lieutenant-Governor should be abolished, as being unnecessary and useless. If the view taken of his duties by Mr. Mortimer Clark last February, that he is bound to do without consideration, whatever men for the moment in office may tell him, his position would certainly be useless and might well be abolished. The senior page with a rubber stamp to be fixed at the order of the Premier would be quite as useful. We do not, however, take this view of the duties of the Crown or its representatives. There is one occasion, without taking into consideration more debatable points, when the Lieut.-Governor clearly has very important and onerous duties, and has to act on his own initiative. This is when the people have either transferred their support to new leaders or have given an indecisive verdict. In the first place his duty is plainly to see that the will of the people is enforced, even if he has to use compulsion. In the second place his duty may be less cut and dried and obvious, but it is equally binding, that is to hold the scales level, and to see that effect is given to the untrammelled choice of the people.

We do not agree with those who are urging the Lieutenant-Governor to demand the resignation of his Ministers at the present moment. Mr. Ross has not a majority, but the representation is not complete, and whatever our opinion may be, we cannot say positively what might be the result of filling the seats. Having been allowed to retain office so far, his fate may well be left to the issues of the bye-elections. The mistake was made when the Lieut.-Governor allowed Mr. Ross to call a session of the House at an abnormally early period, because, as the event has since proved; he knew that the courts would unseat his fraudulent supporters. In fact his request to close the courts was a plain confession that he had not a legal majority, and therefore was not qualified to advise His Honour. He should have been asked to resign, or to face the courts and the consequent bye-elections. However, the time has gone by, and we have to deal with the present circumstance. We cannot believe that the Lieut.-Governor, having been once so preposterously tricked, will allow Mr. Ross to fool him again by some fresh device, but will hold the scales even and see that the people are allowed to decide without any undue interference.

The Independent Ottawa Journal asks:

"How is it, we wonder, that among the twelve persons reported by the judges for corruption in the Soo elections, the man who, according to the evidence, planned the Minnie M. trip—Sutherland, the Liberal chief organizer for the election—was not named?"

With characteristic dishonesty and cowardice Sir Frederick Borden is attacking Lord Dundonald by publishing three lines of the old Militia Act with the General's suggested amendments. The object is to convey the false impression that Lord Dundonald wished to introduce compulsory service. He merely consolidated in one clause provisions which were contained in the old act and are also embodied in the new act. Why does not Sir Frederick list like a man and admit to suppress Lord Dundonald's [illegible]

CULVERWELL SQUEEZED

ALSO KNOCKED IN FINANCIAL CIRCLES IN PETERBOROUGH.

Tells Port Hope People About his Financial Career Here and in Lindsay—Life is Short.

Mr. J. Alex. Culverwell is again looming up large in the public eye down in Port Hope. The prospect of making that town an iron centre is now being emphasized, and he urges the Council there to get into touch with an American concern which is at present looking for a location in Canada. Mr. Culverwell is credited with making this somewhat remarkable and rather statement referring to his power at Burleigh Falls. "We have got tired waiting for an opening for a market for our electric power in Peterborough." There is nothing to indicate that Mr. Culverwell ever looked for a market here, or took advantage of opportunities which pointed to development of the power at Burleigh Falls as a profitable enterprise. It would seem that Mr. Culverwell might be regarded with greater satisfaction in the places where he is apparently seeking to exploit himself and his Company if definite work were actually undertaken looking to the conversion of the falls at Burleigh into something of marketable value. It is a pleasure to note that Mr. Culverwell is awakening to the fact that life is very short. Referring to Mr. Culverwell's speech at a Council meeting in Port Hope the other night, the Guide says:—

He said that Port Hope with its water transportation and low freight rates along with its grand harbor facilities on Lake Ontario is most admirably situated for works using heavy raw material for their manufacture, such as irons and coal. We have already two large iron concerns from the States established lately in Port Hope, together employing some 250 hands, and there is every reason why others should follow and thus make Port Hope an iron centre. Besides, it is the most natural, cheapest and probable outlet of the Trent Valley Canal.

His Company intend transmitting electric power from Burleigh Falls to the Lakefront towns, having lately received written assurances of some fifty thousand annual revenues. He said: "We have got tired of waiting for an opening for a market for our electric power in Peterborough." His Company have expended thousands of dollars in pushing ahead Peterborough interests as a manufacturing centre, and last year had spent $1,200 in cash in advertising alone. He said he had the faculty of seeing a good thing in nature before others grasped that fact, and he only followed his father and grandfather, who had in their early days been successful water-power engineers. He had shown that in discovering valuable water power, and also the Trent Valley Canal—and the world's canal experts had written complimenting him on his ability. In his early youth he had started from its inception the Edison Electric Company's business in Western Ontario.

He had been credited with being the cause of the great recent developments of electric power and manufacturing power at Peterborough. His competitors had openly admitted that. He had taught them the use of the vast water powers that were idly washing the rocks around Peterborough, and to save themselves they had developed these water-powers and brought manufacturers there, so that now they are all utilized, with the exception of a small water-power near Lakefield.

While his Company was at last assured of some revenue in Peterborough, yet it was not sufficient to justify construction at Burleigh Falls being initialed. He had been squeezed at Peterborough and Lindsay, and "knocked" also in financial centres by interested persons, so that his attention has been turned to other directions for a market for his power, and he was glad to say he was more than surprised at his recent success in securing such large revenues in Port Hope and Cobourg and on the lake front, where great developments in manufacturing are taking place. At this moment he felt safe in stating that he could assure the Council that power from Burleigh Falls would be delivered in Port Hope next spring. Besides the hydraulic development was a mere bagatelle to complete. Nature had been gracious. When Burleigh Falls was entirely utilized, then Buckhorn Falls power (the whole of which is owned by deed in fee simple by himself and partner) would be brought down to Cobourg, Lindsay, Port Hope and the lake front, so that thousands of electric power are available for these places, for power and lighting.

Mr. Culverwell said he had done his utmost to secure navigation for Peterborough by the completion of the Trent Valley Canal, recognizing how handicapped Peterborough was in securing industries which used coal and iron and other heavy raw materials—by reason of not having cheap water transportation, but he found power holders in that neighborhood in political circles narrow-minded enough and selfish enough to endeavor to make this canal a power toboome at the expense of the public purse for their private gain, instead of a navigation enterprise for the benefit of all such at attempting to divert canal money for headwater reservoirs and other such dark deeds on the proposed Trenton outlet. Life being short, he intended to devote less time to the public interest—a thankless job—and more to his own private business interests, and these carry electric power to Port Hope, Cobourg and the lake front. His company intended to immediately advertise these places in manufacturing and financial journals extensively.

He had taken up his residence in Port Hope this summer and had now settled upon living there for the future.

In Our Grandfather's Youth

Paralysis was almost unheard of in the youth of our grandparents, and now nearly every newspaper contains a record of someone being stricken with this dreadful form of helplessness. Paralysis is in reality a starving of the nerves, and was always to be prevented by the timely use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, a preparation which has no rival as a creator of nerve force.

NORTH RENFREW

A Regrettable Episode—The Last Hope of the Administration.

The episode is not creditable to Mr. Dunlop, though still less so to the Liberal managers. Mr. Dunlop, if he was not personally involved in corruption, is at least protecting others who were. The Liberal managers are also condoning corruption, and are in the worse light because they were so vociferously protesting that there was a mass of it on Mr. Dunlop's side. Unless also it is that to protect Mr. Hale and cover up corruption on their own side they have been compelled to follow the course they did, they have not only condoned electoral rottenness but have made an awful mess of their two—for North Renfrew was the only hope they had left of being able to show that Conservative election methods are as bad as their own.—Ottawa Journal, Indep.

Surprise the Doctors

Most doctors are astonished at the results obtained by Dr. Chase's Ointment as a cure for eczema, salt rheum and itching skin diseases which are often considered well nigh incurable. By word of mouth from friend to friend the exceptional merits of Dr. Chase's Ointment have gradually become known until it is now standard the world over and has a record of cures unparalleled in the history of medicine.

RADICAL LIQUOR CURE.

In Persia the Drunkard's Knee Are Nailed to the Sidewalk.

"There is only one custom in our country which I would like to see established in America, and that is the custom of dealing with drunkards," said a Persian. "In our country when a man gets drunk we take him and nail him to the sidewalk, driving the spikes through his ears. Then when other people come along they spit in his face and kick him until he is sober. I think this method would do a great deal of good in America, because you have more drunkenness than we do. There are no saloons in Persia, the chief beverage being homemade wine. They don't even know what beer is.

"Our officials have several ways of making prisoners confess to crimes," said the Persian. "The favorite method is to take them on a stand around which all the people of the town gather and then put out one eye. If the crime is not very great an arm is cut off or a leg severed. If it is only a trivial offense probably an ear is sacrificed. Very often innocent people are subjected to these torments, but it cannot be helped.

"The Persians very seldom hang a man for crime. If he kills another he is fined $15 and allowed to go. If he kills ten or a dozen and the people finally decide that he ought to be put out of the way he is hanged. But he is not hanged as they hang men in this country. He is hanged by the feet and a heavy weight is tied to his head. Then he is allowed to die. If the accused prisoner is a woman her hair is shorn from her head, provided the offense is a trivial one. If it is a serious one she may be turned into a room filled with mad cats and be scratched to death.

"Persian jails are dark cellars and contain no furniture whatever. The government doesn't feed prisoners, this being left to friends of the accused. If he happens to have no friends he will starve to death. Oftentimes when food is brought by friends the keepers of the prison and the other officials appropriate it, so the prisoners have to go hungry."

TITLES.

The centurion, as the name implies, was the commander of 100 men in the Roman army.

The title bailiff was formerly very honorable, and the official was vested with many important powers.

The title colonel comes from the word almost the same in several languages, signifying a column. The colonel was so called because he led or commanded the column.

The title mayor comes from the French and originally signified "one who keeps guard." He was the head steward of a city, administering its affairs in the name of the king.

Imperator was originally a title of honor bestowed on a victorious general. After the downfall of the Roman republic it became the title of the supreme ruler and had the same of our word emperor.

The royal title hog has now almost disappeared and what used in the altered form of hog is applied to a military rank in the Turkish army. Originally it was deemed more honorable than that of sultan.

HAPPENINGS IN LAKEFIELD

Home Circle Organizing there—The Government Painting the Locks.

Mr. and Mrs. Kilbourn arrived in the village on Saturday evening.

Mr. Herb. Montgomery spent a couple of days in Kingston this week on business.

Rev. Mr. Hamilton, of Toronto, occupied the pulpit of the Presbyterian church on Sunday last.

About twenty of our village people drove out to the residence of Mr. Fred. Amys on Monday night, and spent a very pleasant evening there. Mr. Amys makes an ideal host, and the gathering broke up about one o'clock, singing before they left for home, "For He's a Jolly Good Fellow."

Messrs. John Cooper and Abel Hendren were on the petit jury in Peterborough this week.

Bass fishing is good around these parts just now, some fine ones having been landed by local sportsmen in the last few days.

The Government have men at work engaged in painting the locks and bridges on the river and canal.

Mr. Fred Burton has recovered from his recent illness sufficiently to enable him to resume his duties at the Grand Trunk station. His many friends are glad to see him back.

Mr. W. A. Melymoyl shipped a large number of cattle on Wednesday.

A branch of the Home Circle is being organized here. Mr. J. H. Walker has the thing in hand, and is progressing nobly with the work.

Mr. A. B. Leggatt has been back to Apsley for the last few days buying a number of sheep.

Mr. Fred Dorey was in town on Wednesday and is making arrangements with the Curling Club. His proposition will in all probability be accepted by them, and a good season of curling be enjoyed by our players.

A telegram was received from Dr. Baker at Mobile, Ala., by Mrs. Baker, saying that his party had arrived safely there, and would proceed at once to Cuba.

Quite a quantity of cheese was shipped by the factories about here on Wednesday.

IT HAPPENED IN KEENE

What the People of Otonabee's Capital are Doing.

Rev. D. D. McDonald, who has been spending his holidays in Glengarry County, has returned.

Mr. Albert Nelson leaves Saturday for Hamilton, where he intends taking a course in the Normal College.

Mr. William Andrews is visiting in Keene.

The death occurred at the Methodist parsonage, Keene, on Wednesday night of Miss Nellie Wilson, youngest daughter of the late Alex. Wilson, of Hastings, from lung trouble. Miss Wilson had been unable to leave her bed since last March. The surviving members of the family are Mrs. W. Secombe, Keene, and Mr. H. Wilson, Hastings.

Mr. Arthur Shaw, who has been spending his vacation here, leaves on Friday for the North-West.

Mrs. W. Prunkett has bought Mr. James Nelson's, sr., farm, and intends moving onto it this fall. Mr. Nelson is coming to Keene.

Mr. Alex. Purser, of Cobourg, was in Keene Tuesday.

Mr. Robert Brown finished his concrete walk contract Wednesday. On account of the trees being very close to the side of the road, the sidewalk was made three and a half feet, instead of four feet wide. Needless to say, the cement sidewalk adds considerably to the appearance of the street.

The Young Men's Reading and Recreation Rooms were opened on Saturday night, and evidently are very much appreciated by the young men of the village and the vicinity. Since opening they have been pretty well filled every night.

Mr. John Hore, who has spent the summer in Manitoba and the North-West, and Mr. John Lang, M.P., who has been visiting in the North-West and British Columbia returned home Monday. Mr. Lang, on his trip through the Rockies, had the experience of being on the train that was held up and robbed a couple of weeks ago.

Hon. Mr. Davis Will Appeal.

Toronto, Sept. 30.—Hon. R. J. Davis has instructed his solicitor to appeal against the decision which has unseated him in North York. Mr. Davis wants the appeal court to decide whether he had "personal" knowledge of the presence of W. J. Robinson in the riding, and if Mr. Robinson was really guilty of a corrupt act when he was reported in North Grey. He believes he was unseated on a legal technicality. "The issue never has arisen before, and it will be interesting to know what view a higher court will take upon it," he said yesterday.

Loss Will Be $150,000.

Woodstock, Sept. 30.—One of the officials of the G.T.R., viewing the wreck yesterday, placed the total loss approximately at $150,000. Beyond the fact that it is yellowish in tone and always crackled [illegible] in most cases does not go. However. The name of the pottery is taken from the only [illegible] the province of Satsuma and is the only clay in Japan, possibly in the world, which will stand the number of firings necessary in the elaborate decorations of which it is the subject.

The Brand.

The old gentleman had just stepped into the crowded car and had accidentally trodden on Algy Fitzgerald's foot. "Confound you, you careless old buffer!" cried Algy. "You've crushed my foot to a jelly!" "Ah," said the old man calmly—"calf's foot jelly, I suppose!"

Limit His Output.

No question but what industry
Is all right in its way.
But what a blessing 'twould be wrought
If the mosquito could be taught
To work the night hour day.

"Well, they sold him some hens guaranteed to lay soft boiled eggs."

For there's the way he wears his hair,
And as good points he does not lack,
But do not put him on the back.

Spoiled Kind.

"She is a great matchmaker."

"Tutor or safety?"

"Just the regular old sulphur kind."

PAID DEAR FOR HIS FUN

William Christie Heavily Taxed for Creating Disturbance on Train.

William Christie, of Otonabee, was charged before Police Magistrate Edmison yesterday, at the Court House, with using blasphemous and insulting language and creating a disturbance on a train of the C.P.R. between Peterborough and Indian River. He was found guilty and fined $5 and costs, the latter amounting to $12.25, and if fine not paid forthwith, 60 days in gaol. Had it not been that Christie had already served six days in gaol, the fine probably would have been much heavier.

This should teach a lesson to persons who occasionally create disturbances of this kind, that they cannot do so with impunity, and the decision will have a good deterrent effect.

IN THE REALM OF SPORT

SPRINTING.

Arthur Burns, the sprinter, has a challenge out for Harrison of the Y. M.C.A. to a 5-mile 3ast race on the Lakefield road, starting at the corner of Hunter and George sts., the prize to be a gold medal. Burns is willing to give Harrison one minute handicap.

RUGBY.

Another big bunch of players were out last night at the Peterborough practice, but it was a case of "the light that failed." The Light and Power Co. had to turn off the lights at 8 o'clock on account of the additional power needed to light the Brock st. rink where Harry Lindley was playing. The players however had a good workout for 15 minutes and had a run in Central Park on their return from the Exhibition grounds. The following players were out in uniform last night: Crowley, Morgan, Simpson, Shaw, Gillespie, Burnham, Rickey, Gilbert, Meagher, Noble, Cameron, Hartubise, [illegible], Craig, Dillon, Greene, Hunt, O. O'Brien, J. O'Brien, Walley, Fitzpatrick, F. Craig. After practice a meeting of the players was held in the Y.M.C.A. parlor. The management thought it advisable to have the opinion of the players regarding the make-up of the team. Each senior player was given a slip of paper with the names of the sixteen most likely candidates for the team. From these they picked out the twelve players who, in their opinion, constituted the strongest team. The result of this ballot will guide the management in picking the bunch for Saturday's game. At last night's meeting Mr. Wm. Crowley, who has been acting as captain pro tem was elected captain for the season. The players could not have made a better choice. "Bill" knows the game thoroughly, has many years' experience, is popular with the boys and is in every way fitted to fill the position. A team committee consisting of Capt. Crowley, vice-treas. Graham and President A. S. Clarry was also appointed. President Clarry stated that all arrangements are completed for Saturday's game. The grounds will be in good shape. They are being marked off to-day. Police protection is also being secured.

The following players are requested to be at the Y.M.C.A. in uniform at 1.45 sharp to take a car to the Exhibition grounds for the game with the Argos: Forde, Morgan, Simpson, Crowley, Gillespie, Burnham, Hartubuise, Craig, Noble, Meagher, Cameron, Rickey, Gilbert, Dillon, Shaw.

ATHLETICS.

Messrs. Fred. McGrath and M. Robinson left today for Toronto, where they will represent the local Y.M.C.A. at the big C.A.A.U. meet there tomorrow. The meeting is open to all Canadian amateurs, and the entry list contains the names of the best men in Canada, several of them being champions in their classes. The local pair ought to do very well. They have been training for some weeks and should carry off some of the prizes. McGrath will enter three events, the 100 yard dash, 220 yards run and the 440 yards run. In the first of these events there are 14 entries, including Larry Piper, the well known Toronto athlete. In each of the last two there are 12 entries. Robinson will enter the boys 100 yard dash, and 440 yards run, in each of which events there are nine entries.

Everybody that can scare up a quarter should see tomorrow's game with the Argonauts. It will be well worth walking miles to see.

"The team is in great shape, and should be able to go the whole distance tomorrow.

The local wing line will surprise the Argonaut's back division a little.

BASKETBALL.

The Brownies, the fast basketball team of the Y.M.C.A., held their re-organization meeting on Wednesday night. Mr. H. Armstrong was elected manager, and G. Miller was again elected captain. The Brownies would like to see another senior league formed this season, and think they would stand a good chance for the championship. They will be without the services of "Dan" Beasley, one of their best defence men, this season, but have secured two fast players, E. Parker and W. Fitzpatrick, the latter of last year's Arrows.

JOURNEY TO JERUSALEM

REV. DR. POTTS GIVES INTERESTING ADDRESS ABOUT HOLY LAND.

Great Sabbath School Convention That Was Held Amid Scenes Prominent in Biblical History.

An address that was exceedingly interesting because of its description of one of the most remarkable conventions of modern days, and its account of a visit to a land of paramount historical importance, was delivered last evening by Rev. Dr. John Potts in the George-st. Methodist church. It was as he described it, a free and easy talk, but nevertheless contained great charms, and especially for those interested in Sunday school work or Biblical instruction of any kind. Rev. Dr. Potts has ever been listened to with pleasure on his visits to Peterborough, and his address last night, relating as it did to the World's Sunday School Convention at Jerusalem, the impressions received by the 600 delegates, the inspirations of visits to Biblical scenes was in every way a treat. The speaker was introduced by Rev. Dr. Crothers, after a hymn had been sung and prayer offered by Rev. W. J. Jelbffe.

Rev. Dr. Potts said he proposed to tell the simple story of the cruise and convention. At first he had thought such a journey impossible, but American friends had entered into the idea with spirit and had insisted upon his accompanying them to Jerusalem, reminding him that he was chairman of the International Lesson Committee, whose work concerned 20 millions of Sunday school teachers and scholars. When he allowed the matter to enter his head he told himself that he would look upon the places where Christ walked, thought and talked, and come into sympathetic touch with scenes which were enacted within the cover of the Bible, and identified with the redemption of the world.

The undertaking was of a gigantic character, and a committee of three was appointed to make preparations. These gentlemen became financially responsible to the North German Lloyd people for $400,000, the cost of chartering one of the large steamers for the trip. The rates paid by the delegates ranged from $300 to $750, and he was told that those who paid least grumbled most. The number of miles travelled on the trip was 15,179,000, representing 26 nations and 47 denominations. There were 617 in the party, which left New York on the 8th day of March. There were also 500 delegates from Great Britain, and these met the other 617 at Jerusalem for the first time a little later. The first port of call was Funchal, in the Madeiras, a Roman Catholic city, but the authorities there gave the visitors a building called a theatre in which to hold the first meeting. They left New York in winter, but at Madeira everything was sunshine and flowers. The British consul presided at the meeting, and it turned out that he was the teacher of the Bible class in the North of Ireland of which Rev. Mr. Frizzell, of Toronto, one of the party, had been a member. A collection was taken up and divided between the Church of Scotland and Methodist Episcopal Church, both doing missionary work on the Island.

HERO OF LADYSMITH.

The next place at which they called was Gibraltar, the Governor of which was Sir George White, the hero of Ladysmith. To him the Canadians called, stating that a large party of Canadians would call upon him. At that time he was entertaining the German Emperor as the guest of King Edward, and was at the beck and call of the visitor, but he met the delegates at his official residence. Rev. Dr. Potts said: "It would have done your heart good to hear Sir George White speak of the Canadian volunteers. We did not find in him an austere military gentleman; he was just like an Old Country squire, a beautiful old gentleman. Some conversation arose with regard to families, and he said: 'I think the founder of my family was a cobbler,'—he was big enough to admit that. As I looked up and saw the British flag, it seemed as if I could read on the face of the rock, 'What we have, we hold.' Our American friends were kind enough to say, 'Wherever the British flag is we have found peace, order, justice.'

From Gibraltar the party went to Algiers—a remarkable and interesting city in many respects. They had a drive through the Arab quarter, and found dirt and degradation, and the visitors were glad to leave. It appeared that from Algiers they export nothing but liquor, and in times of drought there it is said they mix their mortar with wine. "Some of my countrymen would think that a great waste," observed the speaker.

OF HISTORICAL INTEREST.

The visitors looked at everything in the light of the Bible as a band of consecrated, Christian workers, and when they arrived at Malta they thought of Paul's shipwreck and Paul's monument. The steamer went out of its way for several miles in order to get as near as possible to St. Paul's Bay, and the place of his shipwreck. Again at Athens the Bible came before them. This was a magnificent city, many of the buildings there comparing favorably with the superb structures of Paris or London. Here were wonderful ruins, and as the visitors climbed the Acropolis they were reminded of writers of classical literature and the deliverers of classical eloquence. One of the first places visited was Mars Hill, and there the official photographer took a group picture. Every delegate had one of these, and would cherish it as long as he lived. Mars Hill was an ugly old rock, hard to climb, and difficult to descend from, except by toboggan, but what incidents it recalled! On Sunday morning between 600 and 800 men and women, each with Bible and hymn book, participated in a service as orderly as any in Georges-st. church. President Yates, of Roberts College, Philadelphia, led in reading. Nearly 200 ministers, and all the delegates and friends read simultaneously the address of Paul, Acts 17: "Ye men of Athens." It was a unique service, and all of the Ministers wanted to have some part in it, and that was the plan adopted. The committee had asked Dr. Potts to preach. Said he, strong men wept in that service, and I wish I could describe it apart from myself altogether. One of the number had remarked a very good thing, that Paul had preached the first sermon, and Dr. Potts the second, but it was the first Armenian sermon, meaning, apparently, that his sermon had not been Calvinistic in character.

From Athens the party went to Constantinople, spending Easter Sunday there. All of the cities of the Orient were beautifully situated, and and looked well from a distance, although ideals were sometimes disturbed upon getting inside. But whatever might be heard of the "Unspeakable Turk," we were, said the speaker, well treated by every person, and the Turkish Emperor feasted them to coffee, cake and sweets. The dogs were the scavengers in Constantinople, and they gave orchestral music all night, but slept during the day. The canines divided themselves into districts, and it fared badly with the cur that strayed from one to the other. No hackman or other person would think of disturbing a dog in his slumbers. This magnificent city overlooked Bosphorous, the Golden Horn, the Sea of Marmora, these links which joined two great seas, the Mediterrean and the Black Sea. The steamer went out into the latter for seven or eight miles in order to give the visitors an opportunity to form an idea of it. They also saw the Isle of Patmos, and remembered John and his vision while a prisoner there. On to Smyrna they journeyed, and the tomb of Polycarp, who suffered martyrdom, and as the speaker stood beside the tomb, he read the 2nd chapter of Revelations, and the verse, "Be thous faithful unto death."

At Beyrut the visitors found a grand American College. This does not belong to any missionary society, but to a company of American gentlemen in the State of New York, each of the buildings being erected by one or the other interested in the evangelization of that part of the universe. The college was doing a grand work, and the hope was expressed that the young men who were there being educated in the principles of modern civilization might be of benefit to the Turkish nation, a disintegration that might partake of the nature of a blessing rather than the opposite.

JERUSALEM.

At Jaffa the visitors saw the house of Simon the Tanner, where Peter had seen the vision as in Acts 10. There was a train of first class cars in waiting here, and thus they were conveyed to Jerusalem. The train moved into the station there in exactly the same manner as it would in this country, and there were the hotelmen and 'bus drivers and callers, and the visitors were received by a representative of the hotel in the same way as they would be in the most modern city on earth. But everywhere there appeared to be desolation. Dr. Potts' guide was a member of the American colony, and the first place he wanted to see was Calvary. He was told that there were two of these. The Church of the Holy Sepulchre is supposed to be built over one, while some time ago the great General Gordon went to Jerusalem and studied the topography of the city. The wise conclusion he came to was that a certain green hill outside the city, was the true place, and it was called Gordon's Calvary, and Dr. Potts said this was his Calvary, too.

The speaker stated that it was not worth the journey if Jerusalem was visited indifferent to the Bible. It was a poverty-stricken land, save where they carry on agricultural pursuits, but generally it seemed as if God had cursed the country in which Christ had been rejected. Several of His sermons relative to Jerusalem were spoiled. It was not "Jerusalem the golden," for there was more poverty to the square inch and less Christianity than in almost any city on the face of the earth. But within so small an area occurred many great events. Visits were made to places prominent in Biblical history. At the Mosque of Omar a covering could not be found large enough for Dr. Potts' feet, so the attendant covered them with the wrapper off a tea chest, and thus he hobbled into the sacred place. Visits were made to the Jews' wailing place, Pilot's Judgment Hall, Solomon's stables, and other places.

The convention was held in a large tent, and missionaries from round about Jerusalem were summoned, many of them being graduates of Canadian colleges. The convention was held near Calvary, and its services were all very impressive. Here was a remarkable gathering and many notable scenes were enacted, such as a Jew translating the address of a Samaritan, Joseph Fisher a former mayor of the city, reading the 19th Psalm, and all amazed at his attitude. This man represented the Turkish Empire at the peace conference in Berlin. The points visited about Jerusalem were Jericho, Bethany, a disappointing place, the Jordan, Elisha's fountain, the wilderness where Christ was tempted, the Dead Sea, the Church of the Nativity, and the spot where it is supposed Christ was born, Solomon's pool, and many other scenes full of Biblical memories.

Leaving Jerusalem the party went to Alexandria and Cairo, the land favored by the Nile, which, Dr. Potts said, should have been called the land of promise. The pyramids and the Sphinx were seen, and it was in this locality that the convention at a meeting subscribed between $600 and $700 for a mission boat on the Nile.

On the return journey they called at Naples, and the speaker said that the common saying, "See Naples and die," should be changed to "See Naples and get away or you will be robbed," for eleven of the party there lost their watches and chains. They visited Rome and St. Peter's—a dream of architectural splendor. They had an opportunity to see Mussolini, a man of great force of character, who would certainly have been Pope but for the Emperor of Austria. Many other places of interest were seen in Rome, such as the Appian Way and Paul's Church. It was a wonder to the speaker that the Roman Church did not select Paul as their patron Saint, for he was the greatest man of the centuries in the history of the Christian Church, next to the Man Himself.

The party on their way home decided almost to a man that they would not visit Monte Carlo. It would have compromised the Sunday school work, said the speaker. The convention subscribed something like $4,000 for Sunday School Missions, and at a meeting on board the steamer about $300 was subscribed for international Sunday School work. Two new Associations were added—one in Italy, where two Protestant churches existed, the Church of Scotland and the Methodist Episcopal, and another in Palestine.

Dr. Potts told in conclusion an amusing story. A Miss Garrett, of Toronto, who interested herself in attending upon those who were sick during the trip home, had recently received a letter from her dragoman in Palestine that his sheik was willing to take her for his wife, and would give her $200 into the bargain, or probably a little more. If the bargain could be carried out the dragoman was to get a mule, or perhaps a camel for his trouble. Miss Garrett had not yet decided to accept.

A vote of thanks, moved by Mr. R. E. Wood, and seconded by Mr. J. J. Hartley, was tendered the speaker that the close.

BREAD GOES UP.

Bakers Claim That Their Flour Has Raised 60 Cents in 3 Months.

The bakers of town today announce an advance in the price of bread. This is the outcome of a recent raise in the price of flour by 60 cents a hundred within the last three months, consequent upon an advance in wheat, caused by shortage of crop. The 5-pound loaf thus been raised from 9 to 10 cents, and the four-spender that retailed for 13 cents will cost 13 cents.

HEAVY TRAFFIC

The Radial Railway Carried 10,000 People in Two Days.

The Peterborough Radial Railway Company, considering that the line is only a single track one, and that cars have been running a very short time, did exceptionally good work in handling passengers at the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition. On Tuesday the company carried 7,000 persons, and on the following day 3,000 without an accident. The company is well satisfied with the returns, although a larger crowd was expected the last day of the fair.

A GOOD RALLY NECESSARY

Liberal Conservative Convention Tomorrow Afternoon.

The Conservative Convention which has been called for to-morrow afternoon promises to be of unusual interest from the fact that the date fo the general elections has been announced for November 3rd, and because a candidate is to be nominated. These facts point to the necessity of immediate organization if the work of the next month is to be effectively carried on, and the West Riding held.

Mr. T. E. Bradburn, the president of the Liberal-Conservative Association, was seen this afternoon and he expects a large turnout of the supporters of the party to-morrow. The meeting is called for two o'clock in the opera house. It will be an important meeting in many respects, hence the desirability that there should be a large turnout.

—A meeting of provisional directors of the Campbellford, Lake Ontario and Western Railway was held last week at Cobourg. Officers were elected and a stock list opened. The prospects are that the new road will be fairly under way in the early part of 1905.

APPENDICITIS CAUSED DEATH

Mr. James H. Fife Prominent in Vancouver Business Circles.

The Vancouver Daily Province has the following reference to the death of James Harold Fife, formerly of Peterborough:

"Gloom has been cast over business circles in the city by the sudden death of Mr. James Harold Fife, senior member of the well known firm of Fife & Hoepter. The sad event occured at a late hour last night, Sept 14th, at the family residence of the deceased, 1543 Haro street.

Death was due to appendicitis, the dread affliction having manifested itself very suddenly, and in spite of all that surgical science could do, the fatal results could not be averted. Mr. Fife enjoyed excellent health until a few weeks ago when he first complained of a pain in his abdomen. He was as well as usual on Sunday and attended services in the Wesley church, with the affairs of which he was prominently identified. Much sympathy will be felt for the bereaved wife, as Mr Fife had been married only a little over a year ago. He leaves an infant as well as a widow to mourn his sudden demise. Deceased was widely known and highly respected both in business and social circles.

CHIEF ONLY DID HIS DUTY

COMMITTEE OF I.O.F. REPORT ON GEO. COWLING'S DEATH.

The Circumstances Thoroughly Investigated—A Warning to Those Who Falsely Criticise.

To the Editor of the Review.

Sir,—Our committee appointed by Court Chemong, No. 539, I.O.F., to investigate into the circumstances connected with the death of the late Geo. F. Cowling, have reported to the Court as follows:—We find that the deceased, George F. Cowling, on the forenoon of Thursday, 22nd inst., while engaged as a carpenter at Moldrum's new mill, fell from the top of a part of the building, and received injuries, which at the time were thought by himself and fellow-workmen to be slight, but which afterwards proved to be fatal.

We find that the deceased set out to walk from the mill towards Dr. Greer's office, but when in front of Cavanagh's hotel on Simcoe-st., he fell from the sidewalk, but managed to rise again, and go a short distance, when he again fell unconscious at the side of the wooden bridge. Chief Roszel at this time received a telephone message that a man was lying in front of Cavanagh's hotel in an awful state, and he hurried to the place, where he found deceased lying as described.

The Chief, not knowing who it was, concluded that the deceased had been under the influence of liquor, as he had been undergoing spasms and fits of vomiting. The Chief took the precaution to search the deceased's clothing, and found a letter addressed to George Cowling, and he then asked the bystanders if they knew him, but received no reply. The Chief then stopped a passing dray, and with the assistance of several others, the helpless man was lifted on the vehicle and taken to the police station.

Mr. James Clancy, the owner and driver of the dray, states that the deceased was carefully lifted on his dray, and also gently carried into the police station, and Mr. Wm. Clancy added, "I knew the deceased quite well, but I did not recognize him then, owing to the state he was in when found." We find that upon learning the true facts of the sad occurrance, Chief Roszel immediately telephoned several doctors and for the ambulance, which took deceased to the Nicholls Hospital, where he died about one o'clock the same day.

Chief Roszel is a brother Forester, but his night duties prevent him from attending the Court meetings, and he was therefore not well acquainted with the deceased, and, like Mr. Clancy, did not recognize him at the time. We all regret very much that deceased was taken to the police station, and none regrets it more than Chief Roszel himself. We have come to this decision, however, that Chief Roszel was only doing what was his duty by removing the apparently intoxicated man from the street by the first available vehicle to the only available place at his disposal.

There has been no discredit reflected on the character of the deceased by what has occurred, but, rather the opposite, as his true character has been brought to the public notice, as he was not only a temperate man, but a strict total abstainer.

We wish to warn those who have so severely and falsely criticised Chief Roszel regarding the manner of discharging his duty, to desist from doing so, as it only hurts the already shattered feelings of deceased's friends. We refrain from recommending officers of the law to exercise cautiousness in the future, as we consider this case will be a warning to all concerned. The widow and friends of our departed brother have our sincere sympathy, and we believe, the sympathy of the whole community in their sore trial.

CONCERNING BEGGARS

Their Operations are in Violation of the Code.

"During the days that the Exhibition was in full swing here, I was particularly struck by the number of beggars on the street," remarked a prominent citizen this morning. He argued that the presence of these people tended to give visitors a bad impression of Peterborough, nor were they in appearance the most pleasing characters to look at. He agreed that "the poor we have always with us," but expressed his willingness to pay his share that these people should be looked after in the proper manner. He referred particularly to one of these so-called unfortunates who, he felt sure ,was able to work with his hands at some profitable business, although deficient in lower limbs. He held that the young man Forbes, who lost both arms in a mining disaster some time ago ,was in a much worse condition, but managed to make an honest living. A number of deaf mutes are engaged in town digging postholes for a telephone company—all working hard for their daily bread. Apart from the fact that the appearance of beggars on the streets creates a very undesirable impression among visitors, it was also complained that their operations were in violation of the code.

Have and Hound

The senior school and working boys will have a hare and hound chase on Saturday afternoon, Oct. 1st, at 2 o'clock. This is a dandy good run. Two hares first start out with bags of finely torn paper, another a trail, sometimes broken, for two or three miles, through country and woods, then the hares hide their empty bags and also hide themselves, somewhere near the bags. They wait in hiding until the hounds have followed up the trail and have arrived at the spot where they are in hiding. The hounds are to find the bag, then the hares, and finish up with a run for home. The hounds are not to start until the hares have been gone for 20 minutes. This is great exercise, and there is lots of fun in it.

Lithiney Soap—Satisfactory—is strongly recommended by the medical profession as a safeguard against infectious diseases.

THE STREET FAIR.

Coming? Well, I guess
Yes!
Without delay!
So the bills say.
Positively no postponement on account of the weather.
'Twill be here whether
We have rain, hail,
A forty mile gale,
Snow, mud,
Flood
Or just plain weather,
The greatest aggregation ever brought together
Will be here on the exact date.
Wait
For the street fair!
Will I be there?
Well, if I am not dead
I'll be there one day ahead
Of the date
So as not to be late.
Talk about fun!
This guarantees a ton
Every minute or the "more" refunded. And, lordy gee!
It's all free!
Count fifty of the side shows,
But, goodness knows,
They're worth the small sum of a dime
Every time.
Snake charmers!
Guaranteed to please city folks and farmers.
Glass eaters
That are world beaters!
And they're not a circumstance
To the hoochie coochie dance!
Splendid here?
Of course.
And then the fat boy just began.
It's a solid week of fun.
Bands,
Peanut stands,
Red lemonade,
A monster parade—
In short, the pace that kills—
For particulars see small bills.

There truly is cause for alarm.
  She chases the cats
  And tries to catch rats
And stops up their holes with her arm.

She frightens the old mother hen,
Then turns the pigs out of their pen,
  And all of the day
  She does what she may
To make extra work for the men.

She puts on the dinner bell wire,
And, thinking the place is on fire
  Because of the din,
  The neighbors rush in
And say cutting things to her sire.

When Murphy goes down to the farm
There truly is cause for alarm.

Over the Border

Author of "Jennie Baxter, Journalist," Etc.

"I need neither rest nor refreshment," she answered wearily.

"I was not thinking of you, madam, but of the horses. They have already gone too far without food, but in this benighted land there has been no opportunity of baiting them till now."

She sprang lightly from her horse to the ground and without a look at the faithful animal that had carried her so far walked very straight to the door of the hostelry and disappeared within it.

When the time of waiting had ticked itself out on the old clock of the inn Armstrong ordered the horses on the road again and sent old John to warn his mistress that the way was still long to York. She came out promptly, mounting proudly without a word, and the expedition set forth as before, old John contentedly bringing up the rear. All afternoon they made their progress along the very direct road, no utterance from any one of the three. Frances grew more and more tired of this doleful journey, so woefully begun, placing the blame on her own weary shoulders for the most part, but now and then filled with a growing hatred of the stolid figure in front, who never once turned round, never once slackened the pace, never once made inquiry of any kind.

At last the nearly level rays of the evening sun glorified the towers of the gray minster, transforming them for the moment into piles of rosy marble, and the walled tower was spread out before them. They came to Bootham Bar, and here for the first time a man at arms questioned their right of way. Armstrong silently presented to him the blood stained pass, bearing the signature of the man of iron.

The man at arms stood aside and the trio went up the clattering street until they came to a house of entertainment once called "The King's Head," with a picture of Charles on the swaying sign, now slightly changed to represent Fairfax, a good Yorkshireman, while the lettering had been obliterated and "The Fairfax Arms" painted over it. The leader of the expedition ordered the best apartment in the house for the lady, and sat where he was while the bustling landlord assisted the fatigued traveler to dismount. Armstrong and old John saw to the disposal of the horses, then the young man walked to the minster and around it, noticing everywhere the ravages of the late siege. The town had not yet recovered its arrested prosperity, and most of the people he met were heavy footed soldiers and citizens in somber dress. York had been royalist to the core, and now calamity seemed to brood over it. Armstrong made his way to a mercer's shop in the main street.

"My garments," he said to the obsequious proprietor, "are somewhat stained, and I would renew them."

In the privacy of the back room the change was effected, and presently William Armstrong stood as gay and comely a man as could be found in all England, superbly attired, with fine lace fluttering at neck and wrists.

The gloom of evening was on the town when Armstrong returned to the inn and sought Frances.

The young lady was partaking of the repast prepared for her in the private parlor set aside for her use, said the landlord in answer to his guest's inquiry. On being shown to the door Armstrong knocked on the panels and was admitted by old John, who was in attendance.

The girl sat at a table and looked up with surprise, not recognizing her visitor in his new finery, thinking some stranger had mistaken the room; but, seeing who it was as he advanced, she turned her gaze away from him and gave no greeting. If he came to apologize now, it was too late, she said to herself, and his first words showed that this was indeed his purpose.

"Madam," he said with a courtly inclination of his head, which statuary, if it existed across the girl's mind, had been purchased with his fresh accoutrement, a thought that almost brought a smile to her lips, which she hoped to keep firm—"madam, I crave your pardon for my unseemliness of temper to-day. I am at best an uncouth person, traveling at the head of my own men. Who question neither words nor acts of mine, and so have led me into the gruff habit of expecting obedience and not censure. I am no squire of dames, as there is little need to tell you, for already you know it from this day's experience of my ways, but I am deeply grieved that I fall so far short of the courtesy which is your due, and I trust you will forgive my lapse of manners. I had hoped we might part good friends."

"Part!" she cried in sharp terror, and those wide black eyes of hers quickly turned to meet his searching gaze. She had never anticipated such an outcome of their quarrel as this, nor dreamed that it was easily possible for him to circumvent all her plans by withdrawing himself from her company. Instantly the dread consequence of such a determination on his part—and she had had a glimpse of his resoluteness—loomed up before her, every little disagreement between them sinking into nothingness before this fearful alternative.

"I fear I overrated my power of serving you," he continued, "and I forgot for the moment how slight was my acquaintance with your family. Manchester, and not Oxford, is my destination, and I shall make for that town tomorrow before you are astir. The country is not nearly so disturbed as I expected to find it, and the roads are perfectly safe—indeed, you know the route better than I. This pass is a most potent document and will open every gate. I leave it with you." He placed the paper on the table before her. "If I might venture to counsel you, I should advise you not to take it into Oxford unless you have some satisfactory plea to account for its possession."

"Have you had anything to eat since you came into York?" Her voice was as sweet as the note of a nightingale.

"No," said Armstrong, with a laugh. "I had forgotten about that; a most unusual trick of memory."

She laughed merrily at him, and her mirth came the heartier as she saw she was to accomplish her object; then the laugh was checked as a sudden wave of pity for him surged over her. For all his size he was a very boy in lack of guile, and a shiver ran over her as she pictured what he must think of her when he knew. The sudden tension was relieved by the arrival of old John and the servants carrying a meal hot and savory, whose incense was a delight to the starving man.

"There," she cried, "sit down opposite me. Put this pass in safe keeping until I seek for it. You will surely not be so cruel as to desert me on the first stage of our journey?"

"Madam," said the bewitched man, "I shall do with eagerness whatever it is your pleasure to ask of me."

CHAPTER XVII.

ANOTHER glorious summer morning greeted the pilgrims at York; a morning so clear and splendid that it seemed to have lifted the gloom which covered the captured city, as the sun might dissipate a veil of mist. In spite of her fatigue of the day before Frances was the first afoot, and at this setting forth Armstrong and old John were the laggards, as she blithely informed them when they appeared.

As they rode away from the opulent town the girl could scarcely refrain from joining the larks in their matin song, such a strange feeling of elation filled her being. She glanced sideways at Armstrong riding so easily on his splendid horse. What a noble looking youth he was, and how well his new attire became him! Again she glanced at him, and then caught his gaze bent upon her. He smiled at her—was smiling when she turned her head.

"I can read your thoughts in your face," he said.

"Can you?" she asked in alarm.

"Yes. At first the pure sweet beauty of the morning appealed to you. You were glad to leave the dust in streets of the town and to once more in the fresh open country. The thought of your brother came to you, and the recollection of your fare died out in sorrow for him, wishing you had never met him. Do not be concerned for him. I have seen many a wound deeper than his and they were of small account with youth and health to contend against them."

The girl sighed and turned her face away, making no comment upon his conjectures, which were so far astray from accuracy. Why had she given no thought to her brother, whose welfare had never before been absent from her mind, yet who never before was in such danger as now? Why had a stranger's image come between them, so monopolizing her mental vision that all her pity had been for him? A hopeless rage at the part assigned to her filled her heart with bitterness and her eyes with tears.

The young man saw that some strong emotion had overpowered her, against which all her struggles were in vain. Instant sympathy with her sorrow manifested itself in his action. He brought his horse close beside her, reached out and touched her hand.

"Dear heart, do not grieve," he said tenderly. "I pledge my faith your brother is better already. Have no fear about him. He'll be out and about by the time you are home again. But come, we have now a level road before us. Let us gallop. There's nothing so cheers the mind as a charge on a good horse. We will make old John stir his stumps."

They set off together, and old John did his best to keep them in sight. Some fourteen miles from York they baited their horses, then pushed on through Bawtry until Tuxford came in sight more than an hour and a half after noontide, a longer stretch than Armstrong thought good for either man or beast. It was not yet 5 in the morning when they left York, and with the exception of a bite and sup at their only halting place they had nothing to eat until 2 o'clock. Many of the numerous inns along the road were deserted and in ruins; the farther north the journey was prolonged the more evident became the traces of war, and Armstrong found that he had scant choice as to resting places.

"I hope," said the girl, who knew the road, "that the Crown at Tuxford has not been blown down again. It was a good inn."

"More chance of its being blown up," replied Armstrong flippantly. "Was it blown down once?"

"Yes, about half a century since, in a tempest, but it was rebuilt. You should have a kindly feeling for it."

"Why?"

"The Princess Margaret Tudor rested there in 1503, when she went to Scotland to marry your king."

"By my forefathers, then, the Crown is a place of evil omen for me. Would that the fair Margaret had slept in it on the night of the storm."

"And now I ask, why?"

"Because her son, James V., came down to the border, and by treachery collected the head of my clan, with about forty or more of his retainers, and hanged them, denying either trial or appeal. Jamie missed those two-score men later in life, when his cowardly crew deserted him. We Armstrongs seem ever to have been a confiding race of simpletons, believing each man's word to be true as the steel at his side. Margaret was as false as fair, and a poor queen for Scotland, yet here am I now risking life or liberty for one of her breed, the descendant of those fell Stuarts who never honored woman or kept faith with man."

"Sir, what are you saying?" cried the girl, aghast at the unbending confession into which his impetuosity had carried him.

"God, you may well ask!" said the young man, startled in his turn at the length he had gone. "Still, it does not matter, for you would be the last to betray me. I'll tell you all about it some day, and we will laugh over our march together, if you forget what I said just now. The end of our expedition is not to be the end of our acquaintance, I hope, and you live but a day's march from the border."

"I make no promise until we reach home again. Then you may not wish to make the journey."

"Little fear of that. I must see you again, if only to tell you of my luck in cattle dealing, at which you showed such scorn yesterday."

"Do not let us speak of that. There is the Crown inn, and even if the shade of the Princess Margaret does not haunt it I am pleased to see there are people more substantial around its doors."

"It is level with the times. The crown is blotted from the signboard, although some of the old gilding shines through the new paint."

It was late in the afternoon before they were on horse again, and they jogged down the road at an easy amble. Newark was passed, but they did not stop there longer than was necessary to show their permission to travel, for Newark had been a royal town, mentioned for the king and besieged more than once. Armstrong had intended to stay the night there, but the authorities showed some reluctance in accepting a pass for two as convoy for three, and it needed all the young man's eloquence and insistence on respect for Cromwell's signature to get old John past the barriers, so when once this persuasion was granted he thought it well to push on clear of the place and risk the danger of camping out beside the road.

His luck still stood his friend, and at Grantham, some ten miles farther on, as the sun was setting, they came to the ancient archway of the Angel.

THE CANADA ATLANTIC

G.T.R. Directors Can Now Sign Agreement to Buy Railway.

Time of Great Prosperity—Sir Charles Rivers-Wilson Speaks Glowingly of Canada's Prospects At Semi-Annual Meeting of Grand Trunk Railway Shareholders—Temporary Check of Last Winter Will Soon Be Overcome.

London, Sept. 30.—(C.A.P.)—The semi-annual meeting of the shareholders of the Grand Trunk Railway yesterday was largely attended. Sir Rivers-Wilson, presiding, said that the almost uninterrupted progress of the railway during the past eight years had during the past half year ended June 30, received a temporary check, but he expressed confidence that the check was only temporary. He blamed the severity of the weather for the falling off in freight traffic, and the enormous amount of snow blocking the country roads, and thus preventing the farmers bringing in freight. The removal of snow during the half year cost £30,000, 246, a sum never before approached in the history of the company. The Chairman quoted the figures of the Canadian Pacific Railway and other railways, as showing that the G. T. R. was not alone in the increase of expenditure. The prospects, however, were bright, as a bumper corn harvest in the United States and a heavy wheat harvest in Canada prophesied a period of great commercial activity in these countries.

Not One of Hostility.

Referring to Mr. R. L. Borden's opposition to the Grand Trunk Pacific, Sir Charles said it was not one of hostility, but of urging the adoption of a system of Government-owned railways. Mr. Borden's opposition was a great surprise, as other Conservative leaders, Sir Charles Tupper and Sir John A. Macdonald, had been against the system of State ownership. Mr. Borden's threat of exappropriation, though possibly legally right, and not breaking contract, is a declaration that does not tend to uphold the dignity of the Government. Mr. E. B. Osler, said Sir Charles Rivers-Wilson, has launched out in considerable abuse, and had uttered threats against the Chairman, but Sir Charles claimed that the G. T. R. had always held aloof from politics in Canada.

The resolution adopting the report and accounts was carried unanimously.

Purchase of Canada Atlantic.

On the resolution for the acquisition of the Canada Atlantic Railway there was a somewhat heated discussion. A shareholder moved an amendment that it be postponed until the next meeting, but the amendment was lost. Sir Charles stated that the resolution for acquisition must be voted on at the present meeting as an answer was required within twenty days. He regretted that he was unable to take the shareholders into his confidence as he would like, but if it was postponed it meant abandoning the idea altogether. Finally the resolution was put and carried.

The resolution asking approval for the purchase of the Canada Atlantic Railway by the Grand Trunk was based upon a guarantee of $16,000,000 of 4 per cent. 50-year gold bonds, a portion of which will remain in the treasury for developement purposes.

Scores the Opposition.

The Finance News referring to the Grand Trunk Railway meeting, says that Mr. Seal, the spokesman of the opposition, was suffering acutely from diarrhoea verborum, and tied himself up in tangled and contradictory nonsense with vague suggestions that something was wrong in the system. He received support from the invariably few shareholders who will not take the trouble to listen to explanations from the president. The News scores Colonel Stewart, who seconded the motion for delay for looking schemes on competition between railways when strictly means the opening up of a land of promise.

Trying to Reassure.

London, Sept. 30.—(C.A.P.)—Referring to Lord Rosebery quoting the fourth resolution of the Colonial Premiers Conference of 1902 in proof that no offer was made Capt. C. Dyon, writing to The Times, refers Lord Rosebery to resolutions 3 and 5 of the conference.

Case of Cheese.

London, Sept. 30.—(C.A.P.)—On the calling of the recruitment against a Hastings firm of grocers for alleged selling of margarine instead of cheese, Clement F. Rolt, on behalf of the Dominion Federation, asked that a third sample be sent to the Government laboratory. The Canadian Government desired the fullest enquiry and Canadian witnesses would give evidence that the cheese was purchased by the defendants from the largest importers of Canadian cheese in London and sold it in exactly the same state as when shipped. The magistrates granted the application made for the defence and the case was set for Nov. 24.

Labor to Labor.

London, Sept. 30.—(C.A.P.)—John Burns, M.P., and R. Bell, M.P., two British labor leaders, appeal to the Australian labor party to respect the decision of the English workers as expressed at the recent Trades Union Congress, declaring their hostility to Mr. Chamberlain's food tax proposals.

Canada and the Empire.

London, Sept. 30.—(C. A. P.)—The Association of Chambers of Commerce, in session at Manchester, gave a cordial reception to Alex. McFee, of the Montreal Chamber of Commerce. Mr. McFee said the questions engaging attention in Canada were how to increase not only the trade of Canada but of the Empire. They were endeavoring to strengthen in every possible way the bonds uniting the colony and the Motherland, and were constructing commercial highways which would ensure that trade would not pass north and south but west and east, thence to the Motherland. The Canadian Government sought guidance in fiscal matters from Canadian Boards of Trade. Sir Wilfrid Laurier the other day had not spoken in advance of public opinion, but in response to it.

Laurier and Rosebery.

London, Sept. 30.—(C. A. P.)—The Morning Post says Sir Wilfrid Laurier's reply to the latest of Lord Rosebery's occasional speeches has produced a great impression, not only in Britain but also in Europe. Distinguished German and French statesmen see a similar trend of events in Mr. Chamberlain's scheme, which has enabled that statesman to achieve new greatness. In the United States, Germany and Japan, it is impossible to avoid sympathizing with British Cobdenites over Sir Wilfrid's desertion, whose undue caution when he might have spoken out a year ago has been one of their chief assets. The Post declares that the Canadian Premier's utterance has released a volume of latent sympathy with Mr. Chamberlain's policy remarkable among which is Mr. Belcourt's statement concerning the disinclination towards American reciprocity.

EXCEEDED HIS JURISDICTION.

Judgment Against British Secretary Vacated and Regret Expressed

Boston, Sept. 30.—Governor Bates has informed the State Department that the judgment against Third Secretary Gurney of the British Embassy, has been vacated and the fines imposed remitted. He says that Judge Phelps had expressed regret to the Secretary by letter. The Governor also expresses regret that want of knowledge of the law has resulted in an error of judicial authority in Massachusetts; and the hope that statement of regret by Judge Phelps may be recognized as a conclusive disavowal of any intention of Massachusetts courts to ignore international law.

Sentenced to 19 Years Imprisonment.

Kingston, N. Y., Sept. 30.—The four Italians who robbed Paymaster Orson C. Longyear of the Hudson River Bluestone Co., near Kingston, June 23, securing $2,600, were each sentenced by Judge Van Etton last night to 19 years' imprisonment at Dannemora. Salvatore Congesso fell insensible when the court's sentence was interpreted to him. The others received their sentences stoically.

Killed By a Train.

Shelburne, Sept. 30. — Richard Banks, a farmer, was killed here Wednesday night. It is supposed that he was run over by the 8.43 express and his body carried from the station yard to where it was found. Coroner Steele was notified and the remains were gathered up and conveyed to the Town Hall. He leaves a wife and large family.

Standing Treaty of Arbitration.

Boston, Sept. 30.—The Boston Chamber of Commerce received a cablegram yesterday afternoon from the Associated Chambers of Commerce, to the effect that the organization had just passed a unanimous resolution in favor of a standing treaty of arbitration with the United States. The cablegram was signed by Sir William Holland, M.P., the president of the British Chambers. The Boston Chamber sent a cordial response.

Hooley Goes For Trial.

London, Sept. 30.—Ernest Terah Hooley, the company promoter, who was arrested in London May 10 last on the charge of conspiracy to defraud, and Henry J. Lawson, another company promoter, who was taken into custody the same day in connection with the charge against Hooley, were yesterday committed for trial.

Great Fair At Whitby.

Whitby, Sept. 30.—Despite bad weather, the second day of the model fair was a big success, several thousands being in attendance. Mr. Miller of Brome, Quebec, a director of the Great Eastern Townships Fair, came all the way to study the experimental plots and expressed himself as greatly pleased.

Forces Public Ownership.

Hamilton, Sept. 30.—The members of the Wentworth's Political Association crowded their hall last evening to hear W. F. Maclean, M.P., on the subject of "Public Ownership." Rev. C. H. Whitcombe was in the chair. The meeting expressed approval of Mr. Maclean's remarks.

APPEALS TO THE PEOPLE.

Russian Minister of the Interior Makes An Impression.

St. Petersburg, Sept. 30.—The speech of Prince Sviatopolk-Mirsky, Russian Minister of the Interior, at his reception of the officials of the Ministry of the Interior yesterday afternoon, is bound to produce a deep impression in Russia, and be interpreted as the harbinger of a mild and broad regime. It has a ring which will be welcomed by the Liberals.

While not going into details, it practically reiterates what the minister said to the Associated Press at Vilna, Sept. 26, about the Emperor's manifesto furnishing the guiding spirit of his administration. The following words are considered to be a direct appeal to the people to have trust in his regime:

"It is my deep conviction that the fruitfulness of the work of the Government is based upon the sincere good-will and sincere confidence which knits its relations to the social class, the institutions and the people in general."

He was engaged, but later was discharged, and as he went away he was heard to remark: "I'll come back and burn your barn for you." Mr. Walker went to the Beamsville fair. About 10 o'clock it was discovered that the barn was on fire. It is said that he has admitted his guilt.

TORONTO LIVE STOCK.

Receipts of live stock since last Tuesday's market as received by the two railways, were the largest of the year thus far, amounting all told to 142 carloads, composed of 2220 cattle, 1760 hogs, 4624 sheep and lambs, 181 calves and 17 horses.

There were no straight loads of shipping cattle offered and certainly none wanted. Joseph Russell of Mount Forest brought in 20 cattle, which he was offering as exporters. Seven of these were really good quality, weighing about 1250 lbs. each, causing Mr. Russell $4.75 in the country, but he could not obtain this price on the market here to-day.

The bulk of the offerings of butchers' cattle was composed of light steers and heifers and cows that in many instances were only bought because there were those other to be had, and were sold at lower quotations than at any time this season. Choice picked lots of butchers' heifers and steers, 1100 lbs. each, which there were few to be had, sold at $4.30 to $4.40 per cwt.; loads of good heifers and steers sold at $4 to $4.25; loads of good mixed cattle sold at $3.75 to $3.90; medium butchers', $3.40 to $3.60; cows of good quality sold at four as $3 to $3.25, but inferior and rough all sorts and cows sold as low as $1.60 to $2 per cwt.

Taken altogether there was a larger number than usual of dairy good farmers offered, but at the same time there was too many of the inferior class that were hard to sell, while there was a good demand. It was hard to get a straight load of choice dairy cows, nearly all of them being composed of a few of the right kind mixed with those of an inferior class. Choice cows sold at $45 to $50 each, which paid $3.25 for the lot, and $3 to $3.25 for the poorer grades, while they were nearly all of the same weight. Choice bright calves, 200 to 250 lbs. each, sold at about $5.25; medium choice, 200 to 220 lbs., at $4.40 to $4.60 per cwt.

There was a large number of distillery hogs, 200 to 250 lbs., that sold from $5.20 to $5.30½ per cwt. Amongst the many loads offered there were a couple of loads that were unfinished by the drivers for weights, sold at half that, as well as some [illegible] at $5.17½ per cwt., many of them going for canning purposes.

There was, as usual, a large number of country dressed, few of which were of good quality. Trade was dull and prices were easy, at about $2.25 to $2.75 per cwt. for those weighing from 200 to 700 lbs. each. I will be given from the above that prices were [illegible] all round for both feeders and stockers.

There was a fair demand for all offerings of good quality at steady prices. Calves ranged from $3a to $20 each, the bulk going at $10 to $15 each.

There was a good demand as usual for veal calves of good quality, but taken altogether there was not as many of good to choice quality. Prices ranged from $3.50 to $5.25 per cwt.

The run of sheep and lambs was one of, if not the largest of the year, and prices were easier all round. Sheep sold at $3.75 to $3.90, the bulk going at about $3.85 per cwt. Lambs sold at $4 to $4.15 for all of good quality, while culls and feeding lambs sold at $3.70 to $3.80 per cwt.

Deliveries were about 1600, which sold at unchanged prices, selects at $5.15 and lights and fats at $4.90 per cwt. In looking over the deliveries to-day it was quite apparent that there are too many undersized hogs being marketed.

MONTREAL LIVE STOCK.

Montreal, Sept. 29.—About 175 head of butchers' cattle, 20 calves, 200 sheep and lambs and 20 young pigs were offered for sale at the East End Abattoir to-day. The wet, muggy weather caused a dull market to become even duller. Sales were slow and those were only of the ordinary medium and common cattle. The better kinds of cattle will be held over for Monday's market. There were a lot of unusually lean cows, which sold at about 2c per lb. Small bulls sold at 1½c to 2c and a few larger bulls, in pretty good condition, sold at 2½c to 2¾c per lb. The calves were a poor lot and sold at $3 to $5 each. Shipping sheep are 3½c and the others 2½c to 3½c per lb. Lambs sold at 3½c to 4½c per lb. Fat hogs sell at 4¾c to 5¼c per lb. Young pigs sell at $1.50 to $4.50 each.

EAST BUFFALO CATTLE MARKET.

East Buffalo, Sept. 29.—Cattle—Receipts 250 head; steady; prime steers, $5.15 to $5.30; shipping, $4.25 to $5; butchers, $2.60 to $5; bulls, $2 to $4.50; cows, $2.50 to $4; bulls, $2.25 to $4; stockers and feeders, $2.25 to $3.90.

Hogs—Receipts 5700 head; slow, 10c to 20c lower; heavy and mixed, $5.10 to $5.25; Yorkers, $5.15 to $5.20; pigs, $5.00 to $5.75; roughs, $3 to $3.25; stags, $4 to $4.50; dairies, $5.00 to $5; grassers, $5.00 to $5.90.

Sheep and Lambs—Receipts 6000 head; sheep steady; lambs slow, 10c lower; lambs $4.00 to $4.50, a few $4.75; yearlings, $4.00 to $4.75; wethers, $4.25 to $4.50; ewes, $4 to $4.25; mixed, $3 to $4.25.

CHEESE MARKETS.

Madoc, Sept. 29.—There were 885 boxes of cheese offered; 485 sold at 9⅝c; balance unsold.

Picton, Sept. 29.—Offerings to-day were 2264 cheese; 9⅝c was bid on the board, but no sales made.

Kingston, Sept. 29.—At the Frontenac Cheese Board meeting this afternoon, the attendance was small and only 570 boxes were boarded, 530 colored and 240 white; 50 were sold at 9⅝c. The other factories refused that offer.

From Over Study at School

This Girl Became Pale, Languid and Nervous -- Dr. Chase's Nerve Food Made Her Well.

MRS. R. WARREHAM, 267 Sherbrooke street, Peterborough, Ont., states:—

"One of my children suffered a great deal with nervous headaches, dizziness and sleeplessness, and in fact was all run down, pale and languid. These troubles we attributed to over study and confinement at school. She began using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and I can say that we have found this treatment exceedingly helpful. It has relieved her of headache, steadied her nerves, and built up her system wonderfully. We can see a great change in her, as the color is returning to her face and she is so many in flesh and weight."

Dr Chase's Nerve Food, 50 cents a box, six boxes for $2.50, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto. To protect you against imitations, the portrait and signature of Dr. A. W. Chase, the famous receipt book author, are on every box.

REVIEW OF THE MARKETS

The following review of today's market was received by Messrs. W. F. Dover & Co., 'phone 416:—

N. Y., Sept. 30.—Traders at opening were obviously influenced to reactionary tendency shown in places in yesterday's market, and tone was very quiet. Stocks were not all weak but volume of business was much smaller than recently. C & O. responded to advance in stock in London. It is said Phila ball pfnl is active buyer and stocks acted well in London. It is said there is still some considerable short interest. Purchase off Ice Pfd. said to have been for one of largest holders principally known for his close relations with DuPue people. There seems to be some quiet movement to distribute L. & N. and the quiet London market is being used for this purpose. Well informed people do not expect a difference in L. & N. div. at next declaration. In early trading in spite of some irregularity Metro Securities acted rather well. There is thought to be fairly active bull pool in it without political affiliations. By 12.15 steel 92¾ had regained its loss of yesterday and made a move high level selling 70 3-4. New York gas was active, touching 203.

Chicago market opened about as last night's close and acted rather weak till about 11.30, when a buying movement put it up to 113 for May wheat and 81 for May corn. Liverpool closed wheat 1-4 to 3-8 lower.

Lecturing on Hunter st.

The ranks of the medical men of the town have received an addition in Dr. G. E. Marshall, who is taking up [illegible] on Hunter st. Dr. Marshall was [illegible] for some time at Ilorn, and, and coming into Canada, took the course necessary to qualify him to practise in Ontario. He has been doing some professional work for the Government in the Temiscaming district as inspector in connection with the smallpox outbreak. Dr. Marshall is connected by marriage with North Monaghan people and taught school for several years at Bailliebora, while taking up the studies incidental to his practice, after passing through the Collegiate Institute here. HARRY LINDLEY'S WANDERINGS

Has Been Pretty Much All Over the Continent During the Year.

A Review reporter had a few minutes' interview this morning with Harry Lindley, the veteran actor and entertainer. Mr. Lindley looks as well as ever, in fact hasn't aged a bit since his visit here last fall. He is still the same jovial Harry, with a continual twinkle in his eye, and an occasional hearty laugh. Mr. Lindley has covered an immense amount of territory since his appearance here last season. He has travelled all through the Southern States, has played in Pennsylvania, Maryland, Virginia, and North and South Carolina. While travelling in the United States Mr. Lindley addressed the Southern Confederacy of which he is an old soldier, on Southern Memorial Day, May 14th. The Daughters of the Confederacy in Durham, North Carolina, presented him with a bouquet. It was at this place that Johnston surrendered, and as Mr. Lindley had been a captain in Johnston's division, the ladies wished to show him that the South had not forgotten his services for the Confederacy. Since his return to Canada in June, Mr. Lindley has played and managed the following parks in Ontario:—Hamilton, Nonna Park; Berlin Bridgeport Park; Brantford Agricultural Park; St. Thomas for the street railway, and King Edward Park Owen Sound. Mr. Lindley stated that he was going to see the Peterborough Radial Railway Co. about playing in the park which they purpose establishing at Clear Lake next summer. A good company playing there at nights would draw large crowds. In reference to last night's appearance Mr. Lindley said that there was an exceptionally good house and paid the rink the compliment of stating that it looked almost like a theatre. Tonight Mr. Lindley and company will play "The Circus Girl;" matinee tomorrow afternoon and Conan Doyle's "Banker's Crime" will be put on tomorrow night. On Monday night the farewell performance will be "The Refugee."

The marriage of Miss Mabel Louise Howe second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. D. Howe, to Mr. Orville B. Shortly, of Peterborough, took place on Wednesday afternoon at the house of the bride's parents, Charles street, the Rev. John Neil, D.D., officiating. The bride, who was given away by her father, wore a lovely gown of white Liberty silk, the yoke lattice-ed and caught with seed pearls, having a deep berthe of point lace, the panelled skirt, opening over an accordeon pleated chiffon petticoat, mounted on taffeta, the veil being held in place with a wreath of maidenhair fern. A pearl and diamond pin was worn and a beautiful shower bouquet of roses and marguerites carried. The matron of honor, Mrs. Will Fraser, sister of the bride, wore a pretty dress of pale green silk chiffon over silk of the same hue and a large white hat with plumes. Her bouquet was of pink roses and ferns. She also wore a gold and pearl pin, the gift of the bridegroom. Mr. Arthur G. Piper was best man. Immediately after the ceremony a reception was held, when a large number of friends gathered to congratulate the happy couple. The house was beautifully decorated with palms, ferns and roses. Six of the bride's intimate friends assisted in the tea-room, Miss Carrier, Miss Kinsey, Miss Haworth, Miss Millichamp, Miss Wheeler and Miss Wright, all looking charming in dainty light gowns. Late in the afternoon, amidst a shower of rice and good wishes, Mr. and Mrs. Shortly left for the West. The going-away dress was of dark green broadcloth, with pretty coat of military style, opening over a white satin blouse, hat of red chenille and tulle. They will return to Toronto for a few weeks before going to their future home in the East. —Toronto Star.

NEW CUSTOMS REGULATION

To-morrow, October 1st, is the day set on which the customs regulations affecting invoices on goods coming into Canada will come into effect. After to-morrow the Customs authorities will require duplicate invoices, and on such invoice will be added a column in which is to be entered the fair selling price in the country from which the articles are imported. This is part of the anti-dumping regulations.

On such invoices there is must be printed or written a certificate of the value of the goods contained in the consignment. The new form of certificate must be signed by the exporter or by a responsible agent, and is to the effect that the invoice is correct as to the price of goods, that the value placed on them is the fair market value if they were sold in like quantity or condition for home consumption, that no different invoices will be furnished to anyone, and that there is no arrangement allowing the purchaser any discount or rebate, or any compensation whatsoever.

SPORTING NEWS.

RUGBY.

"I have witnessed practices of nearly every senior O.R.F.U. team this season," said a commercial traveller last night, according to the Hamilton Herald, "and I can tell you that, from what line I have on them, it is a hard matter to select a winner. I have not seen the London team yet, but my belief is that the Peterborough team will win district No. 1. They are a husky bunch and have the speed. Three senior teams in Toronto is bound to weaken the other teams. It certainly looks like Hamilton and Peterborough for the championship final."

The Trinity College School team will play the Peterborough H. team here, a week from tomorrow. All candidates for the junior team are requested to turn out with the seniors next week.

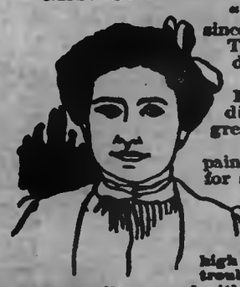
Miss Alice M. Smith, of Minneapolis, Minn., tells how woman's monthly suffering may be quickly and permanently relieved by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I have never before given my endorsement for any medicine, but Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has added so much to my life and happiness that I feel like making an exception in this case. For two years every month I would have two days of severe pain and could find no relief, but one day when visiting a friend I run across Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound,—she had used it with the best results and advised me to try it. I found that it worked wonders with me; I now experience no pain and only had to use a few bottles to bring about this wonderful change. I use it occasionally now when I am exceptionally tired or worn out."—MISS ALICE M. SMITH, 804 Third Ave., South Minneapolis, Minn., Chairman Executive Committee Minneapolis Study Club.

Beauty and strength in women vanish early in life because of monthly pain or some menstrual irregularity. Many suffer silently and see their best gifts fade away. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound helps women preserve roundness of form and freshness of face because it makes their entire female organism healthy. It carries women safely through the various natural crises and is the safeguard of woman's health.

The truth about this great medicine is told in the letters from women published in this paper constantly.

Mrs. C. Kleinschrodt, Morrison, Ill., says:—



"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I have suffered ever since I was thirteen years of age with my menses. They were irregular and very painful. I doctored a great deal but received no benefit.

"A friend advised me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, which I did, and after taking a few bottles of it, I found great relief.

"Menstruation is now regular and without pain. I am enjoying better health than I have for sometime."

How is it possible for us to make it plainer that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will positively help all sick women? All women are constituted alike, rich and poor, high and low,—all suffer from the same organic troubles. Surely, no one can wish to remain weak and sickly, discouraged with life and without hope for the future, when proof is so unmistakable that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will cure monthly suffering—all womb and ovarian troubles, and all the ills peculiar to women.

$5000 FORFEIT if we cannot forthwith produce the original letters and signatures of above testimonials, which will prove their absolute genuineness. Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass.

A Progress Number.

While the regular features are not neglected the October Magazine is a Progress Number. A perusal of the articles specially bearing upon the great advances made by Canada in recent years will rekindle enthusiasm in the breast of every patriotic reader. The facts are obtained upon the records of the thirty-seven years since Confederation, with special reference to the growth during the census period 1891-1901. As the census volumes are not yet issued this is the first broad view of its results which has yet been given to the public. Belle Oasis, the Norwegian colony in British Columbia, is taken as typical of the western settlements and its history will be found most interesting. "The Progress of Higher Education for Women," by Hilda D. Oakeley, B.A., [illegible] Mr. Stanley Bleo estimates the profits made by farmers with those made by the manufacturers, while A. L. McCrae discusses the earning power of the farmer with those of the fisherman.

Among the general features of the issue are Mr. Bradley's beautiful description of "The Death of Wolfe"; Mr. Wicher's illuminating picture of Japanese social and religious life; Mr. Ewan's illustrated summary of Current Events Abroad; and short stories by Guy de Maupassant, William Hathaway and Elsie Day. The coloured folding map and the coloured frontispiece add much to the value of this 148th issue of The Canadian Magazine.
